It is understood President Ebert before inviting Dr. Albert to form a ministry, consulted the General as to whether the former Minister of the Treasury in the Cuno Cabinet would be acceptable.

Dr. Albert, prior to the entry of the United States into the war, was German fiscal agent there.

It is understood he had agreed to accept the Chancellorship only on condition that he shall have a mandate enabling him to dissolve the Reichstag at any time.

If he should resort to this extreme Dr. Albert would nominally remain head of the Government, but actually th real power would revert to the military ordinances and Von Seetes.

The press is lukewarm in its greeting to the proposed Chancellor.

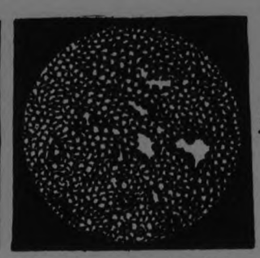
Why Electricity Kills and How to Avoid Shocks

ACCIDENTS resulting from the use of man-made electricity claim twice as many victims in the United States each year as do all the lightning bolts that flash from the sky. Latest available reports show that electric light and power circuits cause nearly one-seventieth of all accidental deaths. In every house lighting circuit, in high tension power wires, possible death or injury lurks unseen.

How these accidents may be avoided by a few simple precautions in the home and workshop is revealed by the newest scientific discoveries about the effect of electricity on the human body, which George M. Ogle, associate member, American Institute of Electrical Engineers, describes in Popular Science Monthly.

Typical Blood Corpuscles of a Normal Person.



How Blood Corpuscles Disintegrate After Electrocution.

Danger! When Turning Electric Lights On or Off Keep the Hands Free of Contact with Any Metal.

"Recent researches," says Mr. Ogle, "have proved that the amount of electricity flowing through a 100-watt light bulb commonly used in the home is enough to kill a person—if it passes through the brain or other vital organs of the body. Yet I have known men to come into contact with tens of thousands of volts, under certain conditions, without suffering bodily injury.

"In the past the popular belief has been that electric shocks are due entirely to voltage. Yet science now tells us that while the voltage of an electric circuit may be a contributing cause of death, it is only one of three important factors that determine the hazard of any circuit. They are these:

Always Use Only One Hand When Switching Electric Lights On or Off.

"The pressure of the circuit in contact with the body. This is voltage.

"The quantity of electricity flowing in the circuit, measured in amperes.

"The resistance offered by the body to the flow of electricity under pressure, measured by ohms.

"Our greatest protection in resisting the pressure of electric currents is our skin. It serves as a protective armor, highly resistive, to guard us from the deadly flow. We might compare our skin, in its resistance to electric current, with a heavy piece of cardboard placed over the nozzle of a hose. If the pressure in the hose is comparatively low, the cardboard will hold back the flow of water for a long time before it breaks down. But if the pressure is increased, the water will burst through the cardboard quickly.

"Similarly the resistance of our skin to the flow of electricity in a circuit varies with the amount of electrical pressure, or voltage, applied. When the skin is dry, it is a highly resistant insulator. But if it is wet, the current will seep through quickly. Then the blood and muscular tissues, which in the average healthy person contain non-resisting animal salts and liquids, offer excellent paths for the flow of heavy currents even under medium voltages. In fact, if the skin were severely cut in such a way as to offer direct electrical contact with the main blood arteries, the extremely low voltage of 50 would cause death.

"Often, during electrical experiments, men have been heard to brag of their ability to withstand the tortures of an electrical shock from a low voltage circuit far better than their women associates. As a matter of fact the woman receives the greater punishment. This is because the resistance of the average woman's body is considerably less than that of man's. Her hands rarely are calloused; her skin is softer and her general physical condition is more delicate than man's. Any stipulated voltage sends a greater quantity of current through her body.

"The resistance of any person varies from time to time, depending on conditions of blood and skin, as well as the amount of moisture or perspiration. A man whose body is thoroughly dry can stand a higher voltage than he could on a hot day when wet with perspiration.

"When a person is subjected to an electrical current under 2,000 volts with good contacts the feeling is as if the body was struck by a tremendously powerful blow at all points. In the fraction of a second he is knocked unconscious. The muscles contract and the limbs and features become contorted. If the current is applied for any length of time, the body burns at the points of contact.

"At such a voltage the average human body would receive about 10 amperes of current, which, if converted into mechanical power, would be enough to light 800 lamps in the average home!

"High powered circuits of 33,000 volts and more will cremate the body beyond recognition within a fraction of a second. Yet, strange to say, there have been cases where the victim, subjected to currents great enough to burn off his limbs, has regained consciousness and survived.

"Reports of persons being killed by an ordinary 110-volt lighting circuit are numerous. Investigation of most of these cases, however, reveals that death was due to a defect in the wiring, permitting a high voltage current to enter into the supposed 110-volt household circuit, or that the victim died from some physical defect aggravated by the electrical shock."

The house circuit usually is protected by numerous electrical devices to prevent high tension circuits from entering the home in the event of an electrical breakdown between high and low voltage circuits. Yet there have been cases where these devices have failed. Mr. Ogle outlines the following safety rules which can be practised easily in any home:

1. Use only one hand (preferably the right hand) in switching electric lights on or off. Keep the other hand free from any metallic contact that may form a return or ground circuit.
2. Never switch an electric light with one hand while the other hand is in the water or on the faucet of a kitchen sink or washstand.
3. Never operate an electric light while standing in a bathtub or shower bath.
4. Always be sure that the body and hands are dry when operating electrical devices.
5. Never tamper with electrical circuits with which you are not entirely familiar.

Observance of these rules may save your life.

Studying the Human "Aura"

OCCULTISTS, spiritualists and near scientists have been talking for many years about the human "aura," a subtle, vaporous streaming or exhalation which was supposed to emanate from a living body or living substance. This was thought to be connected in some way with the spiritual, ethereal component of the personal entity and to float mysteriously away from the body at the instant of death. It has long been the custom for artists to portray angels, saints and other beings with a halo or luminous circle about the head, in keeping with the aural idea. Scientists and other practical men have generally scoffed at the aura as a mere figment of the imagination or as the result of charlatan tricks. But men of science now admit that the living body is surrounded by an atmosphere peculiar to itself—an envelope of luminous exhalation—just as some of them have been convinced that there is really something in spiritualism. Careful investigation with specially designed apparatus has proved the existence of the aura beyond doubt. Writing on the subject in the Scientific American, A. A. Hopkins says, in substance:

As is well known our planet carries with it a comparatively thin skin of air or atmosphere. Every person is enveloped in a somewhat similar atmosphere. Though invisible under ordinary circumstances, this haze can be seen by special scientific means. Persons gifted with a special kind of sight are able to see this peculiar emanation and for that reason are called clairvoyants. The aura is a genuine scientific phenomenon and in no sense a by-product of occultism or charlatanism. It has been carefully tested by scientists of unblemished reputation. Just what the aura consists of is not yet known, but it is believed to be an ultra-violet phenomenon. Some women have the power of changing the color of their auras at will; no one of the opposite sex is known to possess this power. Evidently the rays do not belong to the ordinary visible solar spectrum, but to a higher spectrum having shorter wave lengths. The aura can be influenced by external forces such as electricity and chemical action.

Photography has been of little practical use in studying the phenomenon, but it is possible that a way will be found to make it of assistance. The aura must be viewed through a color screen made of an alcoholic solution of dicyanin, a rare coal-tar dye. A cell containing this liquid, is held to the observer's eye, a focusing cloth being used to cut out the extraneous light. The subject under observation is placed inside a black-lined box or closet, illuminated by subdued daylight or artificial light. Observations of the hands do very well for the experimental purposes, but the aura of the entire body is of course more spectacular. Almost immediately streaks may be detected proceeding from the fingers of one hand to those of the other with a haze in the interval between the two hands. Then a similar, though less distinct, mist may be seen surrounding the bared arm. A good many persons after gazing through the dark dicyanin screen at the light are able to perceive the aura as described above, but some are unable to detect it without the aid of the pale dicyanin screen.

The subject should be in good health and, if possible, robust, because the aura always becomes less distinct in illness. It varies in clearness from day to day even in good health. The aura is seen as a faint mist enveloping the body. It varies according to age, sex and individual peculiarities. No two persons have identical auras. In some it is fine in texture, in others coarse. In color it is generally some shade of blue mixed more or less with gray.

An aura showing a decided color such as yellow does not necessarily become green when viewed through a blue screen, as one would suppose, but it may appear as purple or some other color, showing that colors of the aura probably belong to another and higher spectrum than that which we ordinarily perceive. Sometimes two colors will appear to the observer combined, such as blue and yellow. They appear not as green nor as separate patches of blue and yellow, but the color sensation is delivered to the brain simultaneously as blue and yellow.

AMAZING Athletic ACTS of ANIMALS

IF you were asked to name the swiftest animal, you might answer the hare, or possibly the greyhound. A first-class greyhound can travel for a short distance at thirty-five miles an hour, a speed about four miles an hour faster than that of a hare.

The greyhound, racehorse, prong-horned antelope, hare, Texan jack rabbit, common fox, and coyote are classified as the speediest of animals by a writer in London Tit-Bits. Next come the foxhound and the grey wolf.

The speeds of all the animals mentioned have been measured by counting the number of bounds in a given space of time by means of a stop watch; then—preferably on a snow-clad surface—measuring the length of each bound.

A man can do no better than twenty-one and one half miles an hour, and that only in a hundred yards sprint. His best speed for a mile is but fourteen miles an hour.

None of the animals mentioned can keep up the recorded speeds for any considerable length of time, but in this respect the fox and the wolf can beat either the greyhound or the racehorse. As a rule, wild animals have greater powers of endurance than domesticated creatures. The grey wolf, for instance, has been known to run over a hundred miles in a night, a feat which would be beyond the power of any horse.

Incidentally, here is a very interesting point. The domesticated horse is swifter than the wild variety, and even when carrying a rider a good horse can run down a mustang.

The racehorse is even more a man-made production. Glance through the Derby records, since times were first taken, and you will see that they are constantly improving.

Still more remarkable is the improvement in the pace of the trotter. In an American paper of 1806 appeared the following: "Yesterday afternoon the Haerlem racecourse of one mile's distance was trotted in two minutes and fifty-nine seconds by a horse called Yankey, a rate of speed, it is believed, never before excelled."

Within less than a century Lou Dillon had trotted a mile under two minutes, or at a speed nearly a third faster than that of Yankey.

When we come to endurance records some of the speediest animals are nowhere. If you had to pick an animal to carry you for five hundred miles at the greatest possible speed across rough country, what would you choose? It should be a dromedary. A blood horse might travel sixty miles at a speed of fourteen miles an hour, but at the end of that distance it would be absolutely played out and in urgent need of food and rest.

The dromedary, if really pressed, will cover eighty miles in five hours, and will keep going twelve to fourteen hours out of the twenty-four for a week on end on a diet upon which a horse would starve.

Even that ponderous beast, the elephant, can last far better than a horse. Eight miles an hour is his pace on a long day's journey, but he will keep that up for ten hours on end, and do it day after day.

Turn to jumping. A man can clear a height of just over six feet, and a horse nearly half as much again, but a red deer has been known to clear a twelve-foot fence. The chamois and the African springbok can equal the latter record, and so can a kangaroo.

How HAY FEVER Got Its NAME

IT was an Englishman, Dr. John Bostock, who, after suffering from "heat in the eyes, with itching and smarting, followed by violent sneezing, tightness of the chest, difficulty in breathing, languor and loss of appetite every Summer" for thirty-eight years, wrote a paper describing his annual torment, and because of its seasonal occurrence he called the affection hay fever. This was in 1819, but since that time it has been learned that a similar annual visitation may come to different people at different periods of the Summer, to some early, to some late, but not in all cases does it coincide with haying. But the name has been popularized, and will probably remain.

Dr. Bostock had an idea that his sufferings, recurring at about the same time each year, and always in the haying season, were engendered by the smell of new-mown hay. This opinion he held until, on the occasion of a visit to Ramsgate, he had an attack of the fever—without the help of any hay. This drove him to the new belief that his sufferings were due to excessive Summer heat.

Meanwhile hundreds of thousands of unhappy mortals went on sneezing regularly during a long period every Summer for fifty-four years without knowing why they did it. Those who survived in 1873, however, might have enlightened themselves had they read Dr. Charles H. Blackley's paper on "Experimental Researches on the Causes and Nature of Catarrhus Æstivus," which attributed their annual complaint to the inhalation of the pollen of certain plants. But "certain plants" was too wide a term to satisfy the medical profession, and there started a controversy between different schools of belief, one holding the view that all plants gave off the poisonous pollen, whilst other schools were more particular in their accusations.

In the course of researches relating to this controversy, Dr. Blackley demonstrated the remarkable fact (that will surely be comforting to all hay fever sufferers who are not airplane frequenters) that there is nineteen times as much pollen in the upper strata of the air as near the ground. At that time the hay fever season was usually regarded as commencing in the early days of June and lasting until the end of July, this period covering the appearance of the pollen in the air to its disappearance.

This seems to have satisfied England, but not the United States, where out-of-season sneezing was common. To cope with this it was announced that it harbored sufferers from autumnal or fall fever, attributable to the pollen of the golden rod, which starts its annual frightfulness in September. After the trouble has lasted for some time a troublesome cough or, what is worse, asthma may follow.

Why the RADIO Is BEST at NIGHT

EXPERIMENTS with radio reveal that the transmitting wave is about eighteen times as great in the middle of the night as it is in the daytime. This difference, however, lessens in the Summer, when the night are shorter. It appears to be due to the fact that obstacles resulting in absorption are fewer by night than by day.

Measurements of the energy of radio transmission between Rocky Point, Long Island, and London bring out some interesting facts which are reported by Ralph Brown to the National Academy of Science and printed in its Transactions (Baltimore).

"When daylight covers the entire transmission path from Rocky Point to London the field is uniformly low," says Mr. Brown, "but during the night it rises to considerably higher values. At night the field is relatively steady and free from fluctuations of the kind ordinarily known as 'fading,' but the general shape of the curve may change from night to night as is indicated by the dissimilarity between the two dark periods shown.

"The outstanding thing shown is that the high night values are practically as steady as the day values and have no greater percentage variation from the average. The improved night transmission is a definite recurring phenomenon which may not properly be called a freak transmission effect.

"In accordance with the usual theory of radio transmission the decrease in strength of the electric waves, as they pass outward to the distant receiving station, is caused by the spreading of their energy over a larger and larger circle of wave front and by losses due to the electrical imperfections of the media traversed.

"One characteristic of these Winter-time data is worthy of note. The average night values are eighteen times as large as the average day values and rise about half-way up to the field which would be obtained if there were no absorption loss in the transmission media, yet, not even the maximum recorded field shows any tendency to exceed the theoretical value for transmission without absorption loss. This evidence falls easily into line with the theory that good night transmission is simply due to a diminution of the absorption losses.

"During the last days of February a radical change occurred in the nature of the night transmission phenomena. The reason for the suddenness of the shift is unknown, but a decrease in the night field is consistent with the fact that the period of darkness over the entire transmission path is only about six hours on April 1, as against ten and one-half hours on January 1.

"Of the ten-hour Winter night, six hours are spent in rising to and falling from the high values, which are steadily maintained only during a four-hour period. When the time of darkness over the entire path decreases to six hours or less the peak might be expected to be wiped out."

Weathering Tests for Building Stone

WEATHERING tests, consisting of freezing and thawing of the specimens until disintegration occurs, have been made at the Bureau of Standards on 22 samples of limestone and 23 of sandstone. Some of the best limestones have withstood 800 freezings without showing any appreciable amount of decay, while the poorer grades of this material were disintegrated by 100 freezings. Tests on the sandstones only recently were started, and so far the samples have shown no great amount of decay.

A number of limestone and sandstone specimens are also being tested by soaking in a 15 per cent solution of sodium chloride and drying afterwards to obtain a crystallization of the salt in the pores of the stone. This produces an action similiar to that of frost but more severe. It has been found that limestones which stood up under several hundred of the freezings were disintegrated by less than 100 crystallizations in the salt test. However, the actual disintegration seems to be similiar to that produced by the action of frost, and hence it is believed that there is a possibility of using this method as an accelerated weathering test.

How the EGYPTIANS Raised OBELISKS

THE method used by the ancient Egyptians to raise their huge obelisks into place, often in a court shorter than the obelisk itself, has long been a subject for conjecture and speculation. Many ideas have been advanced, but the fact remains that no one really knows just how the feat was accomplished. The latest theory, offered by R. Engelbach, England's chief inspector of antiquities in upper Egypt, and published by the Illustrated London News, holds that the great stones were lowered into place.

He says the ingenious Egyptians dug a funnel-shaped sand pit in a sloping ramp over the spot where they wanted the obelisk to stand. With men, runners and rollers they laboriously hauled the obelisk in its entity up the gradual slope of the ramp until its base lay over the sand-pit. Then the sand was gradually washed out through channels below and as its support sank the stone monument gradually lowered to a vertical position. This seems to be the most plausible idea that has yet been offered. It is based on references in Egyptian papyrito a sloping embankment (ramp) 400 yards long by 85 yards wide and the use of sand in making it; also to the known use of levers and rollers, ropes and the employment of thousands of slaves. One obelisk is over 100 feet high, is nine feet square at the base and weighs 450 tons. One, never raised, is 133 feet long and 14 feet wide and weighs 1,168 tons.

Why Englishmen Are Called "Beefeaters"

HOW the term "beefeater" came to be applied to the average Englishman is explained as follows by a writer in Pearson's Weekly (London):

The "beefeaters" are really the yeomen of the guard. This corps, founded in 1485, is the oldest military body in England. It was established as the king's actual bodyguard, and its real fighting days ended centuries ago, the duties now being purely ceremonial.

Every member is an ex-soldier or marine, chosen for distinguished conduct. The corps has a permanent orderly room at St. James's Palace, where the duty men muster once a week or fortnight (according to the season), and don the ancient uniforms for such State functions as they may be required to attend. Beyond this, the members live at home.

The name "beefeaters" is usually, though wrongly, traced to "buffetiers," those who waited at the king's buffet or sideboard. "Beefeaters" means exactly what it says, a foreign potentate some centuries ago being so struck with the stature of the corps as to have concluded that they must be "great eaters of beef"—the traditional dish on which all foreigners thought that the English lived entirely.

The average Englishman very seldom sees a yeoman of the guard, or real "beefeater," so the name has become applied by mistake to the wardens of the Tower of London, who are naturally much more before the public and who wear practically the same ancient uniform.

How Wearing of Clothes Affects the Body

UNDOUBTEDLY fashions in dress do affect the development of the human bodies, though, of course, very slowly. The wearing, for instance, as a physician points out, of a tightly fitting hard hat that admits no air may result in the wearer going bald, but if successive generations persist in the habit a general baldness must follow the fashion.

So, too, high and tight collars will in time arrest the full development of the neck, while an exaggerated fashion in extremely narrow or high-heeled shoes in time actually alters the shape of the foot, besides changing the carriage of the body.

Though medical opinion is still divided on the question of corsets for women, there can be no doubt that the tight lacing of the past was injurious in the extreme to the physique of our grandmothers.

Queen's Defeat Tigers 13-5: De Laval Win Mercantile Section of Softball League

TIGERS GAVE QUEEN'S STRENUOUS BATTLE IN EASTERN CANADA FINAL

First Enemy Across the Tricolor Goal Line This Season—Big Four Winners Had Driving Power But the Back Division Weaker.

SCORE WAS 13-5.

KINGSTON, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press)—Queen's won the Eastern Canada championship Saturday afternoon when they defeated Hamilton Tigers by score of 13 to 5, in one of the greatest football struggles ever seen in Kingston. It was in the last two quarters that the tricolor showed their superiority and tore into the Tigers with a vengeance. In the last quarter kicking with the wind and at every opportunity they kicked high and far scoring five points in the final quarter.

Tigers surprised the local fans when they tore into Queen's line for gains. On one occassion they gained yards twice in succession and their work in the first half was scintillating. Queen's, however, came back strong and showed the punch which they had displayed all season. "Red" Batstone was was perhaps the mast effective man on the field. His tricky running and line plunging was never better and he was ably supported by "Pep" Leadley, who played a sensational game.

Red McKelvey despite his injured foot played through the greater pas of the game and did great work, while Thomas and Walker gave a marvellous exhibition of tackling on the outside wings. Capt. Tucker was about the best of the Tigers, while Gibb on the half line who did practically all the kicking was good but his wings failed to get down under the catches in time to stop the tricolor.

Batstone's Great Run.

Tigers ripped Queen's line from the very outset and looked dangerous until Batstone electrified the crowd with a great run through the centre for forty yards. Gaining Tigers 45 yard line Leadley punted to Evans who snapped the ball to Crocker but the latter tried to return and his kick was blocked, the ball rolled over the line and Walker scored a try which Leadley converted. This was the only score of the quarter though Tigers made two gains through the line and looked dangerous. In the second quarter Tigers showed their greatest. They broke through for several gains and had possession on Queen's two yard line. It was thought that the Bengals were called upon for their greatest effort and they did not fail, Tuck going over for a try, the first man against Queen's this year. Manson made a very poor attempt to convert, leaving the score, Queen's 6, Tigers 5. A minute later, however, Leadley made ten yards on an end run and kicked to Evans who was forced to rouge. Queen's continued their line plunging and Leadley's attempted field goal went for one point. The score at half time, Queen's 8, Tigers 5.

Tiger Wings Slow.

The third quarter was a might struggle, with both teams alternating in smashing through for gains. Tigers kicked on the first down several times but their wings were rather slow and Queen's got out of danger every time. There was no score in this quarter. In the last quarter Queen's superiority showed itself. Queen's gained Tigers 20 yard line and Leadleytried a field goal but again he failed and one point resulted. A few minutes later Leadley marked his catch and on the free kick which he got from forty yards out sent the ball to the dead line. Queen's were vastly superior and an instant later Leadley again kicked to the dead luine making the score 11 to 5.

After an exchange of punts, he scored another point and Batstone landed the final tally when he sent the ball to the dead line. The game was a strenous one and several times Batstone was tackled around the neck but he stayed through the entire game. The work of the officials, Joe O'Brien of Montreal and Ben Simpson of Hamilton was criticized. They apparently let plenty of rough stuff go by on both sides.

Ottawa Rideaus Win Junior Quebec Title.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press)—Ottawa Rideaus lost the second game in the home and home series with Westmount for the junior O.R.F.U. title being defeated on Saturday 4 to 3, but by a previous score of 9 to 4 in their favor on account of the game at Ottawa last week, they win the series by an aggregate score of 12 to 8.

A few flashes of really good football were seen in the game at the M.A.A.A. grounds, but the general condition of the field and prevalent weather were not conducive to good plunging, fast runs, or perfect handling of the ball. Under the circumstances the kicking and catching could not have been improved on. Both teams played aggressively throughout and were evenly matched. Westmount got near their opponents' line on several occasions, but failed to achieve more than a few rouges, owing to the Ottawa backs grabbing several on-side kicks and successfully running them and other punts out from behind their line.

TEN RUNS DOWN DE LAVAL MAKE A GREAT FINISH

Won Mercantile Group Honors By Defeating Teachers in Slashing Finish—Score 14-13.

MEET CLUB WINNERS.

In their game with the Teachers Saturday afternoon the De Laval came from behind and won by the close score of 14 to 13, thereby winning the Mercantile section of the Soft Ball League and gaining the right to meet the winners of the Club section. The L.O.L. 50 and the Belmonts are now tied for first place in the club section, but the Belmonts have only one more game to play with the Rotary on Monday evening. If the Rotary win this game, the L. O.L. will be the club section winners and will meet the De Laval for the city championship, but if the Belmonts win there will be a playoff between the Belmonts and the L. O.L. The winners will then meet the De Laval.

On Saturday afternoon the following teams clashed: The Brass and the Porcelain, Lock Works and Quakers, Teachers and De Laval.

Pacey twirled a good game for the Brass and his team mates were also in tip-form form. They defeated the Porcelain after seven innings of play by the score of 12 to 5. Nicholls pitched a good game for the losers, but his team mates fell down badly behind him. The feature of the game was a double play from Mahood to Ahern. The teams lined up as follows:

Brass—Bennett c, Pacey p, Williams 1b, O'Toole s.s., Ahern 2b, Battley s.s., Mahood 3b, Sanderson r.f.; Robinson l.f.

Porcelain—O'Dette 3b, Elliott l.f., Murphy 1b, F. Dyer r.f., Richmond s.s., Hunter s.s., McKim 2b, R. Dyer c, Poquette ss., Nicholls p.

Score by innings:

Porcelain	..	..	..	..	..	2	2	0	0	0 1— 5

Quakers Came Through.

In the second game the Lock Works and the Quakers clashed in a battle royal, the latter winning by the close score of 1 to 11 after six snappy innings. The features of the games was the three circuit clouts made. Two due to Kearnes and one to Turner, both of the Quaker team. A very snappy double play was also made by McDougal and Black. The Quakers were in the lead throughout the game but the Lock Works were always close on their heels. Thorndyke pitched a good game for the losers, while Carruthers also pitched a good game for the Quakers. The teams lined up as follows:

Lock Works—McDougal s.s. and l.f., Nicholls 3b, Thorndyke p, Taylor c, Black 1b, J. Cononrs ss., G. Cononrs 2b, Westbrook l.f. and s.s., Guerin rf.

Quakers—Kearns s.s., Graham r.f., Meyette 2b., Collins 3b, Turner c, Carruthers p, O'Brien s.s., Cunningham 1b, Burton l.f.

Score by innings:

Lock Works	..	..	..	..	..	0	2	1	0	4—11
Quakers	..	..	..	..	..	2	2	3	0	5—13

Umpires — McMartin, Kay and LeBarr.

A Garrison Finish.

In the third game, the Teachers and the De Laval put on one of the closest and most exciting games played in the Armouries this year. The De Laval winning out by the score of 14 to 13. At the end of the third innings the Teachers were leading by the score of 12 to 2, but the De Laval scored two in the fourth, three in the fifth, six in the sixth and one in the eighth, to the Teachers' one in the seventh, thereby winning the game by one run. Frick started on the mound for the De Laval, but was relieved by Perks, after the third innings, who pitched the rest of the game in first class style, allowing the Teachers one run in six innings. In the earlier part of the game when Frick was on the mound his team mates let everything go through that came to them. After the third innings, with a few changes in the lineup they settled down and played a wonderful game. The Teachers played first class ball in the earlier stages of the game, but blew up in the latter. The feature of the game was a sensational catch by Kennedy. The teams lined up as follows:

Teachers—Langford c, Deyell p, Park s.s., Dearborn 2b, Bol.on 3b, Steer s.s., Stacey 1b, Kerr l.f., Frost r.f.

De Laval—Ward 3b and 1b, Kennedy lf., Frick p. and 1b., Perks 3b and p. Fowler 2b, McIntyre r.f. and s.s., Marchen c, Bell s.s., Bullied r.f. and s.s.

Score by innings:

Teachers	..	..	..	..	..	2	7	3	0	0—13
De Laval	..	..	..	..	..	0	1	1	2	3 0—14

Umpires— Kay, LeBarr and McMartin.

Another For Quakers.

In the evening the Quakers and Engineers played a rather one-sided fixture, the former winning by the score of 9 to 3 after nine innings of play. Carruthers twirled a first class game, while Langley was also very good. The Quakers were in the lead throughout the game, scoring one in the fourth, two in the fifth and sixth and one in the seventh and there in the eighth. The Engineers scored one in the eighth and two in the ninth. The teams line up as follows:

Quakers — Kearnes s.s., Graahm s.s., Meyette 2b., Collins 3b., Turner c, Carruthers p, Hill r.f., Cunningham 1b, Burton l.f.

Big Task Ahead For Frank Chance

PEERLESS LEADER WILL HAVE TO STEP FAST TO LIVE UP TO TITLE

By BILLY EVANS.

Is Frank Chance a great manager?

Did he deserve the title of "peerless leader," conferred on him when he was making baseball history with the famous Chicago Cubs?

Will he make the Chicago White Sox a factor in the American League race?

These and scores of other similar questions have been hurled at me since the announcement was made that Frank Chance was to succeed Kid Gleason as manager of the Chicago White Sox.

Before going further into the questionnaire of Frank Chance, I want to say that I keenly regret the passing of Kid Gleason from the ranks of the American League.

Kid Gleason was a most capable leader. Until this year he did mighty well with the White Sox. The failure of the Sox this year was just one of those things that happen every now and then in baseball. The Sox are not a seventh place ball club. That is where the team finished in 1923, but the fault was not Gleason's.

Manager Must Have Help.

Frank Chance is a great manager, but a great manager alone cannot win ball games. The manager can direct the play, but the men on the field must put into execution his plan of battle.

John McGraw was a "master mind" in 1921 and 1922 when the Giants ran rough-shod over the Yankees in the world series. McGraw was pictured as directing every ball pitched. Perhaps he did. His judgment was excellent and the pitchers on his staff were able to carry out his orders perfectly.

This year McGraw did just as much thinking and just as much directing, but his pitching staff failed to respond. The master mind collapsed when the pitching slumped.

Went Big With Cubs.

Chance certainly did deserve the title of "peerless leader" when he led the Chicago Cubs to three National League pennants and two world series. He had a great team and got every ounce of strength out of his combination. Chance deserved the title. His team helped him earn it.

In the White Sox, Chance gets a pretty fair ball club—much better than a seventh place aggregation. It's a certainty that his club will finish several notches better than that next year. It may not win a pennant, but it's going to make considerable trouble.

Strong for Discipline.

The policy of Chance differs much from that of Gleason. Chance is a strict disciplinarian. He insists that every man keep in condition and give his best efforts. Woe to the player who fails.

To the player who adheres to Chance's policy there is no need for worry. Chance wants every player to do his best. That satisfies him regardless of how many errors a player may make. Physical errors are always overlooked by Chance, but mental slips never. Dumb baseball is Chance's pet peeve.

Yes, sir!, Frank Chance and the Chicago White Sox will be troublesome in 1924.

To my way of thinking, Chance was far from a failure in 1923. With an ordinary ball club he managed to win better than 60 games, a feat rarely accomplished by a tailend ball club.

SENATORS WON FROM CAPITALS

But Regina Team Take the Round From Ottawa By 6-4 at Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 25.— Ottawa Senators won an exciting hockey game from the Regina Capitals here Saturday night 2 to 1, but Regina goes into the final against Edmonton Monday night through their 5 to 2 victory last Monday as they won the round six to four.

The teams fought for two periods without a score and it was not until five minutes had been played in the final session that Broadbent took a pass from Nighbor and beat the Regina goalie with a bullet-like drive from the side for the first tally of the game. The Sentaors fought hard and a neat play between Deneny and Darragh resulted in another clean tally for the easterners and they only needed one more goal to tie up. But Regina, which had been playing more of a defensive game, started an attack and on the prettiest play of the night a three-man rush between Irvin, Gagne and Stanley, the latter scored a beautiful goal and made victory in the series sure for Regina.

Both teams travelled at a high speed all night, but the westerners relied pretty well on a defensive style of game with nearly always three men back and seldom more than two rushing at once. But even at that the Capitals had an advantage in the first two periods and kept Ottawa shooting from long range all the time. Ottawa showed best in the final period.

It was the roughest hockey seen here for some time, with both teams using the body and the wood rather severely but Referee Gardner was rather lenient and made few penalties.

The game was played under eastern rules.

CURLING CLUB READY FOR THE NEW SEASON

The curling prospects for this year are good and if the weather keeps cold it will not be long before Angus McIntosh will have a keen sheet of ice ready for the curlers. All the old members and any new prospects that they have, are asked to have their applications as soon as possible and not later than the 1st of December. The way things are now it looks as if the club will get an early start. Other years they generally get started around Christmas, but this year they expect to be started before that time. On account of Mr. Felix Brownscombe resigining the secretaryship, the club has appointed Mr. Jack Mayneurd to that position.

YALE VICTORY OVER HARVARD

Army and Navy Played a Scoreless Tie at Polo Ground—Fields Muddy.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press)—There was rejoicing yesterday wherever sons of Yale were gathered, over Yale's 13 to 0 triumph over Harvard on Saturday afternoon.

That victory marked Yale's first win over the Crimson in five years; it developed the first Yale touchdown scored in the Harvard stadium in 16 years, and it won for Yale a place as a leader of eastern college football for the season of 1923. tests in 1917 or 1918, making it seven years since Yale has had a victory over Harvard to rejoice over."

Cornell and West Virginia share with Yale the distinction of being undefeated.

Mud proved the all-important factor in the Yale triumph. It coated the Harvard Stadium field and covered the ball, and by so doing caused Harvard to commit more errors in Saturday's contest than Harvard has committed in its long football history. Yale turned three of these errors into points, scoring a touchdown on a recovered fumble; a field goal on another recovered fumble, and another field goal on a recovered blocked punt.

Similiar conditions to those at the Harvard Stadium prevailed at the Polo Grounds, where the Army and Navy staged their annual battle, and on other eastern gridirons, and with few exceptions "breaks" were the chief factors in producing scores.

No more bitterly fought game has featured Army-Navy history than that in which the service elevens engaged on Saturday. Up and down the field the battle waged with first one team and then the other showing to a slight advantage, but neither able to turn such fleeting favor into points. Each attempted a field goal and such attempts proved the only serious threats to score.

THIEVES RETURN SOUVENIRS

Mail Back Mementoes of Son Killed in War to British Prosecutor.

LONDON, Nov. 26. — Burglars four days ago broke into the home of Travers Humphreys, senior crown counsel of the Criminal Court and took jewelry valued at £300 sterling (about $1,320), including a locket, a miniature and a regimental brooch belonging to Richard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys, who was killed in the war.

Mrs. Humphreys received to-day the keepsakes of her son by parcel post, with a letter from the burglars saying: "On learning from the papers that they were associated with the memory of a dead hero, we feel it our duty to return them."

FOOTBALL'S BIGGEST THRILLS

By BART MACOMBER,
Former Illinois Star.

Running the length of the field for a touchdown is not an uncommon play in football. Such runs can happen on the kickoff on the recovery of a fumble. The greatest play I ever saw was a run for the length of the field on a kickoff.

The play was made in 1914 at Illinois in the "homecoming game" with Chicago. For this game, Illinois grade flock back annually, and for an Illinois player to turn the trick on such an occasion made the feat all the more memorable.

"Potsy" Clark, pronounced by Coach Bob Zuppke as the greatest all-round backfield star ever turned out at Illinois, was the hero of the occasion.

Clark caught "Shorty" Des Jardiens' kickoff under his own goalpost and ran straight to the Chicago goalposts for a touchdown. He had only to dodge one Chicago man and this was easily accomplished, as Clark was a beautiful open-field runner.

This play has been done before, but usually the man carrying the ball has to dodge many opponents and run from one side of the field to the other in order to run the length of the field.

The greatness of this play, aside from Clark's part in it, was the magnificent interference given the runner. As Clark caught the ball, every Illinois man came to the centre and took out a man. In other words, they opened a hole for the runner—a difficult thing to do on the kickoff—enabling Clark to run straight down the field.

BARS YOUTHFUL ACTRESSES.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

There are those who claim that in order to get men to turn from sin to righteousness it is necessary to preach Satan's lie, "Thou shalt not surely die," and the other lie "endless torment." The Scriptures state that "the goodness of God leads men to repentance.' History and observation go to prove the falsity of doing evil that good may come. It is not surprising that error (either through ignorance or mentally and morally is imperfect. Notwithstanding imperfection and non-helpful environment, there are those who in honest endeavor have walked out into light and received the truth, and by yielding up themselves to the guidance of the Holy Spirit, have received an assurance Divine, and like their Master can speak with authority. — M. T. Butcher.

A meeting of teachers and leaders of 'teen age girls' groups in Sunday Schools was held at the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon to meet Miss May Gemmell, girls' work secretary of the Presbyterian Board. Miss Gemmell is well known in Peterborough by girls and leaders and her help is always much appreciated by every denomination. The groups in the city now carrying on the C.G.I.T. programme include George Street Methodist Church, Knox and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Churches, Park Street Baptist Church, and the Y.W.C.A. A group from St. Paul's are organising this fall, and possibly several others. The groups already organised will be only too glad to help any other groups. This Canadian Girls in Training is a nation-wide movement and is much enjoyed by the 'teen age groups.

EARL SCHWEIR GOES TO JAIL

Was Sentenced to Eighteen Months in Reformatory.

Earl Schweir, charged last week before His Honor Judge Huycke with breaking and entering the Adam Hall foundry on November 1, appeared this morning for sentence. He was represented by counsel throughout the trial, and this morning declared again that he knew nothing of the acts credited to him. He was sentenced to eighteen months in the Ontario Reformatory.

In passing sentence Judge Huycke said the only point on which he had any difficulty was the fact that the only witness against Schweir was his alleged accomplic, Morley James. "It is unwise and unsafe to convict on the evidence of an accomplice," Judge Huyke said, a"and the Criminal Code says no one shall be convicted unless it is corroborated on one materal pont. I have come to the conclusn that corroborative evidence was such that any jury considering the ase could consider it sufficient evidence to convict the prisoner. I have therefore deided that you must be declared guilty."

Given an opportunity to speak in his own behalf, Schweir declared he knew nothing of the crime. "I am getting punished for something I know nothing about," he said.

Judge Huycke said he regretted very much that the prisoner was not defended by counsel "If you are, as you say, innocent, your conduct has been most remarkable—so remarkable that I cannot give credit to your statement. The crim, is a serious one. It is true that you did no very serious harm—not because you did not wish to, because the opportunity was not there. So far as I am informed, nothing was removed. But you looked for anything you could find. That you did not take anything does not minimize the crime.

I regret to see the list that has been proven against you of prior convictions, and I can only express the hope that when you are serving the sentence that I must impose on you, you will consider the past and more especially the future.' Judge Huycke remarked that there is time yet for the prisoner to amend his ways and live a straight life.

Schweir was again closely guarded in the court room and on his way to and from the cells. He broke away from the Ontario Reformatory once, it is claimed, and again from Central Prison.

TURNS HEAD, IT STICKS.

Doctor Finally Gets Man's Vertebra, Snapped Out By Jerk, Back in Place

WESTMOUNT, N.J., Nov. 26.—Suddenly turning his head while he was making repairs to his car in the garage in the rear of his home Carlton Fisher, 841 Maple Avenue, was unable to turn it back. Pains began to develop in all parts of his body. A physician who was summoned said the first cervical vertebra had been dislocated by the sudden jerk.

After several hours' manipulation of the neck muscles the physician succeeded in replacing the vertebra and Fisher was once more able to turn his head.

NOMINATIONS IN THE BRITISH ELECTIONS

A Number of Candidates Were Returned by Acclamation — Conservatives Lead.

LONDON, Nov. 26.— (Canadian Press).—At the official nominations for British elections to-day, twenty eight candidates were returned to Parliament by acclamation, twenty of the number were Conservatives, four Liberals and three Labour, the other was right Hon. J. H. Whitley, speaker of the House of Commons.

The political position in Sheffield as described by the non partician special correspondent for the Canadian Press possesses features not to be found elsewhere so far.

The three parties are resolved to exchange full possibilities of the situation.

The Labour Party and Tory party largely are on the defensive. Labor last year gained three seats and the Conservatives also hold three and intend to place candidates in remaining four divisions. The Liberals who have only one seat to defend, are pressing fight in all seven ridings.

Cecil Wilson, Labour member for the Attercliffe division, is a capitalist. Presumably leader of local socialists and favors a capital levy.

Arthur Augustus (pension) socialist member for the Brightside is the bluests of blue blooded aristrocrats whose Etery efforts include a work on decline of the aristocracy. The socialists promis, Sheffield roaring campaign.

Seemingly the Sheffield communists will discuss neither free trade nor tariff reform but are out for capital levy thus possibly compelling steel makers who already have big bank overdrafts to put up their shutters.

A later despatch says: Up to 5 o'clock this evening, fifty candidates for parliamentary honors in British elections had been returned by acclamation at the official nomination proceedings. Of that numbre 37 were Conservatives, ten Liberals, three Labor and one Nationalist, "Tay Pay" O'Conner, Dean of the House of Commons. Rt. Hon. J. H. Whitley, Speaker of the House of Commons, was also returned unopposed.

Among the prominent Conservatives returned were: Sir Philip Sassoon, "Blythe," Major Hon. J. Astor, "Kent"; Col. J. Gretton, "Burton Division Staffordshire," Capt. Rt. Hon. C. C. Craig and Major Rt. Hon. H. O'Neill "Antrim"; Lt. Col. Hon W. E. Guiness (Bury St. Edmunds), Brig.-General Nicholson (Westminster Abbey), Sir F. Banbury and E. C. Grenfell (City of London), Lt.-Col. F. S. Jackson (East Riding Yorkshire), and Major Rt. Hon. E. F. L. Wood (West Riding Yorkshire).

Among the Liberals returned were: W. A. Jenkins (Brechon and Radnor), G. R. Thorne (Wolverhampton East), Sir C. C. Barrie (Banffshire), Sir Robert Thomas (Anglesey), Rt. Hon. Ian Macpherson (Inverness, Ross and Cromarty), Rt. Hon. George Lambert (Devonshire, South Molton), and Sir A. Sinclair (Caithness and Sutherland). George Barker (Abertillery), C. H. Hurst (Yorkshire West Riding Wenowrth), and Vernon Hartshorn (Glamorgan Ogmore) are Labor men returned.

Nine of the Conservatives were returned in Ulster, prominent being Rt. Hon. C. C. Craig, brother of Sir James Craig, Ulster Premier.

In the general election of 1922 there were thirty Unionists elected by accalmation, 12 Liberals, three Labor, ten Ulster Unionists and one Nationalist. Total of 56.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(United Press) — Developments over the week-end did nothing to change the belief of the speculative community that the present swing in the market was discounting a period of ample business activity through the winter and into the spring. With no adverse foreign news to hamper them, stocks continued the bullish demonstration in progress at last weeks close.

Sugars were the most bouyant group under the leadership of Cuba cane preferred, which reacted a new high on the movement. Davison Chemical continued its spectacular recovery, selling up more than 10 points from the low touched on last weeks break.

Considerable irregularity developed toward the end of the first hour when heavy profit taking came into stocks prominent on last weeks advance but a few groups continued to move ahead while this selling was being absorbed.

Sugars were especially strong, many traders buying stocks of the raw producing companies on the theories that good prices will be obtained next year Consumption is running at a record rate 1924 Cuban more than this years.

The report of the Cuban American Sugar Co. for the year ended Sept. 30th may be out with in the next ten days. That is intended more than $8 for the common. The refining Companies have not been as fortunate as the Raw Sugar Companys.

The report of the American Sugar Co. is expected to be in contrast with the good showing of Cuban American and Cuba Cane. The Oil shares made greater gains last week than in any previous week since the first cut in crude was made last spring The recent sharp advance ,acording to Wall Street, forecasts something favorable in the oil situtiion It may be that an advance in crude oil is not far off but there are many peopl, who do not look for any pronounced recovery in prices until assurances are received that production and surplus stocks will continue to decline

MOTHER CUT HAND FROM A THIEF SON

Kleptomania Drove 14 Year Old Boy to Pilfering--Mother Sentenced to Three Years in Prison.

KIEV, Russia, Nov. 26.—"Dear Comrade Judge: It is all my fault. My mother is innocent."

That was the note Ivan Ivanowich Gregoriev, 14, wrote to save his mother from punishment for chopping off his right hand.

Ivan was afflicted with kleptomania, but to his mother he was just a bad boy and had to be punished. She spanked him and whipped him with a broom, but the devil just stayed in him. The shame of it cut her so hard she tried to commit suicide, but was rescued.

When his mother was brought home, Ivan and she had a conference in a flow of tears. But soon the desire to take little things overpowered his will again, and the little right hand found its stealthy way into neighbors' belongings.

Ivan was heart-broken. There seemed but one thing to do. He advised his mother to chop off the bad right hand. She did.

The Judge gave his mother three years' conditional imprisonment, but the errant hand is gone and Ivan is now proudly earning his living as a cartdriver and his mother is satisfied.

JAMES ATTACKED BY WARD IN JAIL

Morley James, who was committed to the County Jail on 13th November awaiting transportation to the Ontario Reformatory, where he will serve not less than three months and not more than two years on theft charges, was attacked by Harry Ward yesterday, report from the jail says.

Ward was sentenced, with Gerald Chatten, another of the gang, to two years less one day in the Reformatory.

James, it will be recalled, turned State's evidence against Schweir, and it was on his testimony that Schweir was convicted.

No information was given as to the severity of the beating-up that James received, but the jail punishment was awarded the aggressor.

A miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Harrington, when the Executive Comittee of the C. W. After a social hour, which was spent in singing and music, the ladies brought in a large decorated box and placed it on the dining room table. The parcels were then opened, and presented to the bride, who although taken by surprise, thanked all the members of the League in a few well chosen words.

Supper which was served later, was heartily enjoyed. The remainder of the evening was spent in merry-making, concluding with singing, "When shall we meet again?"

OCCUPATION OF RUHR PRESENTS COSTS PROBLEM

French Claim Proceeds From German Deliveries Should Be Applied First to Expense of Occupation

MUST SOON AGREE.

PARIS, November 27. Canadian Press. — Owing to the fact that Sir John Bradbury, the British delegate, has been detained in London, the session of the Reparation Commission to-day will be devoted to routine business.

The examination into the financial and economic situation of Germany, and the motion providing for the creation of an experts' committee to examine into German's capacity to pay reparations, are expected to be taken up by the commission on Friday.

It is also expected that the German government here will also begin the arguments between the Franco-Belgian officials and the Stinnes group and other industrialists to the notice of the Reparation Commission with a view to combatting any effort by the occupying powers to hold out proceeds from deliveries in kind or payments of taxes under these arrangements for the purpose of meeting their own expenses of occupation.

Stinnes' Contract.

Premier Poincare declared in the Chamber of Deputies on November 16 that the proceeds, less the cost of occupation, would be turned over to the Reparation Commission. The contract with the Stinnes' group provides that the deliveries in kind shall be credited entirely to reparation, less the cost of transportation to the German frontier. Receipts in taxes on exports and coal, according to that agreement, shall be paid into what is called the "pledge fund," subject to "the rights of the Reparation Commission."

The question has been raised as to what constitutes the Reparation Commission's rights. Part of the French press contends that the Commission has nothing to do with these accords which are regarded as private, and and concerning only the separate action of France and Belgium in the Ruhr. The Commission itself is slow to pronounce on the question, since the solution of it involves tacit recognition of the occupation of the Ruhr, with which certain members hold the Commission has nothing to do, while the British delegate, Sir John Bradbury, has consistently opposed Ruhr contracts as well as the occupation.

Becoming Tangled.

The opinion is gaining ground in the Commission that the whole reparation question is becoming so tangled that the Allies will be compelled to break on the question as soon as the British interior political situation has cleared.

It is believed the Franco-Belgians base their claim to receive their occupation expenses out of the proceeds of deliveries in kind on Articles 249 and 251 of the Treaty of Versailles, which give priority to occupation costs over reparation. Under these articles they contend that the Reparation Commission, on receipt of proceeds from such deliveries, must deduct therefrom an amount sufficient to cover the cost of occupation, and then divide the sum on the occupying powers on the basis of the yearly lump sums agreed upon in March of last year.

FAILED TO PAY AND LIBRARY IS HALTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(United Press)—The colleges of the United States have only raised $300,000 of the $1,000,000 pledged for the Memorial Library at Louvain, Belgium. The committee in charge of the work of raising funds reports that the following colleges have completed their quota, in some cases far exceeding it:

United States military and naval acadamies, Cornell University, Hunter College, Amherst, Bryn Mawr, St. Stephen's and Yale. A number of preparatory schools have also subscribed their quotas.

There are 1,200,000 students in the higher educational institutions of the United States and the committee hoped to average $1 from each. Owing to the failure of the colleges of the United States to come through, work has been suspended on the building, one-quarter completed.

DAIRY EXPORTS IN WEEK LIGHT

Some Improvement in Butter But Cheese and Eggs Decline.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—The export trade in cheese last week was rather quiet considering the near approach of close of navigation from this port for the season 1922 as the shipments to the United Kingdom only amounted to 31,773 boxes which showed a decrease of 4,623 boxes as compared with the previous week and a decrease of 7,136 boxes with the seme week last year, but the total exports from May 1st to date have been 63,420 boxes in excess of the same period for 1922, and a decrease of 220,417 boxes with 1921.

The movement of butter last week to Europe was larger, there being 5,504 packages shipped as against none for the previous week and the same week last year. The total shipments for the season to date have been 77,264 packages as compared with 318,144 packages for the same period of 1922 showing a decrease of 240,880 packages and an increase of 8,667 packages with 1921.

The shipments of eggs for the past week were again smaller, there being only 10,161 cases forwarded which show a decrease of 1,563 cases as compared with the previous week, and a decrease of 19,378 cases with the same week last year, while the total exports to date have been 63942 cases smaller than 1922 and 74,445 cases less than 1921.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

There's no limit to the price you can pay these days for fancy perfume bottles. But, of course, if you are ingenious, you can copy the elaborate effects at trifling cost.

Here is a pair of quite ordinary-shaped bottles, with bands of wall-paper pasted around them and then the entire surface of the bottle lacquered with a heavy lacquer.

Other bottles are painted with floral or conventional designs, and some are covered with lace and small French flowers. But they all serve the same purpose and all make charming Christmas gifts.

TO HOLD CONFERENCE.

TORONTO, November 27 (Canadian Press). — A communication from the Right Hon. Arthur Henderson yesterday to James Simpson, secretary of the Canadian Labour Party, announced that a conference of Labor Parties and representatives of Trades Union Congresses within the British Empire, to be held in 1924, had been assured by the receipt of communications from the British Dominions.

The communication contained copies of the matters to be discussed by the conference, which were of a confidential character.

It is likely that five delegates will be sent from Canada to the conference.

Bank Victim Ends Worries in River

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 27.—His mind unbalanced by two years of serious illness and the loss of his life's savings in the Home Bank, Charles Leo Fitzpatrick, 30-years-old, Maidstone farmer, ended his life this afternoon by leaping into the Detroit river from the main deck of a Walkerville ferryboat. Throwing his cap into the air, Fitzpatrick leaped to the rail of the boat shouting "Good-bye boys" to the three passengers on the deck and then disappeared in the wake of the boat. The body was recovered 30 minutes later by the crew of the Detroit Harbor Master's boat.

BIG SHIPMENTS OF GRAIN OVER THE WEEK-END

Twenty-Six Vessels Carried Nearly Eight Million Bushels of Grain From Fort William.

NEW ORDER ISSUED.

FORT WILLIAM, November 27.—The biggest week-end movement of grain this season occurred on Sunday and Monday with 7,673,000 bushels taken out on 26 boats. There are also 20 boats to-night in the harbor loading grain, two loading screenings and two others waiting orders.

The F. G. Hartwell took out 480,000 bushels of wheat and the E. L. Ford 438,000, these being the two biggest cargoes of the day.

Of the boats that are loading now some are on their last trips, and are taking down grain for winter storage, the rate to Buffalo, including storage being from 4½ to 5c a bushel. An order has been received by the customs officers in Fort William and Port Arthur authorizing the loading of grain on American vessels for despatch to Canadian ports for winter storage as was done last year. The provision is made, and an understanding has to be given by the shipper and the vessel owner that the grain shall be unloaded at such Canadian port and the customs officer at the port of destination is to have notification given to him to that effect. Temporary suspension of the coasting laws in respect to winter storage of grain is not an innovation, but has been done in previous years.

UNLOAD IN SPRING.

OTTAWA, November 26. Canadian Press. — United States vessels for winter storage conditional on such grain being unloaded at a Canadian port next spring. The following telegram has been sent to the Collector of Customs at Fort William by the Commissioner of Customs here:

"Am directed to instruct you that United States vessels may load grain for winer storage at your port conditional on unloading of such cargoes at Canadian ports on the opening of navigation next spring. A written undertaking should be obtained in each case from shippers of grain and vessel owners to unload such grain at Canadian ports next spring."

It has been the practice to permit American vessels to load Canadian grain for winter storage.

CHICKEN THIEVES TO PENITENTIARY.

Three Men at Woodstock Get Stiff Sentences For Farm Raids.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 27.—Chicken thieves were severely dealt with in Judge Pattersons court this morning when members of the gang who have been terrorizing the farmers in the western part of Oxford and East Middlesex Counties for weeks and stripping their hen roosts came up for sentence. The parties all hail from the vicinity of London, and most of them have prison records. Albert Dunseith James Sinclair and Harry Andrews, the alleged leader of the gang, all pleaded guilty at a preliminary hearing, and when called before the Judge this morning each received two year terms in Portsmouth Penitentiary.

BUYING MORE FLOWERS BUT NOT MORE FUNERALS

ST. LOUIS, Mo. Nov. 27.—(United Press).—Weddings and funerals used to be the occasions that florists anticipated.

"Them days is gone forever!"

The demand for flowers for social functions now exceeds any other branch of the florists' trade, according to Frank A. Windler, president of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

Ten years ago the largest demands were for weddings and funerals.

For the last five years the demand for flowers has increased on an average of 2 per cent. annually here, he said. St. Louis dealers in the fiscal year ending last June had total sales of $7,500,000 in flowers, he said. This year the total will be above $8,000,000, he estimated.

HEALTHIEST BIG CITY

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Nov. 27.—(United Press).—Sydney is the healthiest large city in the world, according to a statement issued by City Medical Officer Purdy, in which the death rate for the municipality during the past year is indicated at 8.95 per thousand, the lowest for any city with 500,000 of population or over. Sydney and its environs number approximately 1,000,000. Dr. Purdy attributed this satisfactory state of affairs to the generally invigorating climate and the high degree of sanitation resulting resulting from the campaign against rats, flies and dirt.

ODD FELLOWS THOUGHTFUL

BERLIN (United Press).—The German Odd Fellows now open their lodge rooms during the afternoon, permitting poor people to gather and keep warm during the winter days.

KING OF BOOTLEGGERS RELEASED HEAVY BAIL

Carried $68,000 in a Handbag From Which He Furnished Bail Money—A Coincidence in Lives of Two Men

NEW YORK, November 27 (Canadian Press). — Many years ago Herbert Hartley and William McCoy were shipmates as apprentices on the old training-ship Saratoga.

Yesterday Captain Herbert Hartley stood on the bridge of the Leviathan as she steamed into her dock after breaking all speed records for the Western voyage across the Atlantic Ocean.

Yesterday "Rummy" Bill McCoy, skipper of the rum smuggler Tomako, which with McCoy and his crew of seven, is in custody of the Federal authorities, paid out $20,000 in bail on two Federal liquor smuggling charges.

"Rummy" Bill ruminated on the coincidence.

"I guess both of us have made our mark," he said. "Hartley's skipper of the biggest ship afloat, and I'm the king of bootleggers."

McCoy was held on a charge of illegally transporting liquors in his schooner Tomako, and furnished $5,000 bail from the handbag he carried. Then he went over to Brooklyn, pleaded not guilty to an indictment containing the same charge, the result of the seizure of the schooner Henry Marshall, the first ship of British registry to be seized outside the three-mile limit on rum-carrying charges.

He was released on $15,000 bail, which he pulled out of the same handbag.

There was $68,000 in that handbag, says Rummy Bill, proceeds of the sale of liquor to rum-runners.

GOOD PROGRESS REPORTED FROM CHILDREN'S AID

President Ackerman Called Attention to Fortunate Position of the Society—Rev. W. H. Young and Dr. Blagrave Spoke.

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held last evening in the board-room at the Chamber of Commerce, presided over by B. F. Ackerman, who alluded to the fortunate position in which the society found itself placed at the present time, to the efficient and economical service given by the matron in charge of the Shelter, to the work done by the ladies of the board in making the home a comfortable one for the wards, and to the generosity of the citizens of Peterboro generally and the County and City Councils in helping to make a success of the work.

The meeting opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. Rose, followed by an address by Rev. W. H. Young. Mr. Young outlined the work of the Society as an attention to the wants of children who are not rightly cared for and brought up in the right way. The business of the Society was to overcome the hereditary tendencies of these children. No progress could be made if they were considered in an impersonal way only, and the duty of the Society was to replace their environment and hereditary instincts with something much better.

Mr. Powell's Report.

The agent, G. P. Wowell, stated that the Society had held 14 meetings during the year at which an average of 15 members were present. Children received into the home numbered 47, and 51 were sent out. Visits to homes where children were placed out disclosed a satisfactory condition in every instance. Seven children had been sent to the Industrial School, there were 33 complaints and 29 investigations had been made. Visits to 43 places outside the city where wards were placed had been made. There were during the year 68 applications for children; children brought to the Shelter (not wards), 18; children returned to people (not wards), 14; and children made wards, 8.

Rev. Dr. Blagrave.

Rev. Dr. Blagrave gave a short address on humane work, as applied to human beings and dumb animals alike. He said that the Children's Aid Society is practically a humane society for children who are not properly cared for. It is our duty to see that such children are not subjected to abuse. The child is not only protected from physical ill-treatment when looked after by such a Society, but its spiritual life is also given attention.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Hon. Presidents, Mayor Taylor and the County Warden. Hon. Vice-Presidents—G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P.; W. H. Bradburn, M.L.A.; Rev. C. J. Phelan of Campbellford, Messrs. J. H. Burnham, E. A. Peck, J. Wearing. President—B. F. Ackerman. 1st Vice-President—Mrs. W. H. Gibbs. 2nd Vice-President — Mrs. J. S. Fanning. Secretary—J. Edgar. Treasurer—C. S. Cummer. Solicitor — J. Wearing. Ladies' Executive — Mesdames Knox, Hopwood, Kimberley, Welsh, Hill, Darcy, Hodgson, Holmes, Stocker, Devey, and Miss G. Brooks. Men's Executive—Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, Rev. W. H. Young, Rev. P. Costello, Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, Rev. C. W. Rose, D. C. King, M.D., Messrs. W. Stocker, W. J. Meyers, W. J. Hopwood, F. H. Dobbin, R. H. Parsons, E. Wood, M.D. A representative from the G.W.V.A., J. Abramson, was also appointed, and representatives of the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs will be selected later.

Belgians Seized Quantity Stocks

DUISBERG, Nov. 27.—(United Press.)—A quarter of a million francs worth of German rolling stock has been seized by Belgian forces of occupation as a penalty for the assassination of Lieut. Graff, Belgian officer in the occupied area.

The Belgian Government had demanded that Berlin pay an indemnity of 1,250,000 francs, but Germany made no comment on the ultimatum beyond offering to submit the case to the Hague court.

The rolling stock will be sold and the receipts turned over to the family of the murdered man.

REICH LEADERS OBSTRUCT NEW CABINET MAKER

Chancellor - Designate Albert Is Finding Difficulty In Filling Cabinet Positions—Is Regarded As Intruder.

JEALOUSY AT WORK.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—Dr. Heinrich F. Albert, up to a late hour last night had not officially attained the rank of seventeenth Chancellor of Germany. Obstructionist tactics by the Reichstag leaders have so far prevented him from winning over sufficient support and available candidates for the cabinet posts to warrant his appearance in an official capacity before the Reichstag, or otherwise vouchsafe him the Reichstag's tolerance as head of a non-political ministry.

The three days' crisis again reveals the familiar picture of partisan jealousies and insistence on traditional parliamentary prerogatives, which the old-line party leaders say have been violtaed by President Ebert in the selection of Dr. Albert, who is viewed as an intruding outsider aside from the fact that he is wholly without party affiliation.

Will Meet Leaders.

President Ebert, however, thus far is apparently determined to permit Dr. Albert to exhaust all possibilities before yielding or decreeing the Reichstag's dissolution, and late last night informed the Party leaders who sought an interview with him that he would receive them to-day.

Meanwhile, the four bourgeois parties are paralelling prseident Ebert's sortie with action of their own and propose to organize a so-called bourgeois bloc, comprising the Nationalists, the People's Party, Clericals and the Bavarian People's Party. The Democrats have not yet allied themselves with the movement, and the Socialists decline to identify themselves with the proposed coalition, on the ground that it was bound to collide with their programme.

Unfortunate Choice.

Dr. Albert is accorded wholly negative support in the partisan organs, which declare that his membership in Dr. Cuno's non-parliamentary cabinet is a distinct liability, and also designate his selection as unfortunate in view of his pre-war activities in the United States. President Ebert also is the subject of Frank criticism because of his failure to summon the Nationalists or the Socialists, both of whom are viewed as responsible for Chancellor Stresemann's overthrow immediately upon the retirement of the last cabinet for the purpose of putting the issue of the new government up to them.

Quakers Have Charge Hungry German Bairns.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—(United Press).—There are more than 2,000,000 under-nourished children in Germany who must be supplied with food at once if their lives are to be saved, according to Dr. Wilbur K. Thomas, executive secretary of the American Friends Service Commission.

"The Quaker Relief will have sole charge of feeding children in Germany this winter," Dr. Thomas said "The complicated internal and international political situation makes it imperative that a non-partisan neutral agency have charge of this relief.

"It has always been our policy to withdraw from a country as soon as we believe the relief problem there could be met by native organizations. We are going back to Germany because our own investigators and representatives of the German Government reported the existence of a desperate situation."

Henry T. Brown of Moorestown, N.J., has been selected to take charge of the Quaker Relief in Germany and will sail for Europe within a short time.

Shows Lawyer How To Write Briefly

WINNIPEG, Nov. 26.—A letter alleging three law infractions in seventeen words was received to-day by Deputy Minister of Agriculture J. H. Evans, who, for obvious reasons is withholding the place of origin and the name of the informant.

The letter reads:

"My neighbor has guns, he kills deer. Him am seller of whiskey, too. Bull runs at large."

Mr. Evans describes the letter as the pithiest of his experience.

Joins Father She Had Never Seen

QUEBEC, Nov. 27.—A father and a daughter who had never seen each other met here Saturday when the S. S. Mont Laurier docked at this port. The father left Scotland ten years ago and settled in Western Canada. Shortly after leaving Scotland a daughter was born to his wife who died soon afterwards, the child being reared by relatives. At the age of ten, the daughter was sent to Canada and was met here to-day by her father, who travelled from the west to welcome her. The two boarded a train for the west this afternoon.

TAKES 20 YEAR TERM IN RAGE

Prisoner Shouted Imprecations at Montreal Court When Sentenced.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—Floods of threats and imprecations disturbed the solemnity and decorum of the Court of King's Bench here today when Joseph Lapierre was sentenced to serve twenty years in the penitentiary. Lapierre, who is about five foot six inches tall, turned pale with rage when the sentence was pronounced and had to be led from the dock shouting imprecations.

Lapierre was arrested in a grocery store after a fight in which he threw bottles and fired a shot at police constables. He was shown to have had a long criminal record.

UNIVERSITY PAYS HONOR TO BANTING

With MacLeod, Second Winner of Nobel Prize, He Was Guest or Honor at International Dinner

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press.) — To Professors Frederick Grant Banting and John James Rickard Macleod, winners of the highest world award open to men of science—the Nobel prize—the University of Toronto last night paid its fullest honor. In the presence of representatives of State and of Science, and before one of the most distinguished gatherings of the medical profession ever assembled in this city, these two men—whose efforts have written a new page in the history of Canadian progress, and upon whose heads have descended the blessings of suffering humanity — came forward to receive the sincere tribute of their fellow workers and their fellow men.

Never before had the academic splendor of the great hall of Hart House witnessed such an event—an event which will remain as one of the milestones in the annals of the University.

"It is a red-letter day in the history of Canada, of Ontario, of Toronto and of this University," declared Rev. Canon Cody, chairman of the Board of Governors. "It is a challenge to future generations of Canadians."

"This is one of the greatest days, not only in the history of Canada, but in the history of science," said Sir Edmund Walker, Chancellor of the University, "because of its deep significance to every citizen."

"The romance of a modern university lies in research," stated Sir Robert Falconer, President of the University. "To-day we are assembled to pay tribute to the triumph of unselfish idealism and worthy effort."

"A Mighty Vision."

And the gathering last night was truly the culmination of a great romance—the realization of a mighty vision, conjured up during long hours of work in laboratory and study.

Given by the governors of the University of Toronto in recognition of the recent award of the Noble prize to Professors Banting and Macleod, the dinner last evening resolved itself into an international tribute to the men whose efforts went into the making of insulin in the most successful of recent medical discoveries. From Canadian and American universities, from all medical associations, from the Province of Ontario, came distinguished representatives to pay honor to the success of Toronto scientists and to the University of Toronto.

SEES MONOPOLY IN BRITAIN FOR CANADA'S GRAIN

Deputy Minister of Agriculture Predicts a Big Future In Old Country Market For Canadian Products.

PLEASE CONSUMER.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.— Dr. J. H. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, is back from England, pleased with the present position of Canada in the British produce market and opttimistic as to the future. Dr. Grisdale's investigations convinced him that the products of Canada had found their rightful place in the estimation of the British consumer.

"I am sanguine," he said, in an interview yesterday, "that in a few years Canaad will be in the lead in every line."

Canaad is making a greater effort Dr. Grisdale said, to find out what the British consumer wants and to please him than is any other British dominion or foreign caterer. There is alert and energetic competition, however, partitcularly from Oenmark. But this was being met, and the possibilities of the Brititsh market are unlimited. With the exception of wheat, the amount of food produce imported is greater than this country can export. The time was approaching when Canaad would have a monopoly of the British wheat market.

"I think we will eventually supply all the wheat Britain consumes."

Immigration Prospects.

Canada's prospects of scuring further desirable immigration from Britain were good. The difficulty was that many who would make good settlers were without means and required assistance. The crop failures and the consequent economic situation in Scotland should send thousands of people to Canada. At present South Africa required only certain classes of settlers. Australia did not want many and New Zeland was not in a position to inviute more. Canada, having plenty of room, was therefore the place for those in the old country who sought homes overseas. A thousand immigrants came over on the boat with the Deputy Minister.

The criticism of Canada from returned harvesters had got around to some extent by letters to the papesr and other means, but Dr. Grisdale did not think it would work much harm. The number of fault-finding immigrants was small and circumstances necessitated the harvesters visit to Canada would be overlooked.

Touching on the elections in the Old Country, Dr. Grisdale said the economic situtaion was so serious that something had to be done.

LONGEST AND THINEST FARM IN THE WORLD

STURGIS, Mich., Nov. 27.—(United Press).—William A. Dresser, Lafayette, Ind., defies anyone to exhibit a farm more elongated than the one he owns. It is twelve miles long and only 85 feet wide and has been used for farming purpose for more than seventy years. Before the Civil War the strip was the Wabash & Erie canal right of way. When the canal was abandoned about the time of the war, the land was converted for faming. Not long ago the entire property was bid for sale in payment of taxes, and Dresser bought it in.

TWO MEN TAKEN BY THE POLICE

Were Caught Trying to break Into Railway Station.

MEAFORD, November 27. Canadian Press. — As a sequel to their attempt to break into the Canadian National Railway station here last night, Joseph Burns and Stewart Olmstead, two of the five men who recently escaped from the Provincial Farm at Guelph, are in the hands of the police. The two men were observed by boys to be trying to force an entrance into the station, and the chief of police on getting a telephone call from a C.N.R. employee, arrived at the scene before the men had reached the cash drawer, containing a small sum of money. He arrested Burns but Olmstead got away. However word was received from Owen Sound that Chief Carson had arrested Olmstead on the latter reaching there in a motor car.

ANTI-SEMITIC OUTBREAKS BY VIENNA STUDENTS

PLEADED GUILTY

JUNEAU, Alaska, Nov. 27.—"Battling" Johnson, a prize fighter who came here from Canada, pleaded guilty to second degree murder charge here yesterday. A plea was accepted by court and he will be sentenced Friday. It was charged that he killed Luella Bowardmay, formerly of Moose Jaw and Hilda Weiss, in a dance hall.

PUGILIST JEERED

BOSTON, Nov. 27. — Young Stribling of Macon, Ga., was awarded the decision over Joe Egan of Dorchester after dull ten round bot There last night. The Georgia schoolboy was jeered by a section of audience and there were frequent references to his fight with McTigue at Columbus and to "Ku Klux Klan."

A SAILING YACHT CROSSED PACIFIC.

This Engineless Schooner Was the First of Its Kind to Cross This Body of Water Successfully.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 27.—For the first time in history a small sailing yacht has successfully crossed the Pacific.

She is the 82-footer Dwyn Wen, manned by a crew of inexperienced hands, under command of a physician who was both owner and captain.

After battling the elements for 42 days, the little craft recently sailed down the Columbia river on the final lap of its 4000-mile trip from Yokohama.

For six weeks the men fought with perilous gales, ate rain-soaked food and encountered, alternately, rain, fog and calm before sighting their goal.

Dr. R. H. Ellis bought the British yacht Dwyn Wen from her former owner at Hongkong, The vessel has a 20-feet beam and is constructed of steel and teak.

Reared in a New England town, with a fearlessness of the sea, the physician determined to bring the craft to America under her own sail with his own crew. And he did.

Ducks Hoodoo.

Just to discredit superstitions of the sea, the captain made all of his starts on Friday. The Dwyn Wen sailed from Hongkong harbor for Yokohama on a Friday and escaped being plundered by Chinese pirates, although the whole coast was being raided at the time. The craft, however, barely missed piling up on the island of Formosa, infested with head hunters.

"One summer day, a Friday, the Dwyn Wen plunged from Yokohama into the long stretch to the Columbia river," related Captain Ellis.

"We ran into the tail of a typhoon the first evening. Out of the blackness of the night I discerned the rolling lights of a Japanese steamer, swung our helm hard over and barely evaded a collision.

"Most of the weather was wet and foggy, intermingled with calms and some fine sailing days. Our radio outfit went bad the first day out and we were without outside communications of any sort.

Worthy Craft.

"The Dwyn Wen performed magnificently in the most trying and severe of gales and mean weather. Our decks were comparatively dry in seas which would have smothered many steamers badly. I'd rather take my chance in a storm on the little yacht than on most any steamer I know."

In addition to Captain Ellis and a first mate, the Dwyn Wen carried on its historic voyage a wireless operator, cook, steward, mechanic, three Filipinos and the doctor's small son, Henry.

The path-finding yacht is to be used for further adventures by her new owner, who is figuring tentatively on a trip around the world. The spirit of his seagoing New England forefathers is yet in his veins.

CHURCH UNION BASIS TOLD TO THOUSANDS BY EMINENT SPEAKERS

Over Six Thousand People Heard Imposing Array of Lay and Clerical Addresses--Described as Initial Step Towards Larger Union.

ENTHUSIASM SHOWN

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—Over six thousand men and women of Toronto and surrounding district at three meetings last night heard propounded, explained and extolled the principles and the basis for the proposed union of Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches in Canada.

Essentially a call to pro-unionists, the meetings, held in Massey Hall, Bond Street Congregational and Metropolitan churches, were distinctly enthusiastic in the cause and with one single minor exception in Massey Hall, there was no dissentient note in the urge toward consummation of a church union in Canada.

The exception was when Principal Clarence Mackennon, of Pine Hill Presbyterian Theological College, Halifax, commented upon the fact that many people favored union, but were opposed to the Act. A voice from the audience called "hear, hear." The meetings, according to programme announced, inugurated, "the conference campaign in Ontario, proclaiming the vision and the task of the united church of Canada." It was announced from Massey Hall platform that similar mass meeting church union rallies were to be held throughout the province.

Eminent Speakers.

An imposing array of able speakers, lay and clerical, upheld the cause of union at each of the three gatherings, and all were warmly applauded by the audiences which filled each place of meeting. At Massey Hall the main assembly, Rev. W. T. Gunn, D.D., Congregationalist, acted as chairman and as speakers there were: Rev. Geo. C. Pidgeon, D.D., Rev. Clarence Mackennon, D.D., Presbyterian, and Hon. N. Rowell, K.C., Methodist. At Bond Street, A. O. Hogg, President of the Board of Trade, presided, and the speakers were: Hon. Mr. Rowell. Rev. C. W. Gordon, S.D.D. (Ralph Connor), Presbyterian and Rev. John Pringle, D.D., Presbyterian. At Metropolitan church, Sir James Wood, Presbyterian, acted as chairman, and the speakers were: Rev. J. W. Pedley, Congregationalist, Rev. James Endicott, D.D., Methodist, and Rev. Dr. Gordon.

The call to union was fervently delivered and warmly received. The speakers voiced an earnest desire to refrain from saying anything to hurt the feelings of the anti-unionists, whose points of view and opinions, they said, they respected.

Rev. Dr. Pidgeon and others emphasized the need for co-operation and "conservation of resources." And Rev. Dr. Gordon on one occasion referred to the religously criminal conditions under which denomination, Christianity is trying to carry on its work."

An outstanding note in the addresses of Hon. Mr. Rowell, Principal Mackennon and Rev. Dr. Gordon was that, in the point of view of each, this move toward union of the three churches was but an initial step in the direction of a far greater union of Christian churches.

DYSPEPSIA WAS SO BAD Could Hardly Eat Anything

Mrs. C. Stone, Nanticoke, Ont., writes:—"Some time ago I had a very serious attack of dyspepsia, and was also troubled with gas on my stomach. I could hardly eat anything, and very often had pains after meals. I had used different medicine, but they didn't seem to do me any good. At last I happened to run on the track of Burdock Blood Bitters, and after using it for a short time I felt a lot better. I continued its use until I was completely relieved and now I am ready to recommend it to anyone troubled as I was."

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Band Returned From Cobourg—Farms Change Hands—Personal Mention.

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 27.—The Band returned home from Cobourg last night. On Sunday they had a very impressive service in St. Peter's church in the morning. The band and regiment formed for parade at 10.30 in front of the Armouries and paraded to the church. Everything was done in a military way. The church received the colors of the 40th regiment. These had been presented by the ladies of Cobourg in 1862 to the Cobourg Volunteers. When the 40th regiment was formed in 1866, under Colonel William Smith the Cobourg Volunteers were embodied with them and the colors taken over. The present colors were given by the ladies of Cobourg and presented to the 40th regiment in 1887 on Barriefield Common, Colonel R. Z. Rodgers being in command. The 40th and 139th have been re-organized and made one body under the name of the Northumberland Regiment. The regimental band played the hymns for the service and in the last hymn the large pipe organ was also played. This service was closed with God Save the King followed by the last post. There at 8.30 p.m. the band gave a concert in the Opera House. The house was crowded and between three and four hundred were unable to get in.

The following was the program:—March (Middy) Band; Selection — "Bohemian girl." Vocal Solo—Bandman Herb Leonard. Selection "Bells of St. Malo." Euphonium solo—"Holy City"—Bandsman Sergt. Geo T. Salter. Selection "Songs of the old folks." Solo —Bandman Herb. Leonard. Selection "The Champion" March "Colonel Bogey."

Bandsman Herb. Leonard received a very hearty encore and in both selections showed his talent for singing. Sergt. Geo. T. Salter played very beautifully "The Holy City" and was also encored. The Band will give a concert in Campbellford in the Opera House next Sunday night at 8.30 p. m. The officers in Command at Cobourg were high in their praise to the band. There were 30 men in the band.

Young People Meet.

The Young Peoples' League of the Methodist church had a very successful social gathering last evening.

After the opening hymn and prayer the following programme was given: Vocal solo by Mr. Collison which was heartily encored, to which he replied with another solo. A humorous reading by Mr. S. Maguire, followed by an instrumental solo by Miss Helen Thomas, and a vocal solo by Mrs. E. Bates. These were both well rendered. Rev. W. Elliott then gave an address on "Fanny Crosby, the famous blind hymn writer, taking his remarks from a book about her written by her friend, Rev. S. T. Jackson. He spoke of five special qualities that she had: 1 Diligence. She was always busy writing hymns or listening to some one reading and knitting; 2 A great memory. She could repeat almost any hymn she had composed, at a moment's notice. She could repeat whole chapters in the Scriptures when she was a girl, most of the New Testament and several books in the old. 3. Unselfishness. When she was offered gifts for her singing and poems, she would always share it up with some one whom she thought needed it. 4. Happiness She was bubbling over with it and wherever she went she imparted this cheeriness to others. 5. Great Sympathy. She went to see a friend of her's who was blind also. She had heard she was in trouble. Fanny Crosby was so cheery and bright that when she was leaving her friend said, "Fan, you have greatly helped me to-day." The cause of her blindness was, when she was six weeks old her eyes were sore, and hot poultices were put on injuring them so that she never saw again. Her mother told her when she was about 8 years of age about Milton, the blind poet, and what he had done so this made her feel that if others could do great things when blind so could she. Her grandmother had much to do in helping her, and was a great blessing to her. She would tell her of the sunrise, sunset, silvery moon, fleecy clouds, and rainbows, describing to her what they were like so that the little girl could see them in her imagination. She would take her out to the woods and tell her of the birds and listen to their songs so that she got to know the names of the birds by the songs they sang. And the same way with the flowers and trees. She could tell the trees by touching them. Her grandmother was the one who taught her the Bible by reading to her, and Fanny would memorize it. She attended the Blind Institute in New York when she was 15 for twelve years, and during her life met with many famous poets, Thomas Moore, Whittier, Longfellow, and great preachers. On her 85th birthday President Cleveland wrote her a letter. She found that her life work was writing hymns, of which she wrote many.

Mr. President, Mr. Thomas Craighead, thanked Mr. Elliott, and all who had helped in the programme. Refreshments were then served, and everyone enjoyed the pleasant evening. A large crowd was present.

S. Oliver Funeral.

Messrs. Stone, Humphries, Riendeau, Wiggins and Baker attended the Masonic funeral of Mr. S. Oliver of Warkworth. There was a large gathering of Masons and the Methodist church, of which the late Mr. Oliver was a member, was crowded to the doors. He will be missed in the church, for he was an active member. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Kemp, said Mr. Oliver had missed only one service in two and a half years.

Mr. James B. Campbell, of Stirling, has bought the farm of Mr. Chas. Doughty at Anson and will take possession the 15th of January, 1924. Mr. Doughty has purchased a valuable farm near Madoc and will move there.

A Temperance Meeting.

A stirring address will be given by one of Campbellford's professional men. There will also be vocal and instrumental music.

The Christian Endeavour of the Presbyterian church held their regular meeting Monday evening. Mr. George Anderson gave a talk on Farmers' Movement and Mrs. R. W. Scott gave a talk on Ants. A very enjoyable evening was spent.

CLEAN UP THE CROSSINGS.

City bylaws require that the pavements in the business section shall be kept free of snow, ice and slush, and the merchants who are not speedy in seeing that this work is performed have their memories jogged by the police.

There is no complaint on that score, for it is in the general interest that the sidewalks shall be cleared as quickly as possible, and both for business men and their customers the bylaw is a desirable piece of legislation.

Unfortunately, however, there does not seem to be the same desire on the part of the city to do on its own account what it is most insistent that property owners shall do.

The crossings are usually in weather such as yesterday's in a deplorable condition, ankle deep in slush and water, and there is apparently no systematic effort to see that the accumulation following a snow storm is removed from street corners.

The effect of having the sidewalks cleared is completely spoiled because at each intersection the pedestrian finds a slough of slush through which he has to pick a wet and disagreeable passage.

It might be well for the authorities to consider the advisability of improving these conditions; at least on the down-town streets.

FIGHTING DIPHTHERIA.

The address given by Dr. McNair before the Rotary Club yesterday should do much to "sell" the toxin anti-toxin campaign to Peterborough.

Dr. McNair's figures indicated clearly how the use of anti-toxin had cut down the diphtheria death rate and emphasized the remarkable record set up by anti-typhoid innoculation and anti-tetanus injections in the British and Canadian armies during the World War.

The speaker showed that the Schick test, which determines the degree of susceptibility, is simple and harmless, and that toxin anti-toxin is used without any injurious effect.

Testimony such as the following upon the unanimous endorsation of the Medical Society should pave the way to an almost unanimous acceptance on the part of parents of the immunization campaign planned by Dr. McPherson in connection with Peterborough's schools.

The facts in a nutshell are that diphtheria is a highly infectious and decidedly dangerous disease, particularly harmful in its after-effects even if the attack itself is survived.

Susceptibility is much greater among the children.

There are numerous carriers who are a constant menace to the susceptible.

The Schick test will show whether or not a child is susceptible.

Toxin anti-toxin will provide immunization for such children as are shown by the Schick test to be susceptible.

There is no harmful reaction from either the test or the toxin anti-toxin.

Common-sense, therefore, suggests a widespread use of both in erecting a bulwark in Peterborough against diphtheria.

TOO MANY REVOLVERS.

The shooting affray at London where a young girl was shot by a jealous lover again calls attention to the ease with which people who want them for homecidal purposes manage to secure revolvers.

Nearly all the crimes of violence nowadays are committed with the aid of the deadly and easily concealed revolver, and the existing laws seem powerless to keep these weapons out of the hands of the lawless.

Many people, alarmed at the growth in the number of shooting affrays, are arming themselves with revolvers as a protection against crooks.

They are only opening the door to tragedies through careless handling of the firearms, or through them falling into the hands of children, while it is doubtful if the possession of a "gun" is any real protection.

Judge Ackerman of New York, discussing this question recently, said: "I do no know of one single case where a revolver, legally carried by a permit, stopped a holdup or a burglary. The holdup man is always ready and quick on the draw, while the citizen is taken by surprise and is never ready, so any attempt on his part to draw is more likely to result in his death than in preventing the holdup."

There is undoubtedly much truth in that view, and the city of Buffalo is emphasizing it by cancelling the permits of 8,916 owners who secured permission to possess revolvers.

The revolver should be wiped out of existence, if it is possible to devise legal machinery that will bring such a consummation about.

Certainly the present regulations are powerless to protect society by keeping firearms out of the hands of those who require them for illegal purposes.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT.

The announcement of an early meeting of the Owners' and Tenants' Association made by the Examiner last night is so far the only sign of a realization on the part of the citizens of Peterborough that the date of the municipal elections is steadily drawing near.

Members of the association—and other citizens who may become members—can perform a useful community service if between now and the date of the meeting they will devote themselves to a conscientious consideration of the situation and a survey of the field of possible candidates so that they will be prepared to make some concrete suggestions.

What kind of a man do they want to see in the mayor's chair, for example?

What policy do they want the city rulers to follow — a parsimonious, penny-pinching, short-sighted policy that takes snug satisfaction in biting a mill off the tax rate at a cost albeit of failure to do many things that should be done, or a businesslike policy that, while insisting upon a dollar's worth of value for every dollar expended, does not attempt to function on a budget that merely keeps the body and soul of the civic machine together and leaves no opportunity for progress or constructiveness?

There are two questions with which the members of the Owners' and Tenants' Association might do some quiet and deep thinking, preparatory to discussing civic issues at the meeting to be held in the near future.

WHERE GRAVEYARD PLOTS ARE NOT IN DEMAND.

A Calgary correspondent of The Financial Post says that a large number of Alberta people are leaving for California for the winter, or to remain permanently; the trek includes just about as many farmers as city dwellers.

One of the problems in the development of Western Canada is to get settlers who are willing to make the prairies their home, and not merely a stopping place in which to make money. "I would rather live here than any place I have ever lived," writes an enthusiastic Albertan who has traveled extensively over the continent.

He goes on:

"As to the climate, I am very much in love with it; all the talk about intense cold is bugaboo; it is no colder than other sections of Canada but the States as well." At the same time he admits that "Alberta or any of the Western provinces will never be what it should so long as 60 per cent. of the people who settle on prairie farms have not the slightest intention of making this section their permanent home. This means they do not try to make their farm places attractive, and homelike, and it reflects to the disadvantage, in getting others to come here, and purchase the places which are being offered. There must be a right about change if we ever expect to build up a population required to make the taxes less, and make the facilities and utilities now furnished by the government a paying proposition."

Western optimists have declared that "there is no demand for plots in the cemeteries out here." But it is open to question whether this merely indicates enthusiasm which gives no thought to death or an undefined plan to die elsewhere. In any event Western Canada, perhaps even more than other parts of the country, is facing the problem not only of getting settlers, but of keeping them.

QUACK DOCTORS.

An almost unbelievable condition of affairs that threatens to develop into a national scandal has been discovered in the State of Connecticut, says the Hamilton Spectator. Investigation of the death on an operating table of a patient who was undergoing amputation of a crushed finger revealed that the "doctor" who performed the operation was a former news photographer, that the "doctor" who administered the anaesthetic was a laundry worker and that both had bought their medical licenses in a "diploma mill," for a cash consideration. That hundreds of such diplomas have been issued and that the State of Connecticut is overrun with fake doctors is indicated. It is believed that the probe will show that the "diploma mill" has quack graduates in almost every State in the Union. Many, it is known, have been practicing in the State of New York. How many lives have been sacrificed by these dangerous criminals will probably never be known. Inquiry into the cause of the death of the finger-amputation patient brought the admission from the fake anaesthetist that he had poured the contents of the three cans of chloroform upon the gauze through which the victim breathed.

Recently, Canadians were shocked to read that an interne in an Ontario hospital was discovered to have had no previous training. It was an isolated case and the pseudo-doctor was not in possession of either a genuine or a false diploma. So rigid are the laws governing the practice of medicine and surgery in Canada, it would be impossible for such a condition as now alarms the United States to exist in this country. How the menace was permitted to flourish so long in the neighboring nation is not understandable.

ARE BRITONS DULL?

Britons do many things well, and one of them is running an election, says the Ottawa Journal. In Canada a general election is a really dreadful thing. It is dragged out over months. It resolves itself into a dreary procession of dull, interminable speeches, commonplace candidates, crude posters, and worse campaign literature; and long before polling day a depressed, confused electorate is willing to vote for anything or anybody.

In England, on the other hand, an election is a perfect stimulant. Epigrams, imagery, and biting phrases dancing through speeches with a brillance that is dazzling; sharp swords which, like Saladin's scimitar, divide without disturbing; pamphlets and leaflets that compress issues into biting paragraphs; hecklers that make Bernard Shaw seem dull; election songs incomparable for sheer humor and raillery—all are in abundance, giving the fight a zest and a momentum sadly absent in our campaigns.

In Canada an election orator with a less than one hour speech considers himself deficient in knowledge. In England a candidate who made a one hour speech would be hooted from the platform. The aim there is quality not quantity, lightness not pomposity, lucidity not loquaciousness.

We Canadians boast of our "pep" and "punch." We consider ourselves aggressive, imaginative, vigorous—regular go-getters. We think the British dull. The conduct of a British election gives us to think.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Great Britain cannot at least complain about paucity of candidates.

The grant made to the Mississaugua and Chippawa Indians has been a long time coming, but it shows that the white men are endeavouring to play the game.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Well, it's settled that Christmas is coming. And everybody seems about as surprised as usual.

The older you are the quicker Christmas comes. The younger you are the slower Christmas comes.

Christmast is better than Thanksgiving. We celebrate more. And we have more time to recover.

Christmas is better than New Year. We don't have to make good resolutions and see the good die young.

Thanksgiving is fine, but seems to add a few pounds to all the fat folks, figuratively speaking.

Christmas doesn't make fat people fatter. The noise the kids make even worries off a few pounds.

Thanksgiving is quieter than the regular days in a small town because the mail doesn't come in.

Company is nice. No home is complete without it. Company postpones the regular family fights.

Women are fine people. They look swell. And all you need to know about them is what you don't know.

Keep your eye on women who let you talk too much. They have reasons for not calling you a liar.

Women always brag about their poor appetites, but men are different. Men brag about what they eat.

Some cops are too reckless. In Los Angeles, one was so brave he married a widow with five children.

Who remembers back a few months ago when we had only one thousand presidential possibilities?

Chicago is lively this winter. Dry officer fainted down in the Loop. Maybe he was offered a drink.

MOTOR ACCIDENT LITTLE BRITAIN

Former Peterboro Man in Car When It Turned Over.

LINDSAY, Nov. 27.— A serious automobile accident occurred at Little Britain on Sunday night. As Mr. McGahey, travelling for Kemp Manufacturing Co., Toronto, was motoring into the village in his runabout, his car turned turtle at the northern boundary. Mr. McGahey was pinned under the car, but Mr. D. E. H. Lee, manager of the Canadian Machine Telephone Co., Lindsay, and formerly of Peterborough, escaped unhurt. The injured man was rushed to Dr. Hall's hospital, where it was found that his lungs and chest were severely crushed.

Newfoundland Radio Hears London "Hello."

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Nov. 26.—"Hello, Hello, Hello." "This is the British Isles speaking." These words, quite clear and distinct, reached J. Morris, electrical superintendent with the Reid Newfoundland Co. at St. John's from 310 station, London, England, over his radio receiving set last night. He also heard the station at Newcastle.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, November 27. — This will be an off week at the Union Stock Yards, as far as heavy cattle are concerned. The exporters announced last week-end that they would not be buyers this week, and prospective shipments were stopped by the commission houses.

Yesterday's run was largely that of poor class killers and stockers. From last week, 344 head were left over, and yesterday morning's receipts were 4,923 cattle, 372 calves, 4,255 hogs, and 2,460 sheep and lambs . There were also 434 cattle and 890 hogs billed through, and at least a part of these will be sold here. The cattle run was lighter than expected, but there was enough of the kind.

Local butchers scanned the offering carefully for some good killers, but these were again scarce, and the best of the handyweights did not bring much over 6 cents. Common killers have got too low for any further reduction, and the market was therefore steady. Shields & Co. sold a bunch of light butchers' heifers at 3 1-2 cents a pound, and the price seemed about the level for producing the cheapest kind of beef. The season's round up sent in a lot of canners and common cows, and these brought 1 1-2 to 2 cents, and 2 3-4 to 3 cents a pound respectively.

Corbett & Hall had a bunch of ten heavy steers, and these topped the market at 7 cents a pound. Harry Arnold bought a load of choice medium weight steers at $6.40 a cwt. A few baby beeves were in, and these sold from 8 to 10 cents a pound. The top for good butchers' cows was about $4.50 a cwt., and good emdium cows were $3.50 to $3.75. Stockers and feeders sold well last week, and specialists in these purchased freely yesterday morning at what was stated to be steady prices.

Except for really choice calves the market shows an easier tendency. Retailers are speaking of a falling off in veal consumption and only the extra good calves are making as high as 11 cents.

With 900 lambs carried over from last week, and a fair-sized receipt yesterday morning the market opened weak. Some packers said they were not buyers yesterday and trading was very slow. Some lambs were bought at 10 cents a pound a decline of 25 cents a cwt. from last Thursday. In the later trading, light lambs held from 10 1-2 to 10 3-4 cents and this was steady with last Thursday.

Hogs were quoted unchanged yesterday at $7.75 a cwt. f.o.b. for the thick smooths. Packers say they are not keen buyers at this price, and expect the market to sag lower. A large number of hogs billed through for Montreal at the week-end were sold here, and this was regarded as indicating a poor Eastern market.

Current Quotations.

Avoid Bad Colds

COLDS develop quickly and almost before you know it the bronchial tubes are attacked and the lungs threatened. While consumption is not so common as formerly, the number of cases of pneumonia has increased enormously, and it is more than ever necessary to stand on guard against these dreaded diseases.

Success in treating colds depends so largely on prompt action that it is impossible to overemphasize the advantage of always keeping the treatment on hand.

It was this idea that prompted us to put on the market the large-size bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. In addition to the better economy in buying the larger quantity, there is the satisfaction of having this medicine ready for prompt use in cases of emergency.

You never know what night baby will awaken choking with croup, or grandma will have an attack of asthma. Chest colds and bronchitis get too great an advantage if you are not ready with treatment to check the advance of disease.

Such ailments are too serious to neglect, and they are too dangerous to accept any kind of cough mixture.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is a real medicine of tested and proven value, and should never be confused with the thousand and one cough mixtures that are offered for sale simply because people are not sufficiently discriminating in their choice of treatments for such ailments.

You can buy Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in almost any store where medicines are sold. Ask for the large bottle, and consider the wisdom of always having a bottle at hand. Experience is a dear teacher, and on this account it pays to be cautious and prevent serious results.

Mrs. Jeremiah M. Bigelow, Bigelow, Ont., writes:—"I had a very stubborn cough for over four years, and I tried doctors and almost everything without results. One day an old friend asked me to try Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. I used five bottles, and it worked like magic. I have never been bothered since, and that is some years ago."

THREE PARTIES STRIP FOR ACTION SHOWING HOST OF CANDIDATES

Conservatives Elect 35 By Acclamation — Nominations Totalled 1,442, the Same Number As In the Last General Election — Many Three-Cornered Contests Indicated—Eleven Liberals Unopposed.

INCIDENTS OF NOMINATION DAY.

LONDON, November 27 (Canadian Press Cable). — Of the 50 members of Parliament elected yesterday by acclamation, the Conservatives have 35, Liberals 11, Labour 3, and the Nationalist Party 1.

In the Hitchin Division of Hertfordshire the Liberals at the last moment decided to contest the seat held by Lord Robert Cecil for eleven years. The riding includes Hatfield House, the seat of the Cecil family, where Queen Elizabeth was held prisoner.

The Liberal candidate is Rev. Dugald MacFadyen, who lives in the neighbouring city of Letchworth.

The Conservatives have a total of 534 candidates in the field, including six working men.

Right Hon. William Adamson, former chairman of the organisation of the Labour members of Parliament, is opposed by F. Hodge, Independent Labour, in East Fife.

ULSTER ELECTS EIGHT.

LONDON, November 27 (Canadian Press Cable). — Acclamations for the House of Commons resulting from the nomination held throughout England, Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland totalled fifty, a decrease of six from the number returned by acclamation a year ago. While the Conservatives lead with 35, and have an apparent gain of five over last year, no less than eight of this number who were returned as Ulster Unionists in the last House, are now designated as Conservatives.

Eleven Liberals were unopposed, compared with twelve combined Liberals and National Liberals in the last elections; Labour returns three members, the same number as a year ago, while T. P. O'Connor, the lone Nationalist, returned by acclamation in the last elections, is again unopposed.

"BALDWIN PLAYS SONG OF VICTORY ON TRIANGLE."

LONDON, November 27 (Canadian Press Cable).—Lloyd-George's gift for apt phrases and political catchwords is serving the re-united Liberal Party well, while his extraordinary energy in campaigning shows not the slightest diminuation.

Speaking at Edinburgh yesterday, he alluded to Premier Baldwin's prediction on Saturday that "the people will win."

"That," said Mr. Lloyd-George, "is not his confidence. The Premier's hope is that the people will be beaten by triangular contests; his song of victory is played on the triangle."

This was an allusion to the fact that there will be two hundred or more such "three-cornered" contests. Curiously enough, the candidates formally nominated yesterday numbered almost exactly the same as those nominated for the last general election, namely 1,442, distributed as follows:

Conservatives	529
Liberals	456
Labourites	435
Cons. Free Traders	7
Independents	15

The Independents include 2 Communists and 1 Prohibitionist.

Labour Receives Funds.

The Labour Party's supposed lack of funds did not prevent the nomination of a full quota of Labour candidates. It is said that their Party recently received "a number of handsome cheques" from wealthy patrons and that the Party chest is now better furnished than appeared likely when the campaign opened.

Possibly owing to the failure of most of the women candidates to win in the last general election, when only three captured seats out of 33 candidates, only about half a dozen more women candidates were nominated yesterday than last November. One of the exciting incidents of the naming of candidates yesterday was a race against time by Major Braithwaite ,who journeyed five thousand miles from America and is declared to have had just three seconds to spare to secure the nomination for Pontefract.

Leaders Confident

As all the Party leaders affect the same degree of confidence, efforts to predict the outcome of the election are hopeless. It is noticeable, however, that many of the important organs of the Conservative press continue rather lukewarm on the advisability of Protection, and it is believed that this lukewarmness may have a considerable influence on the wavering electors.

The Labourite, James Henry Thomas, opening his campaign at Derby, predicted that Protection was already killed, and declared that his own opinion was that the election would result in a stalemate.

Premier Baldwin, in a speech at Bristol yesterday, repeated that he would have nothing to do with an inflationist policy, and, defending his tariff policy, said:

"We know how many industries depend on partly manufactured goods and raw materials; we shall take no step without consultation with those industries. If any monopolies result they will be monopolies at home, and we can deal with them."

Lady Astor Opposed.

Yesterday's nominations in the Sutton Division of Plymouth confirmed that Lady Astor will have a straight fight with the Labourite, Captain M. W .Brennan.

In the last election Lady Astor defeated Captain Brennan by more than 3,000 votes, but there was an Independent Conservative in the contest, who polled more than 4,000.

The two candidates met at the nomination table yesterday, and exchanged greetings. They left together, and in the lobby of the Guildhall held an animated conversation for some minutes, were then photographed together, and parted with a handshake and an exchange of bantering callenges, Lady Astor exclaiming, as she entered her automobile: "Fight fair; let us have cricket."

Lady Astor addressed an enthusiastic meeting last night, and was obliged to address an overflow meeting, as thousands were unable to gain admission. She expressed gratitude to the Liberals for not nominating a candidate against her, remarking that she had faced misrepresentation and calumny to fight for social questions which were dear to many Liberals. She emphasised that social reform was still in the forefront of her programme.

LONDON, Nov. 27.— (Canadian Press Cable).—Yesterday's nominations led to some surprises. One of thes, was the withdrawal of labor from the contest in the Bridgewater division of Somerset. leaving the sitting member, Lt.-Col. Sir R. A. Sanders, Conservative. to fight it out with a liberal for the seat.

In the Abbey division of Westminster Dr. Finucane, liberal, retired from the field and left Brig.-Gen. J. S. Nicholson, the conservative member, unopposed.

Chelsea produced a liberal candidate at the last moment, making it a three cornered fight there for Rt. Hon. Sir Samuel Hoare, secretary of state for air.

MacDonald Engaged

Ramsay MacDonald, labor opposition leader now has a straight fight with a conservative in the Aberavon division of Glamorgan, the prospective liberal nominee having retired at the eleventh hour.

Two unexpected candidates appeared in Birmingham, one a liberal against Sir Francis Lowe conservative, in the Edgbason seat and the second, a labor nominee, against Sir Arthur Steel, Maitland conservative, in the Erdington division.

A woman journalist, Mrs. Penny, provided a surprise at Berwick-upon Tweed, Northumberland, being nominated as the labor candidate there against Mrs. Hilton Philipson (Mabel Russell, actress), who was elected as a conservative in the by-election following the unseating of her husband, Captain Hilton Philipson, Georgian liberal, after the last general election.

Another last-minute nomination was that of Wrigley, a Labor candidate, at Yarmouth, where there now will be a triangular contest.

Asquith Faces Three

The Labor split in Paisley is not yet healed and as a result H. H. Asquith will have three opponents there, a Labor nominee, a co-operative candidate and a Conservative.

George Hirst, Yorkshire, west riding Wentworth, and George Barker Monmouth, Abertillery, who were by acclamation a year ago as representatives of Labour were similarly returned to-day. Vernon Hartshorn, Glamorgan, Ogmoro, was the third Labour candidate returned to-day unopposed.

AVERAGE ACREAGE OF FALL PLOWING.

Ontario Farmers Have Later Pasturage For Stock

TORONTO, Nov. 26.—The acre age of fall plowing done this year is well up to the average and farmers are willing to take advantage of any farther open weather to extend the area turned under, says the report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture to-day.

Fall wheat continues to have a fine appearance for entering the winter. The fine weather of the last few weeks has made it possible for farmers to let live stock run on pasture somewhat later than usual in the grazing districts, and unless considerabl, snow comes many horses and cattle may be left on for a while longer.

BURGLARS DOING RECORD BUSINESS.

High Cost of Electricity Means Unlighted Doorways — The Burglars' Paradise.

By GUS M. OEHM

BERLIN, Nov. 27.— (United Press).—The municipal electric works have applied to police headquarters demanding re-establishment of the regulation forcing apartment owners to keep their hallways and doorways lighted until 9 p.m. "because the electric works are losing money through the new "darkness' regulations."

When the price for electric current went beyond the reach of even the richest apartment house owner, a new system was inaugurated whereby the dwellers within the building could have hall lights burning until 8 or 9 p.m. if they paid for the current themselves.

Naturally, they refused, so Berlin apartment houses' hallways and doorways are unlighted—and the saving in current is causing the electric works concern.

The police declare they realize that the hallways should be lighted at least until the evening mail and newspapers arrive—possibly 8 p.m. but see no reason why they should be lighted thereafter merely because the municipal works suffers from lack of business. But the matter is up to the individual renters in the apartment houses.

The high price of current caused it all.

Meantime, the hallways are dark and flashlight companies are doing a record business.

So are the burglars.

Salvaging Grain Is a Dangerous Pursuit.

Shovelling scrap grain from the freightcars on the C. N. R. siding is not the safest of pursuits, declares Special Officer W. H. Howard of the C. N. R. This practice is common on the east storage siding and may result in someone being killed by sudden shunting or being carried away when the trainmen close the doors of the cars.

It is pointed out by Mr. Howard that when the trainmen are making up their rains they close the doors and anyone locked inside might remain there until the car reached its destination at a western elevator.

The sudden coupling of the cars, too, may throw the gleaner of grain from the car, causing serious injury or perhaps death under the wheels.

The C.N.R. authorities are reluctant to prosecute offenders, but this form of trespassing, in the interests of the lives of those concerned, must be put down, Mr. Howard says.

DU-KO finds favor."

RECIPE FOR PIE OR PUDDING

½ contents of a can of DU-KO; 2 cups of milk (water for Lemon) Pour enough milk into powder to make a batter; heat the balance; when it boils, pour in the batter. Stir until it thickens, then pour into pie shell, previously baked, or into a mould if a pudding is desired.

Three flavors: Lemon, Maple Cream and Chocolate.

BECAUSE—It only takes 5 minutes to prepare.

BECAUSE—DU-KO only needs the addition of milk or water.

BECAUSE—DU-KO needs no eggs, sugar or extra flavoring to "improve" it.

The "Cheapest" is not always best. Compare the results you get from DU-KO with the price you pay for it. Figure the saving you make in cost of extra materials, time expended and work involved. You will find DU-KO is a real economy. Satisfaction guaranteed or money will be refunded.

The cry for whole wheat

A wider food intelligence means an increasing demand for whole wheat products. Modern milling processes do not produce whole wheat flour. It can rarely be found in this country. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is 100 per cent whole wheat, and so thoroughly cooked that every particle of each crisp, tasty shred of flavory baked wheat is digested and converted into muscle, bone and brain. Contains all the food you need, and all the bran you need, to prevent constipation and its kindred ailments. Two Biscuits with hot milk and a little cream make a warm, nourishing meal.

TRISCUIT is the Shredded Wheat cracker—a real whole wheat toast—eaten with butter, soft cheese or marmalades.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

Anything you may do to stop up cracks and crevices in the floor of your house will cause a decided gain in health. Air in our rooms we must have, but not through cracks in the floor. More disease germs are disseminated by this means alone than in any other way.

Much filth and dirt is carried on our shoes into homes. It finds lodgment on the carpets and other floor coverings, and sifts down into the cracks. Sweeping and dusting distributes it again and the older it gets the worse it becomes. Do away with carpets in every possible case.

The Japanese have no carpets and very few bedclothes. Their homes are models of cleanliness. Few or no diseases result from house dirt there.

Wooden floors can be made perfectly sanitary by oil and paint. combine with a good cleaning compound and plenty of water.

Healthful floor coverings may be supplied in a number of ways. In many rooms a smooth-painted or finished oil floor with few rugs furnish the necessary protection. An inlaid floor of wood pattern, doing away with all unhealthy and unsightly floor cracks, costs a little more but that is more than gained in your annual health condition.

The necessity for pure, vitalizing air in homes, especially during the colder months, is a health factor of almost inestimable value. This is impossible with dusty carpets and germ-filled floor cracks.

Baby is a much safer asset if dusty carpets and unclean floors are made sanitary by removal.

DOWN WITH MAN'S CONSUL MONOPOLY.

This Fortress of Man, Held Staunchly For His Own Monopoly, Is Being Attacked By Women.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 27.—Women consuls!

Women as commercial representatives of the United States in other men consuls in foreign countries," Mrs. Winter explains. "The American woman abroad must take her troubles always to men. Quite often young society men, wholly unfitted to deal with womens' and children's difficulties, get these consular posts."

Call Is Out.

So war has been declared, and a proclamation has been broadcast, calling for recruits among young women. Mrs. Winter advises girls to study international law, economics, languages and other consular service. She is seeking to interest women's colleges in instituting courses especially designed to train young women in such activitiy.

Women in consular service, Mrs. Winter believes, would increase the understanding and friendly relations between nations. It would be a friendly step toward universal peace.

But this isn't the final goal, by any means. After this fortress is won, Mrs. Winter looks on on to the next, a more noble, more formidable stronghold to tear down.

Woman Ambassador!

That is the diplomatic service itself, wherein the United States is represented in an official, executive capacity. Of course, there are cases of women employed in this service, but Mrs. Winter looks forward to jobs never yet held by her sex. Even who knows, to minister or ambassador.

"Well, why not?" she asks. "Woman is a much a natural diplomat as she is a cook."

She is as well fitted to make a treaty as a cherry pie, Mrs. Winter adds. Besides, long experienced in managing a grouchy husband and obstreperous children she ought to be well qualified to pacify a recalcitrant country.

At the head of this formidable attack is Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and one of the boldest generals the women of America have chosen to lead them on.

"There is a crying need for women consuls in foreign countries," Mrs. Winter explains. "The American woman abroad must take her troubles always to men. Quite often young society men, wholly unfitted to deal with womens' and children's difficulties, get these consular posts."

AT DRUGGISTS ONLY

CHILLY LOVE BEGGING.

It was a chilly evening.

The slow young man was escorting a young lady friend home. Suddenly she murmered in a despondent tone which was almost an invitation.

"Oh, my hands are so cold!"

Her bashful ascort looked concerned and stammered:

"I am sorry! Pity you haven't a muff with you!"

The young maiden sniffed as she gave him a cutting look, and the replied, resignedly:

"I have."

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

A LAST VISIT

"My, my, my! It's dreadfully late for children to be out."

"Goodby, Mister Will o' the Wisp! We're leaving Dixie Land and we thought we'd come this way."

It was the Twins calling to the mysterious little water fairy of the south.

"My, my, my! It's dreadfully late for children to be out," came Will o' the Wisp's voice, and at the same time a dim light appeared out over the pond. And then Will himself appeared, paddling his boat toward shore where the children were waiting.

"When we're on an errand for the Fairy Queen it is never late," said Nancy. "We have our magic shoes, and that makes us different from other boys and girls."

"Is there any news to take to the Fairy Queen?" asked Nick. "She'll want to know about everything in Dixie Land."

"Yes, yes, I suppose she will," nodded Will o' the Wisp. "I'm glad you stopped. Indeed I was just thinking about you and hoping you'd come along. Something must have happened to Ringtail Coon. He hasn't been around these parts for a week. Poke Nose Pickerel says he hasn't seen him, and Mosey Mud Turtle says he hasn't seen him, and neither has Sally Salamander, nor Sammy Sunfish, nor anybody. I haven't much use for Ringtail Coon myself as he leads me such a life, always snooping around after some of my water folk, but really I'm worried."

"It isn't very late yet," offered Nick. "Nancy and I can go and hunt for him, if you'd like."

"That's mighty kind of you," said Will o' the Wisp gratefully. "I'd go myself, but I cannot leave the water. Yes, I wish you would look him up for me."

Off went the Twins. It was getting almost too dark to see, but they knew where Ringtail lived in a great button-ball tree, and thither they went and rang his front door bell

They rang six times before anyone answered, but finally a head in night cap, stuck itself out of an upstairs window and asked sleepily what was wanted

"Are you all right, Ringtail?" called Nick "Will o' the Wisp wants to know He says he hasn't seen you latcly"

"Why, yes, I'm fine," answered Ringtail, yawning "But 'bout this time of ycar I have to be careful of Mister Coon Dog. He snoops around until he makes me nervous After a week or so he'll get tired and go home and I can come down again, but in the meantime I find sleep most healthful Tell Will o' the Wisp not to worry"

"Well, I'm glad of that" exclaimed the little fairy when he heard it "We often find that the things that worry us most are the things we miss the greatest when they are gone"

"Goodby," called the Twins

"Goodby," came Will o' the Wisp's voice in the distance

A Thought

Whoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, it is better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were cast into the sea.—Mark 9:42.

Cruelty, like every other vice, requires no motive outside of itself; it only requires opportunity.—George Eliot.

AN AUTO ROAD TO THE SEA

The most remarkable automobile road in the world is to be build between the mainland of Florida and Key West, a distance of 125 miles out of sea. The new road, when completed, will be the longest and probably the only extensive automobile road over the sea. At times the motorist will be almost if not actually out of sight of land.

CLOSE FITTING.

One of the popular models for cooler weather is a street suit with scarf collar of the same material and tight-fitting sleeves clear down to the wrists. A circular flounce gives the skirt an interesting touch.

SLEEVELESS SWEATER.

A clever looking sweater for cold days is a sleeveless form of the knit waist. It may be worn, without a belt, or with a narrow leather belt, and slightly bloused. It buttons only part way up from the bottom.

THE LURE OF WHITE MAGIC.

The above caption has been given to that charming territory, "Algonquin Park in Winter," by those who have enjoyed its wonderful attractions. Bracing atmosphere and just the place to revel in the winter sports for which Canada is justly famous. The Highland Inn opens for the reception of guests, December 15th. Write N. T. A Woman's Friends

Good, clear daylight and a well placed mirror are the best friends that a woman has. They place honesty before tact and tell the truth—unpleasant, if it has to be.

Daylight and the well placed mirror are, too, the best friends of Peerless Erasmic Soap.

Peerless Erasmic is the daylight soap that will cause your complexion to revel in the nearness of eyes; give to it a pearly clearness and glow of youth all your own; enable your skin to meet fearlessly the scrutiny of other women, and enable your mirror to answer you pleasantly, whilst speaking the truth.

Peerless Erasmic is more than beauty to the skin. It woos the senses with its subtle fragrance. Neither pronounced nor obvious, it is the perfume of good taste—an elusive fragrance floating near.

The years best book by America's best woman writer

"BLACK OXEN" by GERTRUDE ATHERTON

Published by arrangement with Associated First National Pictures, Inc. Watch for the screen version produced by Frank Lloyd with Corinne Griffith as Countess Zattiany.

(Copyright, 1923, by Gertrude Atherton.)

SYNOPSIS.

At a first night performance in New York, a beautiful young woman attracts attention by rising and leisurely surveying the audience through her glasses. Clavering, a newspaper columnist, and his cousin, Dinwiddie, are particularly interested, Dinwiddie declaring that she is the image of Mary Ogden, a belle of thirty years ago, who had married a Count Zattiany and lived abroad. He is convinced this is Mary's daughter, but all efforts to establish her identity prove futile.

Clavering manages to meet her, and she tells him she is the Countess Josef Zattiany, a cousin of Mary Ogden's; that she had married a relative of Mary's husband; that Mary is ill in a sanitarium in Vienna.

He does not believe her story and frankly tells her so. Each is aware of a more than passing interest in the other, Clavering, as time goes on, becoming so distraught over the affair that he goes for advice to his friend, Gora Dwight, a successful young novelist, who assures Clavering he is in love with Madame Zattiany.

XVI. (Continued)

"He's laying up trouble for himself if he's passing off an impostor—letting her get possession of Mary's money. I cannot understand Trent. He's a fool about women, but he's the soul of honor, and has one of the keenest legal minds in the state. That she has fooled him is unthinkable."

"He knows, and is in some way justified. Madame Zattiany must have your friend's power of attorney. That's positive. And there is no doubt that Countess Zattiany—Mary Ogden—is in some sanitarium in Vienna, hopelessly ill. She let that out."

"Poor Mary! Is that true?"

"I'm afraid it is . . . perhaps . . . that may be it. . . ."

"What are you talking about?"

"When she was mocking my curiosity she suggested that she might have been an actress and won the confidence of Countess Zattiany owing to the resemblance. It struck me as fantastic, but who knows? . . . Still, why should she use the name Zattiany even if your friend did give her the power of attorney . . . unless . . ." he recalled Gora's suggestion, "she is out for a lark."

"Lark?" She hasn't tried to meet people. I can't see any point in your idea. Absurd. And that woman is no actress. She is grande dame born and bred."

"I've met some actresses that had very fine manners indeed, and also the entree."

"Well, they don't measure up according to my notion. This girl is the real thing."

"Then why, in heaven's name, doesn't your Countess Loyos know anything about her? If Madama Zattiany is what she says she is, they must have met in Viennese Society a hundred times. In fact, she would have been one of the notable figures at court."

"The only explanation I can think of is that Madame Zattiany is all that she claims to be, but that for some reason or other she is not using her own name."

"Ah! That is an explanation. But, why—why?"

"There you have me . . . unless . . . Ah!" The familiar glitter came into his eyes and Clavering waited expectantly. This old bird had a marvelous instinct. "I have it! For some reason she had to get out of Europe. Maybe she's hiding from a man, maybe from the Government. Zattiany may be one of her husband's names—or her mother's. Of course Mary would be interested in her—her, that resemblance—and help her out She knew her well enough to trus with and somebody had to represent her here. Of course Trent knows the truth and naturally would keep her secret."

"Another plot for the movies . . . still—it's a plausible enough explanation . . . yes . . . I shouldn't wonder. But from whom is she hiding?"

"Possibly from her husband."

"Her—her—"

"Like as not. Don't murder me. I think you'd better go to Florida and stay there. Better still, marry Anne Goodrich and take her along"—

Clavering had flung himself out of the room.

XVII.

He charged down Madison Avenue, barely escaping disaster at the crossings in the frightful congestion of the hour; he was not only intensely perturbed in mind, but he was in a hurry. His column was unfinished and an article on the "authentic drama" for one of the literary reviews must be delivered on the morrow. In the normal course of events it would have been written a week since.

He was furious with himself. Passionate, impulsive, and often unreasonable, his mind was singularly well-balanced and never before had it succumbed to obsession. He had taken the war as a normal episode in the history of the world dealing mainly in war, not as a strictly personal experience designed by a malignant fate to deprive youth of its illusions, embitter and deidealize it, fill it with a cold and acrid contempt for militarism and governments, convert it to pacificism, and launch it on a confused but strident groping after Truth. It was incredible to him that any one who had read history could be guilty of such jejunitry, and he attributed it to their bruised but itching egos. After all, it had been a middle-aged man's war. Not a single military reputation had been made by any one of the millions of young fighters, despite promotions, citations and medals. Statesmen and military men long past their youth would alone be mentioned in history.

The youth of America was individualism rampant plus the national self-esteem, and the mass of them today had no family traditions behind them—sprung from God knew what. Their ego had been slapped in the face and compressed into a mould; they were subconsciously trying to rebuild it to its original proportions by feeling older than their fathers and showering their awful contempt upon those ancient and despicable loadstones, "loyalty" and "patriotism." Writers who had remained safely at home had taken the cue and become mildly pacifist. It sounded intellectual and it certainly was the fashion.

22% OF INCOME SHOULD BE SPENT FOR A WARDROBE

$20 a Week Working Girl Should Spend $328.80 on Lots of Silk Stockings But No Fur Coats

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—A $20 a week working girl should spend 22 per cent. of her income, or $328.80 a year for her wardrobe, which should include lots of silk stockings, but no fur coats, according to an exhibit arranged by the Plymouth Church Institute of Brooklyn.

The exhibition shows the clothes that actually can be bought, taken from the regular stocks of a department store.

There are wardrobes for $20, $35 and $50 a week salaries, complete from underwear to coats, from shoes to handkerchiefs. No fur coats are included, but even the $20 budget provides a fur-collared winter coat, a short coat, three dresses, a skirt, a sweater, blouses and three hats. When one gets to $50, a suit is included and the underwear is silk.

The exhibit, which was originated by Mrs. Newell Dwight Hillis, wife of the pastor of the church, was planned with the modern business girl strictly in mind. The silk stocking allowance is especially large.

KNITTED WEAR.

All-knit wear may be noticed on the streets this season. An example is a knitted three-piece suit of black and white nub yarns, topped by a squirrel collar and finished in striped bands and silk binding.

THE MISSION AT ST. JOHN'S

The Rt. Rev. the Bishop of Ontario closed the Mission at St. John's church on Sunday evening. The Bishop has conducted many Missions throughout Canada but by his own testimony the Mission just closed has been the very best he has ever held in point both of attendance and interest. This was felt by the whole congregation, who attended in large numbers all the various services and meetings.

The Bishop's wide learning, deep thinking and simplicity of presentation caught the hearts of the people from the start. The service on Sunday evening will long be remembered. A hymn, "Jesus, Saviour, pilot me," which had been sung by four members of the choir in the morning was asked for again in the evening by the Missioner. Those rendering it were Mrs. George Evans, Miss Evans Miss Price, and Miss Flowers.

The Bishop thanked the organist and choir for the great assistance they had given during the week and for the excellent music on the Sundays.

Monday being the Bishop's birthday he was presented with a gift from the church as a symbol of their appreciation of his great service.

Twenty-fold Increase In Catch of Whitefish.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—During the last twenty-five years the commercial catch of whitefish in the Bay of Quinte has increased twenty-fold. In 1825 it was only 1,266 cwts and in 1921 it was 21,885 cwt. The department of Marine and Fisheries announces a record collection of 321,000,000 white fish eggs this season in the Bay of Quinte which exceeds all previous collections in this area. An increase in the collection of whitefish eggs in the bay has been made every year sine 1914. A total of 98,000,000 whitefish eggs has also been collected at Bad River, Georgian Bay, for the Collingwood hatchery.

WRAP-AROUND MODELS

The vogue of sweaters and fur jacquettes again brings the wrap-around sports skirt of velour and camel's hair to the fore. Fairly large plaids and small checks are conspicuous.

FLARE MAY STAY.

Look out for the flare next spring, warn some designers. If it doesn't return as furly as ever, at least it may be noticed in modified form, as a relief against and toning up the simple silhouette.

KIWANIS BROKE THREE RECORDS

The Club's Softball Team Badly Mauled By the Gunners in Weird Game

The Kiwanis Club next Friday will probably dock their softball team a week's salaries and fine the whole squad for last night's disaster at the armouries in which the club's experts were shot to pieces by the Gunners with a score of 45 to 4.

Three new records were crowded into the book by the Clubmen who appeared to be affected by the burlesque spirit of their theatrical success last week. Kiwanis are now charged with the ranking for the total number of runs scored against them, with the most runs off them in one innings, fourteen in the ninth, and with the most batters parading past their pitcher, the Gunners having edged up to the plate twice around their batting for a total of 18.

Such fas the Kiwanis crowded hour of woe last night under the bludgeons of the merciless Gunners whose cruelty might well be referred to the Humane Society for serious consideration. It was an awful slump for the victims who have recently been playing in championship form, but in this killing they could do nothing right, at bat or in the field.

The lineups were:

Gunners—Ranger, c; Coursey, 3b; Shaughnessy, lf; Helson, ss; McElroy, ss; Ross, 1b; White, rf; Wolfe, 2b; Piercy, p.

Kiwanis—Mackay, c; Byers, ss; Weber, 1b; Gordon, 2b; Green, p; Craig, lf; Cummer, 3b; Parker, ss; Nivens, rf.

Score by innings:

Gunners ..... (11)2425304(14)—45
Kiwanis ..... 0 4000000 0 — 4

GOLFERS MUST TAKE OWN RISKS

U. S. Supreme Court Jury Refuses Damages to Man Hit By Ball on Links.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—A player on a golf course—just as a boxer in the ring—must protect himself at all times.

That was a jury's verdict in Supreme Court when they denied John B. Harris, bond salesman, $15,000 damages from Henry Coe, Jr., of Syosset, L.I., son of Henry Coe, retired New York attorney, of Southampton, L. I. The damages were claimed for injuries received when he was struck by a golf ball while playing on the links of the Rumson Country Club, Seabright, N.J., in July, 1920.

The jury was out three hours. Their verdict was awaited by a gallery of golf players and caddies.

The verdict turned on two points: How far does the etiquette of the game require a player to be away from the flag in the centre of the green after "holing out" before the following players may drive for that hole?

How far, as a matter of fact, was Harris away from the flag at the time he was hit?

Charge to Jury.

In his charge to the jury, Justice Taylor said:

"When a player goes on the links, he assumes risks of the game as it is played by a reasonably prudent and careful person. He knows that the best of players make poor shots. A player, however, does not assume the risk of negligent or wilful injury by another player.

"In determining the degree of care to be observed by the driving player the ordinary rules of negligence should be followed. The driving player must use ordinary care not to injure the player in front of him, but the player ahead must also use ordinary care in not being injured"

First of Its Kind.

Harris's suit is said to have been the first ever brought for an injury due to being struck by a golf ball.

He alleged that he had not yet left the green ahead of Coe when the latter "teed off." The ball, it was testified, went beyond the flag in the centre of the green and struck Harris on the head.

The rules of the game require that "no player should play up to the putting green till the party in front has holed out and moved away."

TANGLED LANGUAGE.

"Wild Bill" Donovan was telling the writer of one of his ball players, a quaint character who gets tangled up with language.

"He had trouble with another player on several occasions," said Bill, "and he came to me one day and said: "Say, Bill, you know that guy hadn't oughta be allowed in baseball. They oughta boyscout him outa this league.'

"Another time," said Bill, "he was talking about the oldtime ball players as compared to those of the present day, and said: "Bill, the trouble with ball players nowadays is they're too refund.'

"'Too what?' I asked.

"'Well, too referred,' he corrected.

"He was tarying to think of the word refined," concluded "W Bill."

London physicians have found a bad spot on the lungs of Jimmy Wilde, former flyweight champion of the world, and the little mite from Wales has been ordered to hang up the gloves for good.

REGINA SQUAD DUE THURSDAY

The Western Rugby Champions Will Workout at Varsity — Meet Queen's Saturday.

TORONTO, November 27. — The stage is all set for the final Canadian football championship at Varsity Stadium on Saturday afternoon Queen's University will represent Eastern Canada and Regina will furnish the representatives from Western Canada.

The Canadian Rugby Union announced to-day that tickets will be on sale at Moodey's, Spalding's, King Edward and Hart House.

The Regina team is expected to arrive in Toronto on Thursday morning and to have a work out at Varsity Stadium that afternoon. Officials will not be appointed until they arrive. A neutral eastern man will referee and a western nominee will umpire. Regina has asked Bryan Timmis of Ottawa to act as umpire and he may accept.

On the Way.

Regina, November 27. — The Regina rugby team, western champions; left last night for Toronto, where they will play Queen's University, eastern champions, for the football championship of Canada. There will be 22 in the party including 19 players.

Members of the party who will make the trip include: Howie Milne, Fritz Sandstrom, Stew Leigh, Art Brown, Jack Rowand, Scotty MacEachern, Colin Foster, Bill Creighton Jerry Crapper, Tare Rennebohm, Jack Arnott, Curtis Bates, Arve Wood, Howie Otton, Bricks Pebbles, Heinie Rogers, Jack Gilhooly, Bill Smith and Bill Kerr. Manager Al. Ritchie, Coach Jack Eadie, and Trainer Jimmy Thompson will complete the party.

Coach Eadie declared that if Queen's can show any marked superiority over the Regina team they must be hailed as a team of supermen.

"The Regina team," he said, "is without a flaw or a blemish so far as I can see. The players have taken their training more seriously than any team that I have ever been interested in and win or loose they are sure to win the admiration of eastern fans next Saturday."

With Scotty McEachern in top form there is no doubt but Regina's backfield will occasion some surprise next Saturday, for with Leigh, Milne and Rowand, each of them fleet of foot and deadly in tackling, in the best of condition, it would be hard to imagine a more brilliant backfield.

Regina's wing line which won the unstinted praise of the critics in their fight through to the western championship, is intact, and trained to the minute.

MONTCLAIR GETS OPTION ON NEWARK FRANCHISE

BALTIMORE, Nov. 26.—William Ashton, of Baltimore, president of the Newark International League Baseball Club to-day confirmed the report that he had given an option on the club to Mayor McConnell, of Montclair N.J., and a syndicate of Montclair men. The option expires November 28.

Ashton said he understood the Montclair group would try to get Casey Stengel, recently traded to the Boston Nationals by the New York Giants, as manager.

EUROPEAN CHAMPION IN BANTAM DIVISION

LONDON, Nov. 26. — Johnny Brown, of London, tonight won the Lonsdale Belt and the bantamweight championship of Europe by defeating "Bugler" Lake, on points, in a 20-round contest. The fight was held in the National Sporting Club. Lake won the championship from Charles Ledoux, the French boxer, July 30, last.

LONDON CROWDS SEEK EXERCISE

Tennis Courts Filled Up and Roller Skating Rinks Are Booming—New Rinks Built.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The growing oult of sport and exercise all the year round has practically filled up the limited number of tennis hard courts in and around London for the Fall and Winter season. Many enthusiasts have therefore started indoor badminton clubs, but still there are many people without means of exercise and these are fast filling up the roller skating rinks every night. Many new rinks have been built and this form of exercise is having almost as real a boom as dancing, for which it is difficult to book a hall except many weeks in advance.

OLYMPIC SEATS HAVE SOLD OUT

Nations Have Applied For Reserved Sections Seven Months in Advance.

PARIS, Nov, 27. — The French Olympic Games Committee already has hung up the "standing room only' sign at the Colombes Stadium although the official opening of the 1924 Olympic Games still is seven months away.

The Stadium provides accommodation for 70,000 spectators. There will be 20,000 reserved seats divided evenly among the two covered stands. The remaining 50,000 persons will be accommodated with standing room at both ends of the bowl, and at the turns.

The British and United States Olympic Committees have reuested five thousand seats for spectators from these countries, while Sweden and Italy each have requested 1,500 seats. The remaining 7,000 seats have virtually all been reserved by the smaller nations, leaving hardly any for the French Committee to dispose of to French sport lovers.

Last week they had 57 new applicants and 85 placements an increase of 20 placements over this week. For the last month most of the men have been sent to the Bush, but the Lumber Camps are pretty well filled up now and they will not take anything but skilled workers.

BOWLING

GREAT BOWLING AT THE WATER STREET ALLEYS LAST EVENING.

Great bowling was turned in by the Westclox ladies at the Water Street alleys last night. Playing their first games of the season some of the young ladies rolled up as good as scores as some of the men do. Miss Northcott, who bowls for the Orioles rolled up a score of 145 in her first game, while Miss Wolfe of the Owls rolled 131 in one game and 328 for her three games. Some of the other girls rolled over 100. This is very good bowling for the fair sex when it is considered that these were the first games of the season. The ladies pick up the game very fast, and in a short while it can be expected that they will be hanging up good scores.

In the Mercantile Five Pin League the Bell Telephone took two from the Red Ferns. A peculiar thing happened in the game when both the teams rolled the same score in the first game, the score being 747 for each team. To break the tie they rolled an extra frame the Bell Telephone winning. There were some good scores rolled up in the three games. Harry Cobb was the high man of the evening with 555. McPhail, also of the Red Ferns was next with 540, while Lush was high for the Bell Telephone with 526, and also had the high single of 238.

The Quaker Oats got in a couple of good game in their league. Pitchford was the high man of the evening with 352.

In the City Ten Pin League the Canadian Packing took two from the Lawn Bowlers. Both teams rolled good games, the Canadian Packing showing quite an improvement over their last week's games, three of their men rolling over 500. Robinson was the high man of the evening with 527, while Smithson also of the C.P.C. had the high single of 206. King was the high man for the Lawn Bowlers.

In the Westclox Intershop League the Pressers took two from the Tickers. Owing to the limited time these two teams were only to get in two games. Yelland was high in the two games with 308 while Spillsbury had the high single of 161.

NEBRASKA JINX OF NOTRE DAME

Defeat of Rockne's Team Was Biggest Upset of the Year.

BY BILLY EVANS

For two successive years Coach Fred Dawson of Nebraska has caused a lot of woe for Notre Dame and its great mentor, Knute Rockne.

Last year Nebraska gave the football world something to talk about in defeating Notre Dame. At the start of the 1922 season Nebraska was heralded as the "wonder team." Defeat by Syracuse robbed the cornhuskers of much of their glory. Then a comeback was staged at the expense of Notre Dame.

This year Nebraska was defeated in the first game of the season by Illinois, 24 to 7. Then followed a scoreless tie with Kansas and a 7 to 7 draw with Missouri. Supporters of Nebraska were beginning to lose faith in Coach Dawson, some of the old grads were crying for a new deal.

Then came the game with the supposedly invincible Notre Dame eleven, conqueror of the Army, Princeton and Georgie Tech. Nebraska was given but little consideration. The 14 to 7 victory over Rockne's great team was the biggest upset of the year.

The old grads who were crying for Dawson's head a few weeks ago are now calling him the miracle coach of the west.

Who is Fred Dawson?

Go back to the football records of 1908, 1909 and 1910 and you will see the name of Dawson playing a prominetn part in the deeds of the Princeton Tiger on the gridiron. He was a star halfback in his days at Old Nassau.

However, all of Nebraska's success must not be handed to Dawson. The Cornhuskers' success in recent years has been in a measure due to a great line. Henry Schulte, who was an All-America forward in his days at Michigan, is line coach under Dawson.

With Dawson handling the backs and directing play, and Schulte in charge of the line, you have two good reasons for Nebraska's football success.

McTIGUE MATCHED WITH JOE BECKETT OF ENGLAND

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.— Announcement that he has accepted a 20- round match with Joe Beckett of England at Dublin next St. Patrick's Day was made to-day by Mike McTigue, who took the title of light heavyweight champion of the world from Battling Siki at the same place last March 17.

McTigue said the battle would be for the heavyweight championship of the British Empire, but dispatches from London last Thursday said that title had been abandoned by Beckett after his humiliating defeat by Georges Carpentier and was held by Frank Goddard, who defeated Jack Bloomfield in a bout held to determine the new champion.

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillon Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation

Muskegon, Michigan.—"After doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians without any relief at all, they said at last that medicine would not reach my case and I should have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and often saw it advertised in different papers where some women had suffered just as I did and got well and strong again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left me. I am now much stronger and do my own work and work in the factory besides. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all the praise."—Mrs. NELLIE QUILLON, 17 Morris St., Muskegon, Mich.

Women should heed such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and weakness, for they indicate some female trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

Recommends Vicks For Pleurisy

Quebec Mother Thankful She Can Now Get Vicks In Canada.

Mrs. J. A. Leblond of 114 Rue Galt, Sherbrooke, Quebec, writes: "Vicks VapoRub is not a new remedy for us, because we have used it in our family for four or five years. We got it from the United States. This shows you how much we think of it. We are glad to get it here now for there is nothing better for pleurisy, chest colds, etc.

Here is the last word in treating cold troubles—rub Vicks well in over throat and chest, get into bed and have the coverings loose about the neck. All night long you breathe in the healing vapors of Camphor, Menthol, Eucalyptus, Turpentine, etc. The application also acts like a heating liniment or plaster. Usually colds go in one night and croup is commonly relieved in 15 minutes.

Vicks comes as a salve—the external direct treatment for all cold troubles—absorbed like a liniment and inhaled as a vapor.

Vicks is the ideal treatment for children' cold troubles; it avoids so much internal dosing.

At all drug stores, 50c a jar. For a free test size package write Vick Chemical Co., 344 St. Paul St., W., Montreal, P.Q.

Though Vicks is new in Canada it has a remarkable sale in the States. Over 17 million jars used yearly.

MURRAY STREET CHURCH BAZAAR

An array of very pretty and novel ideas in Christmas gifts and dainty wearing apparel marks the bazaar of the Women's Association of the Murray street Baptist church, which commenced last evening in the store on Simcoe street formerly occupied as a Farmers' grocery, and will continue until six o'clock to-morrow evening. The ladies in charge are conducting a tea room also during the two days, and have arranged their display of articles in a very attractive manner, their window dressing showing excellent taste and a variety of pretty things for sale.

There is underwear, plain and fancy, with a quantity of filmy nighties in pastel shades, embroidered and laced. There are camisole tops in fine stitching, dainty accessories for the table and bedroom, and plenty of pretty things for the baby, including a number of fine wool sets, in cream and pink and blue.

A noticeable feature of the display is an entire bedroom set done in unbleached cotton, with a lovely design in conventional pink daisies and golden butterflies .The large spread is flanked by companion pieces in a complete set.

A sale of ferns and plants is held in conjunction with the bazaar and there are artificial carnations in pink and red also. A supply of painted flowers for table and room decorations is on view, in the dried, painted novelties that have become so popular of late. There are painted vases, also, and a large, odd tray, with glass top enclosing a novel under-mat, made of the silken floss of milkweed, with real butterflies and tiny fern fronds as a pattern.

A French nightie of pale pink, with tiny blue knots and top of shadow lace catches the eye, and there is a sale of small girls' dresses, daintily executed in pure white voile with finely stitched hems and yokes. Little wool cares of corn with pale gold ribbons are handy as teapot holders, and there is plenty of variety at the apron counter. Home-made cooking and pickles make an appetizing display.

The president of the Association, Mrs. S. Cottingham, acts as general convenor; Mrs. George Benton has charge of the underwear sale; Mrs. S. Blewett of the fancy work; Mrs. W. R. Breyfogle of the home-made cooking; Mrs. C. Westbrook of the home-made candy; and Mrs. John Quinn of the aprons. In the tea-room, Mrs. W. D. Scott presides today, with Mrs. C. Veteran Athlete Relies on Dreco

Mr. Henry Riley Gets Wonderful Result from One Bottle of Famous Herbal Remedy, and Joins the Throng of Peterborough People Who Are Finding Health The Dreco Way.

"My husband in his younger days was quite a football player," says Mrs. Henry Riley of 240 Carlisle Street, Peterborough, Ontario. "In the course of one of his games, he strained a cord in one of his legs. It seemed to get all better and didn't bother him for years. Then, about two years ago, he had a bad fall which laid him up for some time. After he got around again, rheumatism set in his leg where he had strained it years before and it became so bad that he couldn't get around without the aid of a cane.

"He tried many kinds of medicines but got very little relief. Finally one day he read of Dreco and decided to give it a trial. Would you believe me when I say that Mr. Riley has only taken one bottle but is already well on the road to recovery. He is feeling so much better in every way and can get around much easier than for a long time. We are both fully convinced that Dreco is a wonderful medicine and that it will fix him right up."

Rheumatism is defied by a strong healthy system. It, like all other diseases, finds lodging in the weak spots as, in the case of Mr. Riley, an all but forgotten injury which, though perfectly healed, still lacked the full strength and vigour to repel the invader. Dreco, by its natural properties, is giving the added strength needed to fight off this rheumatism. Let it help you by strengthening your entire system in the same way. Dreco is purely herbal and contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterborough by Bond's Drug Store. Go there to-day and ask for Mr. Vaughan, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, in Campbellford by J. E. Birks, and by a good druggist everywhere.

WESTWOOD EGG CIRCLE PROVES BIG ADVANTAGE

Membership Leaped to 105 Poultry Keepers This Season—Farmers Obtain Better Prices.

GOOD EXECUTIVE.

Early in the summer of 1922 a small number of poultry-keepers in the vicinity of Westwood, Peterborough County, decided to try out Co-operative marketing of their eggs, and on the first day of June, 1922, four producers made their first shipment. This small beginning was due to the fact that the Constitution and By-laws adopted by the directors required, that the members would sign a binding contract in which they agreed to use the Circle as a medium for marketing their eggs for a definite period of time. In no instance was this period less than one year and when the agreement between the Directors and Manager read for a longer period the members were asked to have their contracts read for a like period.

During the summer of 1922 neighbors of the original four shipping, became convinced that co-operative marketing, as carried on by the Westwood Egg Circle, was working out to the advantage of the producer. These sought membership and at the end of the season there were 22 members shipping.

Gratifying Results

At the annual meeting held early in the spring of 1923, the Directors were so well pleased with the result of the Circle's operations, as shown by the Auditor's report, that it was decided to make a canvass of all the producers in the vicinity of Westwood for the purpose of increasing their membership.

In adopting this line of procedure the Directors felt that it was worthwhile on two accounts: It gave all the producers in the vicinity an opportunity to take advantage of better marketing conditions and if successful would strengthen the Manager's position by giving him a larger volume of eggs to market.

The canvass was conducted by the Directors themselves, each one accepting an assignment of territory with which he was most familiar and the result was that the Circle during this present season marketed the product of 105 poultry keepers.

Excess Profits

For the quarterly period ending September 20th the volume amounted to 16,110 dozen at a price that gave a gross profit, over and above the local store prices, of $1,047.15, an average profit of six and one-half cents per dozen.

Arrangements are made whereby the producer can deliver his eggs at the Manager's place of business and also routes have been established along which the Manager undertakes to gather the eggs for a period covering the time from early in the Spring until late in the Fall. Should it be allowed that all the eggs received during the quarterly period mentioned were gathered on the routes the commission would amount to $402.75 which would leave a net dividend, for distribution among the members., pro rata in accordance with the number of eggs shipped, of four cents per dozen.

Efficient Management

The Directors have been most fortunate in securing business management that had a vision of the possibilities of Co-operative marketing from the producers viewpoint and are to be congratulated upon the successful outcome of their venture which will be more fully shown in their Annual Statement.

To the Westwood poultry keepers co-operative marketing, coupled with wise administration, spells success.

The following are a list of the officers:

President, W. Thompson; Vice-president, Mrs. T. A. Walsh; Secretary, B. Caldwell; Directors, P. Doherty, Donald Carlton, Robt. Collins, James Crowley, John Davidson, John F. Boland and Alex. Leitch; Director, Gordon Manley.

BRITISH SCHOOLS BETTER THAN U.S.

Declares Premier Baldwin —Child of 15 in Britain Two Years Ahead of American of Same Age

LONDON, Nov. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The assertion that the achievement of the schools of the United States is far below that of the British was made by Premier Baldwin last evening in an election speech at Bristol. Replying to a statement of a Laborite that the Conservatives were opposed to popular education, he said: "We hear a great deal about American education, but from such opportunities as I've had of consulting those who have visited American schools I do not believe that actual achievement of those schools is comparable to that of our schools. I am told that a highly competent observer has said that on the whole an American boy of 15 is in knowledge and achievement about two years behind an English pupil of the same age."

STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.— (Canadian Press.)— Speculative attention was attracted at the opening of the stock market to-day to the constructive character of the incoming railroad reports for October, which showed important gains over the showings for the corresponding month last year. This factor made the carrier stocks the centre of activity in the early dealings and fractional gains were scored by numerous representative issues under the leadership of New York Central, which maintained the highest levels since 1916. Owing to meetings today to consider the acquisition of Maxwell motor by the Studebaker Corporation, Maxwell "A" movements were carefully watched but the stocks action in the first fifteen minutes furnished no clue to the outcome of the negotiations.

Davison Chemical opened 2,500 shars at 78 1-4 to 79 and 100 at 79 1-2, up 2 3-8 to 3 5-8.

Stocks fluctuated nervously in the first hour, erratic movements in specialties like Davison Chemical and Maxwell "A" serving to keep the speculative mind in a disturbed frame. However, Baldwin's conspicuous strength was a steadying influence.

The fact that this leading industrial was able to reach new high ground on the movement in face of the general irregularity gave encouragement to continue in the operations for a rise in a number of individual issues.

Mack Trucks was in demand at the best levels of the current advance reflecting record earnings being enjoyed this year with nine months net profit of $5,870,000 already reported.

After charges, depreciation, taxes and preferred dividends the balance is equal to $17.72 a share on 283,108 shares of common.

For the full year $42 million and a final net of $23 a share on the common are looked for.

ALBERT FAILED FORM MINISTRY

Returned His Commission to President Ebert, Who May Call on Jarres —Allied Military Control Again.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—(By Carl D. Groat, United Press).—Dr. Henrich Albert not only had failed to-day to form a Cabinet but all the leading political candidates abandoned him and proposed a Ministry of their own, headed by Dr. Jarres, ex-Mayor of Duisberg.

Dr. Albert finally returned his commission and President Ebert may extend the invitation to Jarres, whom he thus far has steadfastly opposed.

Jarres, a strong Nationalist, is branded as a pan-German. General Von Seeckt, Chief of Staff, is backing him, and the Nationalists, People's Party, Centrists and Bavarian People's Party joined the new move. The inexperience and naivety of German politicians in the crisis is emphasized by the fact that President Ebert, in the face of the political revolt, adheres to Dr. Albert and wished him to continue his fruitless efforts.

Accused of Treaty Breach.

The various parties of the Reichstag to-day jointly interpellated the Government as to what it intends to do, although the principal plan of the new group is "observance of the Versailles Treaty," the point has not been clarified.

Jarres, on the other hand, has often been accused of wanting a breach of the treaty and is alleged to have fathered a plan to throw the Rhineland to France.

President Ebert has thus far refused to receive a delegation from the group supporting Jarres.

Germany thus is still without a Government, after an interval of four days since the resignation of the Stresemann Ministry, which, however, is still nominally functioning ad interim.

Dr. Albert's lack of success was attributed to the decision of all political parties in the Reichstag to oppose a non-partisan Cabinet.

Military Control.

The Allied military control of Germany will be resumed on December 1st, according to a despatch from Munich, giving details of the plans for inspection of the Bavarian barracks and munition factories.

COAL SEIZED TO BE SOLD TODAY

Customs Officials Refuse to Clear Without Proper Authority, Two of The Three Cars.

A last minute hitch has occurred in the sale of the three cars of coal seized from Miss Sophie Kohen to satisfy a judgment in favor of the city. The sale is scheduled to take place this afternoon, but Customs officials refuse to clear without proper authority, two of the three cars which are in bond.

Unless these two cars are cleared by wire from the department they cannot be sold.

IMMIGRANTS HELP CANADA PAY DEBT

This Burden Should Not Be Carried Alone by the Present Eight Million People.

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—That the debt assumed by Canada on account of her participation in the late war should not be carried alone by the present population of about eight million people, but by the aid of immigration, should be alleviated through distribution of the burden over far greater number, was the opinion expressed by Dr. George C. Creelman, for 15 years president of Ontario agricultural college, when speaking before the young men's club of the Board of Trade last night.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

Captain Mert Plunkett of the Dumbells seems to be fired with the ambition of each year giving his thousands of Canadian patrons a better revue than its predecessor of the season before—an ambition that must surely reach a limit eventually, although so far the jovial captain has succeeded in reaching hi objective. "Cheerio," the new revue in which the Dumbells opened a three night run at the Grand last night, is undoubtedly a bigger, more pretentious and more enjoyable entertainment than last year's offering—good though the latter certainly was.

With a battery of fun makers, including the "dark and stormy knights," Jack Grace and Ben Allen, the inimitable "Archibald," Stan Bennett, a new and clever artist, John Hagan, and the condensed comedian, Pat Rafferty, with the ever popular "Marjorie," (Ross Hamilton) and the perennial favourite Al. Plunkett, with Captain Plunkett himself and his great overseas orchestra, and a programme that has not one "dud" number, "Cheerio" puts over a barrage of laughter and harmony that knocks the audience out of the seats. Settings, drapings and lighting effects are more elaborate than ever, and no expense has apparently been spared in dressing the revue to best advantage.

If there is any half hour out of the five half hours of the programme that was more enjoyable than any other period, the honours must go to the opening portion of the second act when Capt. Plunkett and his orchestra hold the stage. Here was a half hour of pure deligh, in which the splendidly balanced orchestra, with Teddy Reve at the piano, and Capt. Plunkett conducting, played three or four selections, including a novel arrangement of the Barcarolle from "The Tales of Hoffman," and an amusing version of "Ba ney Google," in sparkling fashion. Capt. Plunkett sang his new composition, "Winter Will Come," most effectively, and with brothers Al and Morley, scored a triump in "Down by the Old Apple Tree," and "Little Red School House." Jack Loughhead introduced an unusual whistling specialty, and Teddy Reve, exhibiting a splendid mastery of technique and sureness of tone, won laurels with a piano solo that drew an enthusiastic encore. The orchestra half hour was followed by such a storm of applause that Captain Plunkett had to express the thanks of the organization.

Nobody that Peterboro audiences hear can put a song over better than the smiling Al Plunkett, and in "Cheerio" he has three good numbers —"There Can't be Too Many Girls," the rollicking "O, Gee, O Gosh, O Golly," and "Li'l Old Granny o' Mine," the last song being illustrated most realistically in pantomine by T. J. Lilly and Morley Plunkett. He is as convincing and effective as ever.

"Marjorie's" gowns are richer and more beautiful than in any other Dumbell production, and Ross Hamilton's impersonation grows steadily better. His song number "Building a Bungalow," with the chorus assisting, "The Life of a Rose," a beautifully staged number in which a quartette takes part, and "What I think of You," giving him a chance to show that his voice is as good as ever.

The new comedian, John Hagan, is a decided acquisition to the Dumbell family, and his work in the opening skit "In and Out," as the Sergt.-Major in the amusing ragtime near-opera "Disorderly Room," and as Mathias in "O'Brien Entertainers," stamps him as a character actor of great ability. He is responsible for much of the fun of the party.

San. Bennett, whose "Vere de Vere" characterization featured last year's show, is even more droll and entertaining in a similar role in "Cheerio." His "Yes, I have no Pyjamas," and "Archibald Numbers," went over big, and he was of great help in the skits.

So, too, was Pat Rafferty, whose grotesque make-ups and general cleverness made him stand out, and who scored an individual triumph in his most amusing mountaineer song.

As for Jack Grace and Ben Allen, the black face comedians, it is sufficient to say that they are as funny in "Cheerio" as they have been on other visits here. They have a lot of new stuff and cause many a laugh, while Grace sings "You Gotta Put up With It," in great fashion, and Allen gets a lot out of the song "On the Road to Anywhere."

Gordon Calder in the soubrette role does good work whenever called upon, and makes a hit in the "Annie Laurie" number, while T. J. Lily, Morley Plunkett, and the rest of the crew are always effective.

"Cheerio" is a great show, the best Dumbell production yet, and Peterboro is fortunate in having the attraction here for three nights. A huge audience welcomed Capt. Plunkett and his entertainers last night and crowded houses are certain for the balance of the run. Every Dumbell fan in the district—and where is there a play-goer who is not a "Dumbell" fan?—will not miss the opportunity of seeing their favorites at their best.

BRINGING UP FATHER

In the latest edition of "Bringing up Father" which is to be the new attraction at Grand theatre under the title of "Bringing Up Father on Broadway" the army of admirers on this wonderful entertainment will have an opportunityq of judging just why this parity of judging is miles ahead of its rivals. In the first place the idea of the offering is unique and distinctive. There is something about a "Father" show that lifts it above the pale of ordinary amusement. Those responsible for the production are always on the alert to keep things moving, up-to-the-minute and ever prepared to make its fame deserved. With the result that "Bringing Up Father" is not alone an institution. It is a public necessity for the world must have its laughs and forget the sidelights of tragedy and pathos. The vogue of the cartoons from which "Bringing Up Father" received its inspiration for stage purpose is far reaching. There is no doubt that Jiggs Mahoney, his wife, Maggie and Dinty Moore are as well known in the jungles as they are in Canada. They are characters who will always be remembered and probably be immortalized for seasons to come. Every criticism of the show in which these beloved characters appear there is a feeling of real happiness which is disseminated across the footlight and penetrative in its effects. So much so that the mere announcement of a "Father" play rouses an anxious theatre-going public to a high pitch of expectancy which is soon realized in screams of joy and guffaws. Such is the penalty of being able to make everybody laugh. And that is what keeps the world together—laughter. "Bringing Up Father on Broadway" is at the Grand, Friday and Saturday, November 30 and December 1, with Saturday matinee.

AT THE ROYAL.

Good Program at Royal "Stop Your Ticklin' Jock"—"Scout Pluck" a Clever Comedy

That the English productions are popular was proven again at the Royal last night when a well filled house greeted the opening of "Stop Your Ticklin' Jock." The picture is worthy of your patronage because it is different and a welcome relief from the hackneyed themes we see on screen nowadays. We will not describe it in full, but we think you will be amply repaid for a visit to the Royal. The entire proram is up to the mark and judging from remarks overheard and applause you will make no mistake in putting this program in your list to-night or Wednesday.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Gloria Swanson, winner of the contest held recently by the local Capitol Theatre, to determine the most popular movie star has a part in "Zaza," the feature for the first half of this week, that suits her to perfection. The vivacious lady is at her best in the role that seems to be a favorite of hers, that of a lady who seems to be just about on the verge of constantly breaking all bounds, but never quite oversteps them, and finally simmers down to a real, nice personage.

"Zaza" is a gorgeous role, with the gay costuming that delights the heart of the gay star. In it, the gorgeous Gloria simmers with hate, and glows with passion and bubbles over with jealousy. When she and Florianne two resplendent creatures, come to blows over the man who is making love to both, there is an episode that would be hard to equal in the annals of sheer furious emotion. When Zaza and Florianne separate, they are two wrecks and the man for whom they battle turns out later to be married, with a nice little daughter and a sedato wife.

However, this is only an anti-climax and the story moves on to a triumphant finale, with the wife conveniently dead, and Glorita free to marry him which she is supposed to do as the last fade-out leaves the silver sheet.

In the meantime, however, she has a gay time. Seven years elapse between the scenes when he makes love to her at St. Esme the Parisian suburb which makes some wonderful settings for a love idyll between the glittering lady and her cavalier. Zaza at that time is a gay Parisian comedienne, but the disappointment over her love affair and the intervening war years brings her to a more staid demeanor, and she emerges finally as the star of the Opera Comique and as beautiful and glistening as ever.

In this picture, the lovely lady is at her best, and provides a gay and glittering entertainment for her admirers. Her temperament is allowed full scope in the part of the gay Parisienne and she gives a lifelike reproduction of the character of the French star, coming later to a triumphant conclusion in her somewhat checkered love affair.

Zaza's companion, the bibulous lady with the parrot, provides an entertaining comedy element in the picture. The lady likes her drop, and her parrot accompanies her on many little excursions where she appears as the fun-maker of the piece.

GERMANY ASKS FOR A LEADER FROM BAVARIA

Adam Stegerwald, Former Premier of Prussia, Given Mandate by President Ebert and Seeks Cabinet Personnel.

NIGHT OF TERROR

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—(By Carl D. Groat, United Press).—Germany has turned to her storm centre, Bavaria, for a Chancellor.

Adam Stegerwald, born in Bavaria and former Premier of Prussia, was endeavoring to-day to knit together the fragments of a stable Cabinet, having been given a mandate by President Ebert.

There was no early word to the effect that he had any more success than the others who tried since Stresemann fell, but Stegerwald, a member of the Righ Wing of the counter party, is a politician of ability and an able economist. He is leader of the Christian Trade Unionists and a writer on sociological subjects.

Armed Law.

Stegerwald's summons to the Chancellor came at a moment when the capital seethed with the most imposing array of police, bayonets, tanks and other trapping of war seen since 1918. Searchlights played through the snow and rain straining through the slush of a disagreeable winter day to pick out Communists supposedly staging a Moscow-inspired demonstration.

Thousands of laborers, among them possibly many Communists, did attempt to enter the Lustgarten but were prevented by the police, who then camped down with stacked arms. A few of the workers were wounded, while about seventy arrests were made throughout the city. Otherwise the night, from which so much had been feared, when whisperings of a Red revolt spread, passed quietly.

Separatists In Control.

The Separatists to-day controlled practically the entire Palatinate as the result of the occupation of Frankenthalby by Rhineland forces from Spire, says a despatch from Mayence.

PUT MARKER ON HISTORIC CAVE

Associated With Slave Days When Fugitives Were Hidden There, Cave Will Be Commemorated.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., November 28 (United Press). — A marker is to be placed over the cave near where John Brown, historic character of slave days ,is supposed to have hidden slaves while aiding them to escape to the North.

The Nebraska City Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution are sponsors for the proposed monument, which will be the first of a series of markers of historic spots in this part of the country.

The "John Brown" cave is shaped like a cross, with extensions running in each direction of the compass. At one end the weatherboarding that closed the entrance still stands. A rickety log cabin is close by and 100 feet north is the well where the refugees obtained their water.

A thick, stubby undergrowth partly conceals the entrance where the fleeing negroes were hidden over the day until they could be secrtly sent at night into the hands of other friends on their journey farther north.

Under the log cabin, near the entrance, a subterranean passageway leads to the cross-shaped cave.

Old settlers stated that passageways from the cave led indirectly to points as far away as Eastern Iowa and the system of handling the escaping slaves had been carefully worked out.

Baldwin's Son on Labor Platform

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Politics is distinctly a family calling in Great Britain, likewise a game in which young men have an even chance with their elders. Some twenty men under thirty and several only slightly more than twenty-one, are seeking seats in the Commons in the present election.

Lloyd George and Ramsay MacDonald, who are such commanding figures in the Liberal and Labor parties, each has a son seeking election on the same platform as his sire, while the veteran Laborite, Arthur Henderson, also a candidate, has two sons seeking to represent their constituencies as Laborites.

There is, however, no such unanimity of political thought in the Baldwin family, for the Prime Minister's son, Oliver, is a radical Socialist, and has taken the stump to speak for Labor candidates.

URGES NEED OF HIGHER TARIFF

Vice-President of Manufacturers' Association Attributes U. S. Prosperity to Import Duties.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Nov. 27.—If Canada's tariff on classes of manufactures made-in-Canada factories was not increased, more employment more hardship, and less profit for the farmers could be the only results declared Col. Arthur F. Hatch of Hamilton, first vice-president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, in officially opening the second annual St. Catharines Industrial Exhibtion here to-night.

He thought it absolutely disgraceful that in 1921, 58,000, in 1922, 62,000 and so far in 1923, 103,000, males had left Canada for the United States to seek employment. The one reason for the fact that employment could be found beyond the border was the high tariff against classes of goods manufactured within the U.S. Canada was the only country in the world that had not raised its tariff on manufactured goods from 25 to 100 per cent. Instead, the Union government had twice lowered the tariff, and the present government had gone one better and lowered it twice more.

Of 87 manufacturers in the St. Catharines district fifty-five were represented in the booths, every line of industrial activity being represented. Col. Hatch stated that in the industries of St. Catharines $18,388,000 in invested capital was represented; 4,666 people employed; $4,420,000 was annually paid out in wages and salaries, while goods to the value of $20,900,000 were produced annually.

LIVESTOCK BURNS IN MORNING FIRE

Eight Milch Cows and Other Livestock Were Prey to Fraserville Blaze Attempted Rescuer Burned.

FRASERVILLE, Nov. 28.—(Special to The Examiner.)—Fire which started between five and six o'clock this morning completely destroyed the barns on the farm of Robert John Armstrong, three miles from Fraserville on the east line of Cavan, and took a heavy toll of live stock. Burt Armstrong, son of the owner of farm, was badly burned in his endeavours to release stock from the burning barns. The house and garage were saved through the heroic efforts of the family and neighbors, who did everything in their power to prevent spread of the flames, forming a bucket brigade which helped materially.

The family was asleep when the fire broke out, and by the time Mr. Armstrong got out the barn was blazing. The origin of the fire is unknown, one report saying it was started by some one who slept in the barn all night and another that it started outside the barn near a grain stack. The machinery was mostly all saved, as were the horses, but the fire trapped 8 milch cows, 8 pigs, 1 brood sow, about 150 hens and geese, and other stock, and destroyed the season's crop of grain. Some insurance was carried.

ASQUITH FLED BEFORE NOISE OF COMMUNISTS

Driven From Paisley Platform by Singing of "Red Flag"—Premier's Socialist Son Denounced Father's Administration

LINE-UP COMPLETE

LONDON, Nov. 23. — (Canadian Press).—Prime Minister Baldwin is going to Glasgow to-night to beard Radicals in their den, but whether his speech will be listened to is doubtful. Many anti-Labor speakers are complaining that they cannot get a hearing, especially in constituencies where the Communist element is strong, and it is thought that extreme Socialists will endeavor to break up Mr. Baldwin's meeting as they succeeded in doing when Mr. Asquith spoke in Paisley last night. A body of men, calling themselves the "Anti-Parliament Communist Federation," flourished the Red flag inscribed "Hail Bolshevik Russia," and every time Mr. Asquith attempted to speak a great outcry was raised. Finally the ex-Premier was obliged to leave the meeting while the disturbers sang the "Red Flag."

Ignoring filial scruples, the Premier's Socialist son Oliver, in his first speech at Buckingham last night, denounced his father's Government, asserted that all the administration done was "twiddle its fingers," and declared that there was nobody in the Cabinet to tell the members to "get on with their jobs."

Nominations All In.

Now that the nominations for Oxford University and the University of Wales have been held, the line of battle in the general election is completed. Two Conservatives and one Liberal have been nominated for Oxford University's two seats, and the Liberal and Independent Liberal and the third candidate who proclaims himself an Independent Christian Pacifist, are in the field for one seat of the University of Wales.

The total nominations, including fifty acclamations, number 1,446, comprised as follows:

Conservatives, 551; Liberals, 437; Labor, 434; Conservative Free Traders, 7; Independents, 17.

DOUBLE CROSSED BY RUM PIRATES.

A Liquor Dealer Thrown Into the Sea After Delivering Cargo.

LUBEC, Maine, Nov. 27.—Victor Chaisson, of Bangor, alleged rum runner, who was brought here yesterday morning in a chilled condition from being in the water several hours near Campobello Island, N.B., was the victim of rum pirates, he asserted to-day. Chaisson lost his cargo of holiday liquor and nearly lost his life.

He had purchased 150 cases of liquor, he said, and had taken the cargo from St. Stephen, N.B., to Campobello. The transfer of the liquor to a larger boat by two men was nearly completed when the men started up their engine and pushed Chaisson into the water as he attempted to jump aboard.

Chaisson was able to keep himself from drowning by clinging to an automobile tire that was used as a bumper and by tieing himself to the craft with the bowline. He had not been robbed of his cash, amounting to $45.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—For the first time since the German mark started on its spectacular decline New York banks yesterday refused to quote it, even nominally. Previously the banks, which had discontinued regular dealings in German exchange, were willing to make a nominal rate. One broker quoted marks at 20 cents a trillion.

The note threatens in the event of non-compliance that Jugo-Slavia will take the sanctions provided for by the peace treaty.

Laughs at Hangman

The law soon will exact its due. Arthur Covell, crippled astrologist of Marshfield, Ore., must die for his part in the "star" murder of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Ebba Covell. And he is smiling here as jail attaches carry him back to his cell after the court has uttered the words that in a few weeks will send him to the gallows.

INVESTIGATING COST OF PRODUCING WHEAT

United States Tariff Commission Told That Canadian Farmers Can Produce More Cheaply Than His United States Competitor.

OPENING SESSION.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press.)— The United States' Tariff Commission yesterday began an investigation into the cost of producing wheat in Canada and the United States. The investigation has resulted from the proposal of the Wheat Council of the United States for a 50 per cent. increase in the 30 cent duty on wheat.

While the Commission had announced that the day's hearing would be confined to a discussion of the scope of its investigation under the flexible provisions of the Tariff Act, representatives of agriculturists in the wheat growing States, presented for study a mass of data presuming to show that the Canadian farmer can produce wheat far more cheaply than can the farmer in the United Sttaes.

The Commission's next step will be to hold a conference at St. Paul on Monday to determine finally the schedule to be used in its investigation on the farm, which will begin immediately thereafter. Indications are that the field investigations in Canada and the United Sttaes will occupy from two to six weeks, after which a public hearing will be held there. The Commission's report with recommendations will then be made to the President.

Freight Rates Lower.

Testimony was presented in an attempt to prove that the average cost of wheat transportation in Canada at present rates averaged one cent per bushel for 86 miles, while rates in the United States averaged one cent for 37 miles .Canadian growers, it was stated, enjoyed an advantage of about eight cents a bushel on all wheat shipped through lower rates. In addition to the lower freight rates, the Canadian growers were represented as being able to produce wheat this year a 46 cents a bushel less than the United States farmer.

As the hearing progressed it became apparent that a mass of figures intended to support the idea that the present 30 cent rate does not measure the difference of production costs in Canada and the United States would be put in.

Representative Sidney Anderson of Minnesota was the chief speaker to-day. He is the member of Congress who first urged the Commission to recommend an increase in the tariff rate on wheat.

Mr. Anderson's argument was ,in effect that on the basis of land values, larger yields per acre, lower taxation and lower freight rates, the Canadian producer has a great advantage over his competitor in the United States. He referred especially to growers in the Dakotas and Minnesota. He stressed the fact that in recent years land values in these states had increased rapidly and enormously and much more than in Canada.

Mr. Anderson presented figures to show that the Canadian cost of production, considering all factors, was less than half the cost of production in the United States.

Losing on Crops.

Rex. C. Willard, of North Dakota, formerly with the North Dakota Agricultural College, addressed the Commission and sought to show that on an eleven year average, the production cost per bushel in the United States was $1.58, as against $1.22 in Canada. In 1923, he said, the cost was $1.49 in the United States and $1.03 in Canada. He also sought to show that North Dakota farmers were losing money on their crops this year. While his figures differed from Mr. Anderson, they were directed to support the proposition that the United States farmer is handicapped in competing with his Canadian neighbor.

Representatives Young and Burntess, of North Dakota, accepted the assertions of Anderson and Willard.

Oklahoma Bans Wearing of Masks

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press)—The State Senate yesterday adopted a clause in the bill to regulate secret orders making it a misdemeanor to wear a mask. The action was greeted by proponents of Klan legislation as the greatest concession made thus far by the group opposing strict regulatory laws.
The vote was 2 4to 13.

The Commission denied the request of former Senator McCumber, counsel for the Wheat Council, that the investigation be limited to the United States' spring wheat States and the corresponding area in Canada, but stated that if evidence respecting competitive conditions tended to show the scope of the inquiry should be limited it would further consider the matter.

The Commission submitted for examination and criticism its tentative programme for field operations. The wheat growers' representatives insisted that all factors in the growing of wheat be considered by the Commission .Objection was made by Mr. McCumber to using rental as a basis in determining cost of production.

Questions by Chairman Marvin of the Commission indicated its report would include data on transportation costs in the United States and Canada and the Wheat Council's representatives were asked to present any information possible on any subsidy or equivalent granted by Canada through freight rates.

BOILING COFFEE KILLED A CHILD.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—A drink of boiling coffee was responsible for the death here of James Gallo, four, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gallo, No. 26 West avenue, Patchogue, L.I.

The boy, who had been forbidden to drink coffee, poured a cupful from a pot on the kitchen range while other members of the family were in the dining room. One hasty gulp and he screamed.

A physician found that the tissues of the boy's throat had been burned and took him to the Patchogue Hospital. A silver tube was inserted into James' throat to enable him to breathe. He died shortly after the operation.

BANK MANAGER WAS GUEST AT A CIVIC BANQUET

Guest of Honor is Now Under Arrest on Charge of Taking Bank Funds

CHURCH FUNDS GO

STRATFORD, Nov. 28.— (Canadian Press.)— Surrendering himself to the police yesterday in connection with shortages in the accounts of the Mitchell branch of the Bank of Montreal, Everett E. Lewthwaite, of Toronto ,former manager of the bank, later confessed before Magistrate Makins, to having stolen money from the institution. Charges of theft were laid against Lewthwaite when an official of Knox Presbyterian church at Mitchell, declared before the Mayor that the former manager had taken about eighteen hundred dollars of the Forward Movement funds of his church.

Lewthwaite told police authorities that shortages would amount to about fourteen thousand dollars. He went to Mitchell to-day, accompanied by two police officers, to assist officials of the branch bank to straighten out accounts.

Only a few weeks ago, on the occasion of his resignation from the bank, Lewthwaite was the guest of honour at a public function and was presented with a gold watch.

CRUSHED UNDER HEAVY MACHINE

ST. CATHARINES, Nov 27. — George Hill, 36 years of age, met his death at the Independent Rubber Works plant at Merriton about 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. He and his father came from Waterloo, where they conduct a small rubber plant for the manufacture of rubber mats and heels, and purchased some of the machinery which has been in the mill since the rubber works discontinued operation.

His father had returned to Waterloo to receive the goods while his son remained in Merriton to prepare the shipment.

While he and his assistants were taking some hydraulic weights from the mill to the truck, one of the weights which weigh about 482 lbs., fell upon the man, and rendered him unconscious, the principal injuries being in the stomach.

He was at once carried to the office, but died almost immediately.

He was then removed to Grobb's undertaking rooms where an inquest will likely be held.

Harvester May Lose Both Feet

BRANDON, Man., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press). — Without friends or money, "Willie" Jones, 12-year-old British harvester, grew tired of life two weeks ago and decided to die. He crawled into a straw stack on a farm near Rapid City, Man., and was found Monday with both feet so badly frozen that they will probably have to be amputated. Jones is now in the hospital at Brandon. The boy maintains he was in the stack for two weeks.

FRANCE OFFERS TRADE AVENUES

Lecturer With Canadian Exhibition Train Found French Interested in the Dominion.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27— There is a splendid opening for Canadian trade at the present time in Europe, particularly France, according to Dr. H. M. Ami, of the Canadian Geological Survey, who has just returned from France after spending three months lecturing with the Canadian Exhibition train. The exhibition train created much interest in things Canadian in France, according to Dr. Ami. Thousands of people in all parts of France saw the exhibition of Canadian natural resources and Canadian manufactured articles. Many questions were asked about Canadian investments and the French people seemed very interested in the Dominion.

Dr. Ami was in southern France in May and June collecting geological specimens for Canadian museums and universities when he was asked to accompany the Canadian exhibition train. He had shipped 35,000 specimens of prehistoric implements of the Stone Age which he had collected in Southern France and Northern Italy. These were invaluable, and included weapons of numerous types, pertaining to practically all the stages in the history of human culture.

ORIENT BUYING FROM DOMINION

Important Market For Wheat, Flour and Lumber Developing in Far East.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—An important market for Canadian lumber wheat and flour and fruit is being developed in the Far East according to Mr. A. Brostedt, Oriental manager of the Canadian National Railways who has arrived in Montreal from Hong Kong on business.

"Large quantities of British Columbia fir are being used in China for the construction of railways, wharves and work of a similar type and more will be required when the political condition of the country becomes staple," said Mr. Brostedt.

"Canadian wheat is competing successfully with the Manchurian-grown wheat and is being carried in large quantities to Oriental ports by the Canadian Government Merchant Marine. There is also a big demand for Canadian milled flour in spite of the fact that the Chinese maintain a large number of native mills. This flour is used in the manufacture of pastry and native dishes."

The sales room,which the Canadian Government through Trade Commissioner Dr. Ross has established in Shanghai is spoken of in high terms by Mr. Broatedt who says it is doing much to promote Canadian trade.

The postponement was made at the request of the British representative on the Council of the League of Nations.

LONG HAULS OF GRAIN DRIVING FARMER AWAY

Royal Commission Told of Railway Extensions That Were Promised And Not Fulfilled.

OTHER COMPLAINTS.

DAUPHIN, Man., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Urgent appeals for the Royal Grain Commission to use its influence to get the Canadian National Railway branch of the St. Rose-Rokert extension completed as early as possible, was the burden of the story told by a farmers' delegation here yesterday.

Several residents of that district asserted that in three years more than two thousand people left the municipality of St. Lawrence, chiefly returned soldiers, Ontario and English farmers. It was a pitiful story of privation they told. The branch line into the St. Lawrence municipality is one of those that was to have been constructed by the Canadian National Railways if the grant had been made by Parliament last spring.

The chairman said the commission had no authority as to securing the construction of railways. There are agencies between and the application might be made to the National Railways and something accomplished.

The chairman said the commission would write the National Railway officers giving them the information secured, but with the understanding that this commission has no authority to hold out any hope.

Further complaints were filed of dissatisfaction with spreads and prices.

Lack Facilities.

Albert Hudson, of East Bay, fifty miles from Dauphin, said St. Rose, 17 miles away was his nearest loading point. Farmers are moving out as fast as they can get out, he said, owing to lack of railway facilities. A grade was within five miles of his place and the survey was completed fourteen years ago, when he started homesteading there. The land was being abandoned and in two years would go out of cultivation, he said. Some had gone to the United States and others gone out to work. Hudson said there was a loading platform at St. Rose but the people far away did not use it as there were three elevators and such small amounts were grown by each farmer that none could load a full car. To haul grain 25 miles to a car would run too much into demurrage before the loading could be completed.

Grades "Skinned."

W. J. Ward, M.P. for Dauphin, told the commission dirty grain had become a very serious problem in this section. In some sections farmers with small cleaning machines travel around cleaning grain. They could clean a car every day. They use big fanning mills. The cost was one cent a bushel. He could not say that this grain was cleaned to grade. This is the first season this plan has been adopted. They have all the work they require. Ward claimed the grades are being "skinned." He gave this illustration. He threshed three cars, 63 pounds to the bushel, the first car graded one, the second number two and the third three, though all came off the same farm. He could not account for this.

JUDGE POSTPONES LAWYER'S DISPUTE

In Trial of Alleged Conspiracy to Circulate Forged Bills.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—"Time," cried Judge Monet, intervening in a heated dispute between counsel here this afternoon. "The next bout is fixed for Dec. 4th."

The trial was one of conspiracy to circulate $20, $50 and $100 bills of the Federal Reserve Bank of the United States and the accused are Dr. Rod Langlois, veterinary surgeon and Albert Brault. It arises out of the sensational raid of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on a gang of forgers at Ste. Therese Island in the St. Lawrence River near this city, made in 1922. The supposed ring-leaders in the case are now serving jail terms. Counsel were in dispute in connection with an alleged confession from the accused.

CAMPBELLFORD SCHOOL BOARD HAD A MEETING

Will Construct a Drain to Carry Water Off Gymnasium Floor of New High School.

CAMPBELLFORD, November 28.— A special meeting of the School Board was held last night. Members present: Messrs. D. W. Douglas (chairman), Dr. Watson, J. S. Irwin, J. A. Loucks, D. J. Lynch, W. M. Stephens, Geo. O'Sullivan, J. M. Arnold, J. C. Birmingham, and J. L. Hoover.

The minutes of the last special meeting, held in place of the regular meeting, were read and adopted.

Reports of committees: J. L. Hoover, who was appointed to wait on Mr. James Archer regarding the insurance on the present High School, gave his report as follows. Mr. Archer stated that the reason for the present high rate was that a change had been made when the new policy was written, but promised that when the policy expired they would get the new rate, which came into force last April.

The question of drainage at the new High School was the next matter of business. J. A. Irwin, convener of the Building Committee, said that the syphon was installing and was giving satisfaction. What the result would be when the spring freshet came he could not tell, but it is left on opening for uneasiness. He also said that the Building Committee had gone thoroughly into the matter of drainage, and Mr. Hay, the consulting engineer, had made a survey and taken levels of the school property, and found that a sewer could be put through, crossing private property for which they had a permit. This would give four feet of a fall below the gymnasium floor, and would cost, when completed, $1,900.00.

Mr. Hay then showed the plan of the sewer to the Board.

Mr. Arnold claimed that the school should have been built two feet higher and that the architect should be held responsible for the error of not looking into the matter of drainage.

Mr. Lynch said that it was no error, for there were no sewer levels available at that time.

Mr. Hoover stated that he had visited the new High School in the afternoon, and found the water in the well to be down twenty-four inches below the level of the boiler-house floor. The gymnasium floor is twelve inches lower than this floor, leaving the water fourteen inches from the lowest floor in the school. He was opposed to the building of the new High School in the first place, but now that the school is built, nothing must be left undone that would prevent damage to the school in any way.

He was satisfied that the syphon would be capable of taking care of the water in the spring if a sewer could be put in that would give four feet of a fall and he would be in favour of the Building committee going ahead with the work. He made this a motion. It was seconded by J. A. Loucks and carried. Yeas and nays were called for. All voted yea but two, Mr. Arnold and W. M. Stephens, who voted nay.

A number of accounts were passed. The matter of open drainage was then brought up. Moved by Mr. Irwin and seconded by Mr. Arnold that they have open drains to the two lowest places in the school property where it can be taken care of by sewers.—Carried.

Mr. Haig reported that nothing definite had been done about the uniforms for the cadets. Mr. Grey reported that the rating of the present High school was left over until they got in the new High school, when a far better rating could be secured.

The chairman then called upon Mr. Keenan to state his opinion about the renting of the school property for the summer months. He said he thought he was overcharged, for the had received only half a ton of hay and no pasture, as part of the ground was taken up with building material. But he was willing to pay what was right. The chairman then asked him what he thought was right and he said nine dollars. Mr. Douglas then left it with the Property committee to decide.

Moved by J. L. Hoover and seconded by J. C. Birmingham that Mr. Keenan get a reduction of three dollars.—Carried.

The question of the equipment for the new High school was then discussed. Moved by Mr. Irvin and seconded by Mr. Birmingham, that J. L. Hoover, J. M. Bygott and Geo. O'Sullivan be a committee to go into the matter with Mr. Greig, Principal of the High school, and find out what was needed, and power be given this committee to order the same.—Carried.

Motion of adjournment was then carried.

REFUSE CHRISTIAN BURIAL FOR BARRY

Bishop Puts Hunger Striker in Same Class as Suicide.

LONDON, Nov. 28.— (Canadian Press.) —Bishop Cohalan, of Cork, has refused to allow religious exercises which constitute a Christian burial, for the bodyof Commandant Denis Barry, who died from the effects of a hunger strike at Newbridge, and whose body reached Cork last evening, says a despatch from Cork to-day. Explaining the reasons for his refusal, Bishop Cohalan says he regrets very much being obliged to take the course he did, but declares that if it was his own brother who took the course Commandant Barry took, he would deal with the case in the same way. "Republicanism in Ireland," the message quotes the Bishop as adding, "has for the last twelve months been a wicked and insidious attack on the church and the souls of the faithful committed to the church's care. As by church law anyone who deliberately takes his own life, is deprived of a Christian burial, I shall interpret the law of the church and refuse Christian burial. I feel bound to do it."

CAMPBELLFORD REEVE SAYS FLOODED SCHOOL NO TRIBUTE TO BOARD

Refuses to Run in Mayoralty Contest but is Candidate for Re-election to Reeveship-Condemns School Policy.

PERMANENT ROADS?

Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly grant me space in your valuable paper to reply to a rumor that has been circulated in the town of Campbellford to the effect that I would be a candidate for the Mayoralty in the coming municipal election for 1924. I do not know by whom the rumor was started, but I believe I could make a very good guess as to the origin and the motive.

However, I wish to state here definitely, that it is not my intention to offer myself as a candidate for that honorable position.

I have been asked several times during the past summer if I would accept nomination for the position of Mayor in the coming municipal election, and my answer in every case has been no, stating that I had a few important things started in County Council and would like to return in 1924 to undertake their successful completion if possible, and for these reasons it is my intention to again offer myself as a candidate for the Reeveship.

And in soliciting again the support of the electorate of Campbellford, I do so entirely upon the merits of actions during the past year. I have not in any way betrayed the people's confidence and trust which they placed in me, and am prepared to accept their verdict with a clear conscience.

I trust it may not be made necessary to as I do not wish to enter at any length into the issue of the school question, as I feel sure that the electors of Campbellford have not as yet allowed the whole circumstances to pass out of their memory, and I venture to suggest that the whole question is revived and refreshed in the minds of the taxpayers again by the rather boastful announcement of my opponent-to-be, ex-Reeve Davidson, when in last week's issue of the Examiner that his principles and attitude upon the school question had been vindicated during this year's events — interpreted in other words, that the ratepayers had been muzzled and prevented from exercising their franchise upon two large money by-laws that was put across by a few.

And the electors are certainly justified in resenting the statement of an ex-member of the school board, when he said that the electorate was not qualified to vote intelligently upon the question of a high school and site.

And this statement came vividly to my mind when I just recently had a look through the new school building with its gymnasium flor two or three feet below the town sewerage system, and water to the depth of 14 inches over the entire floor; and I was informed by one who knows, that late and modern invention for draining high schools, the automatic syphon, was in operation steadily for two days before there was any visible reduction in the 14 inches of water, until the frost helped some by checking the inflow, and in a little over six days the bottom was found. The question I ask is this: Could the judgment of the electors have been exercised with any less intelligence?

We may need a little more school room, but in the judgment of the bulk of the people of Campbellford, the extra school space is not so urgently needed as a permanent improvement of our road system, and modern home conveniences for the general health of our children.

The town council was urged by the school board a short time ago to proceed with the digging and completing of the Rannie street sewer up to the new school, in order to draw off the water that was flooding the foor, to the sewer was completed, but it failed to take away the water; then the new idea, the syphon, was brought into action, and I am informed by those who know, that it too will never be a success.

What may we expect next during the "experimental stage?" Perhaps another $10,000 sewer.

And how long must we wait for the modern street roads.

Let the People Say How Long.

If the tax payers can afford it, I am satisfied they will approve of modern improvements if allowed to put first things first.

Yours Faithfully,

J. A. ANDERSON,

Reeve, Campbellford, Ont.

Use Ice Boats in Liquor Blockade

DETROIT, November 27. — Ice boats probably will be added to the equipment of the prohibition enforcement unit here, in an effort to maintain an effective blockade against liquor running from Canada, E. L. Porterfield, Assistant National Prohibition Commissioner, announced to-day.

Declaring that during the last ten days a blockade of unprecedented effectiveness has been made along the border from Port Huron to Monroe, Mich., a distance of approximately 100 miles, Mr. Porterfield said that when the ice forms, the prohibition forces would concentrate at points where ice-crossings are possible. "It is probable then," he added, "that we will add ice-boats to our equipment."

GAVE AN ADDRESS ON AFRICAN WAYS

Items of Interest From Hastings and the District

HASTINGS, Nov 28—In place of the regular Epworth League service of the Methodist Church, on Monday evening an interesting lecture was given by the Rev. I. C. Wickmore on, Africa, its people and customs.

The service was opened by singing "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun" after which Rev. M. L. Hinton lead in prayer. In addressng the gathering the speaker told of his first trip to Africa. He was stationed on the Congo River.

The only means of transportation was by the natives carrying all heavy loads on their heads.

The country being all hills, valleys and very thickly wooded, small paths are the only highways.

The life of the natives is very short due to much damp weather causing fevers which are so frequent

The houses are made of mud with a hole in the centre of the roof to allow the smoke to escape, and a small hole in the sidewall for an entrance.

The people are finer featured than those of Northern Africa who are very thick lipped and homely.

In closing Mr. Wickware said he would like very much to go back again but owing to the serious illness of his wife caused by the fevers of Africa it would be impossible for him to do so.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr Wickware by the League and the meeting closed by the singing of a hymn and prayer.

A very successful auction sale was held on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. William Faux, Asphodel.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrup, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Plan to Recognize Medical Diplomas.

LONDON, Nov. 27.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—Addressing the general medical council here this evening the president, Sir Donald Macalister, said the executive committee was continuing negotiations with the provinciaul medical authorities in Canada with a view to formulating a uniform and comprehensive statement of the conditions on which recognition in future should be accorded diplomas and degrees registerable in the dominions.

A considerable measure of agreement had been reached on the question, Sir Donald said, and the committee expected that by the next session of the medical council the difficulties in the way would be removed and satisfactory arrangement of the matter completed.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

Lloyd George's complaint that the Baldwin Government's song of victory is played on the triangle—a neat reference to the number of triangular contests—is justified in the light of the nomination statistics.

If there was any real effort to unite the Liberal and Labour parties on a free trade issue it has clearly failed, for we find the Labour party putting 435 candidates in the field, as against 456 Liberal candidates, while the Conservatives have nominated 529.

That means that in more than 200 constituencies there will be three-cornered contests, affording a splendid chance for the Baldwin standardbearers to slip into victory as minority candidates, as was the case a year ago.

Nomination day found the Government in a much more advantageous position than earlier predictions anticipated. With thirty-five candidates returned by acclamation and with the opposition forces cutting each other's throats in over two hundred constituencies, the indications are now that the Baldwin administration will be sustained by a fairly substantial majority.

The capital levy policy has injured Labour's chances, frightening off many votes that might otherwise have gone to the Labour party, and it would not be surprising if the United Liberals were to be the official opposition when the election returns are complete.

THE DUTY OF YOUNG MEN.

Sir Robert Borden generally has something to say that is worth hearing on the rare occasions when he makes a public utterance today, says the Montreal Star. His address to the Young Men's Canadian Club over the week-end was marked by a pointed appeal to the young man of today to get up and work instead of contenting himself with abstention from politics. He laid the blame for dirty politics upon those who maintained the Pharisaical attitude. "It is the duty of every one of you to go in and make dirty politics clean," he said.

In saying this, Sir Robert put his finger upon a very sort spot. If there is one thing with which the Canadian public may be reproached with justice, it is its indifference to existing conditions. Apparently on the score that they do not care to mix up with what they hold to be contaminated politics, there are scores of thousands of electors who take no share in the political activities of the country, and among them the younger element is conspicuous. Yet it is precisely upon this younger element that Canada must depend for any progress it is to make—must rely, if it is to keep its place in the race with other nations.

Citizenship which confers privileges also involves responsibilities, and the man who is prepared to enjoy the one but shirks the burden of the other is a poor citizen. No progress was ever made without a series of preliminary failures. It is the persistent fight put up by minorities that effects reform in the long run. MANY CANDIDATES.

The fact that eighty-three candidates have been nominated for the various municipal offices in Lindsay is a sign of awakening interest upon which the good people of Lindsay are to be congratulated.

Half of them, it is true, will not accept nomination, but that does not alter the fact that the ratepayers took sufficient interest in municipal affairs to place over four score citizens in nomination.

The size of the field must be accepted as a proof of greater concern on the part of the people as to the personnel of their ruling bodies than has usually been the case.

It is only by such concern and the shaking off of the apathy that usually exists in connection with such matters that good civic government can be obtained, and Peterborough would be the better off for a similar display when the local nomination day arrives.

Many other centres share with Lindsay in this evidence of a revival of interest in municipal politics, and on the whole the number of candidates nominated on Monday in municipalities where the annual election is held next month is large enough to be accepted as an encouraging indication of a real awakening.

If the infection spreads to Peterborough between now and nomination day the ratepayers may have a larger field from which to make their choice on nomination day.

THE TAX ON CANADIAN INCOMES.

Last year the Dominion Government collected $177,484,161 in the way of special taxes, of which sum $78,684,355 was imposed on the incomes of the people. Without going into distressing comparisons with the tax situation in years anterior to 1914, let it be said that this special levy was much more than sufficient to take care of the interest on our war debt, plus pensions and the cost of soldiers' civil re-establishment. There is a growing widespread feeling that the Government should relax its grip on the pocketbooks of the people.

That feeling will be rather intensified by the announcement that our American neighbors are about to reduce the federal income tax. At all events, the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Andrew Mellon, has brought forward a proposition having that end in view, and there is no reason for doubting that it will be given effect at the next session of Congress. Great Britain has already made a considerable reduction in the scale of taxation, co-incident with a lowering of the national debt.

It may not be pleasant to contrast the relative position of Canadians and Americans in the matter of the income tax; but it will, at least, be informative. In the case of a married man or woman, having a stated income, the comparison under the Canadian scale and the proposed American scale is as follows:

Income.	Canadian Scale.	American Scale.
$3,000	$ 40	nil
4,000	80	15.75
5,000	120	38.25
6,000	160	72.00
7,000	270	99.00

It should be explained that the American rates just given apply to the head of a family. In Canada all married men and women are so classified. In the case of unmarried persons, whose exemption is limited to $1,000, the comparison between the rates of the two countries is as follows:

Income.	Canadian Scale.	American Scale.
$2,000	$ 40	22.50
3,000	80	45.00
4,000	120	67.50
5,000	160	90.00
6,000	210	135.00
7,000	310	180.00

In the law at present in force in the United States there is a discrimination against unmarried persons which carries the tax rate above the Canadian level. For example, a single man across the line, with an income of $7,000, now pays $350, as against $310 paid by an unmarried man on this side of the boundary. On the other hand, the head of a family in Canada, with an income of $7,000, pays but $270, as compared with $330 now paid by a man or a woman in a similar position in the United States.

The objection to special taxes is that they lower the saving power of the people, and to that extent divert capital from production to the public treasury. When the amount is large, as it is in Canada, this diversion becomes a serious matter. If courageous retrenchment in public administration were given effect, there is a growing conviction that relief might be found from the present heavy drain.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Baldwin party will lead the British election sweepstakes until December 6 in any event.

Lloyd George's speeches lose none of their deftness. Witness his charge that the Premier's song of victory is played on the triangle.

The statement that there are 2,000 "fake" medical doctors practicing in the United States is alarming. A "quack" doctor is more deadly than a bandit with a revolver.

Those crooks who attempted to hold up a funeral procession near Bowmanville must have been apprentice highwaymen who will work up to high speed later on.

Increased interest in municipal affairs is indicated by the number of candidates nominated in the various centres in which the annual elections take place in December. It is a healthy sign.

One feat to the credit of prohibition that cannot be taken away is that it has found the fastest transportation to Mexico in the history of the world. A power boat leaving Belleville "for Mexico" is often back the next day for another load.

The best answer to the arguments of the anti-vaccinationists is that over 200,000 children were given the Schick test for diphtheria in New York without the least sign of harmful results to any of them.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, November 28. — Monday saw the best clean up of cattle at the Union Stock Yards for a first day of the week in the past two months. After noon it was almost impossible to get any good butchers' bullocks, and the sales for the day were 4,476 head. This left only 400 of the fresh cattle and last week's holdover of over 300. First receipts this morning were light, being 584 cattle, 103 calves, 1,610 hogs, and 273 sheep and lambs.

The exporters made a few purchases yesterday, and will feed them until next week. For 66 steers they paid an average of $6.40 a cwt., and for 14 bulls $3.75 to $4.75 a cwt.

There were not many choice butchers in yesterday. The U.F.O. had 8 choice butchers, for which a bid of $7.25 a cwt. was made, but it was decided to hold them until to-day.

Any butchers 900 to 1,200 pounds each, good to choice, held from 6 to 61-2 cents, and good mediums sold up to 5 1-2 cents. Light butchers, around 800 pounds each, sold at $4.00 a cwt. Good to choice are scarce, and the right kind of these are hard to buy.

Butchers' cows are selling quite steady. The average useful cow, well finished, is easily sold at $4.50 a cwt. and extra fat or heifer cows are bringing up to $5.00 a cwt. The few good bulls coming in sell from $4.50 to $4.75 a cwt. A good trade was done in stockers on Monday. Light yearlings sold from 3 to 3 1-2 cents, and two-year-olds at $4.00 to $4.35 a cwt.

Light receipts of calves this week are serving to keep the prices steady, and there is demand enough to keep choice calves up to 11 cents a pound. For medium calves the range is from 8 to 9 cents, and heavy calves are making from 5 to 6 cents.

The lamb market is holding quite steady for the light good quality of lambs, 80 to 90 pounds each, but the heavy lambs are easier. Light lambs were selling yesterday morning at 10 3-4 cents a pound, while heavy lambs were a full cent a pound below this. This is hitting the heavy buck lambs hard, and is expected to bring more general castration next season. Choice sheep and breeding ewes are selling firm at 6 1-2 to 7 cents a pound.

Hog prices were unsettled yesterday morning, and the packers say that Old Country cables do not warrant a higher price than $7.00 a cwt. f.o.b. The shipments are large, and if the packers combine it looks as though they will drop the price 50 cents to $7.25 a cwt f.o.b. No hogs were reported sold yesterday morning below $7.75 a cwt. f.o.b.

LONDONERS HEAR TOWER IS SAFE FOR 1,000 YEAR

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Tower of London is safe for another 1,000 years, says an authority, despite the rumors that the ancient buildings were badly cracked and were in danger of collapse.

"What really occurred," says the expert, "is that a weakness in the tower, caused by its great age, was detected and remedied."

Berlin's First Snow Cools Spirit of Communists in Demonstration

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—A Communist demonstration, which was staged yesterday afternoon in front of the old Imperial Palace, and which was more in the nature of a hunger riot than anything else, fizzled out soon after seven o'clock this evening. The authorities had been extremely anxious because of the threats of the Communists, and when a crowd of several thousand, mostly unemployed, had assembled in the Lustgarten, an imposing array of police was at hand to quell disturbances.

The crowd sang Communist songs, but the police were not called upon to do more than fire some shots in the air; whereupon the manifestants dispersed, all the more quickly as the first snow had fallen in Berlin yesterday and turned the streets into quagmires.

An attempt to erect a barricade in Breitestrasse behind the palace was frustrated by the police. Several assemblies in the suburbs were also easily dispersed by charges, the police using their clubs. A few of the demonstrators were injured and seventy-seven of them were placed under arrest.

LITTLE GERMAN BAND FAILS TO SELECT LEADER

Five Bourgeois Parties Striking Discordant Notes While "Wanted" Sign Still Flies at Chancellory.

Grooming a Prussian.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press). — Germany was still without a Chancellor or an effective Government at a late hour last night, and the five bourgeois parties, which were supposed to constitute a new coalition bloc, were far from an accord which would give them a united front in the Reichstag.

Adam Stegerwald, former Premier of Prussia and Centrist leader, is now being groomed for the Chancellorship, Dr. Heinrich F. Albert having abandoned his efforts to form a ministry because of inability to find support in the Reichstag. Stegerwald, however, has not yet been unqualifiedly accepted by all the parties slated for the new coalition. The German Nationalists have complicated the negotiations by demanding that they be included in the Prussian Coalition Government, which at the present time, is composed of Socialists, the People's party, Democrats and Clericals.

Prussians Shut Out.

Since the dissolution of the feudal Prussian House of Lords, which was a citadel of Prussian aristocracy and demi-royalty, the reactionaries have not been represented in Prussian Cabinets. They now are seeking rehabilitation thereby making participation in the new Government contingent on similar representation in Prussia.

Adam Stegerwald was born in 1874, is chairman of the Executive Board of Christian Trade Unions and was Prussian Premier in 1920. He is attached to the Right wing of the Clerical party, which sharply opposed Chancellor Wirth when he was in office. Stegerwald for many years has been actively identified with the organization of Christian trade unions in various European countries, and is the author of numerous works on the labor movement and economic subjects.

MINORITY VOTE MAY PREVAIL IN MANY CONTESTS

Liberals and Labor Both Opposed to Baldwin's Protection Policy But Are Fighting Each Other

ON OTHER ISSUES.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press). — Mr. Lloyd George's assertion that Premier Baldwin's 'song of victory was played on the triangle," is further emphasized and extremely confusing and complex nature of the coming elections evidenced by an analysis of the nomination. It must be remembered that the election is practically on the sole question of protection versus free trade, and that, roughly, the Conservatives represent protection, while the Liberals and Laborites equally represent free trade.

The analysis shows that straight fights in the electoral contests are distributed as follows:

Conservative versus Liberal, 126; Conservative vs. Labor, 103; Liberal vs. Labor, 53. As between Liberal and Labor the election must be fought out not on the protection issue, but on such questions as a capital levy and nationalization of industries, which divide the Liberals from the Laborites.

Then there will be a large number of three-cornered contests, 263, in any one of which a member may be elected on a minority vote, since there is no provision in British elections for proportional representation or second preferencevotes.

LABOR AND THE EMPIRE.

LONDON, November 27. — J. H. Thomas, railway labor leader and parliamentary candidate, speaking at Barrow to-night, said that those who called the members of the Labor party Little Englanders, and declared the Labor party did not believe in the Empire, were "deliberate liars." He added"We want to see the Empire great, but we don't measure greatness by bloody victories or the size of the army and navy."

CHURCHILL'S CERTAINTY.

LONDON, November 27. — Winston Churchill, speaking at Leicester to-day, said: "Whether we get Baldwin off the front bench, I don't know —but I am certain we will get McDonald off the front opposition bench."

BRITAIN WAITS FOR REPORT ON SHIP SEIZURES

Will Protest Capture of Rum Schooners Outside Three-Mile Limit—New Treaty Unsigned.

LIQUOR CONFISCATED.

LONDON Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press). — The British Government has requested of its Charge D'Affaires in Washington a full report on the circumstances surrounding the seizure of the British schooner Tomako off the New Jersey coast and the British schooner Island Home off the Texas coast by United States officials. If the report establishes that the vessels seized are British-owned and were taken outside the three-mile limit, Great Britain will formally protest their seizure on the ground that the treaty giving the right to confiscate alcoholic contraband beyond the United States three-mile limit neither has been signed nor ratified.

In the reports concerning the negotiations for the treaty the British officials appear to be interested over constant reference to "the twelve-mile limit" as though Secretary of State Hughes' proposal for an extension of the usual three-mile limit already has been enacted into law. They say they desire to make it clear that there is no such thing as a fixed twelve-mile limit, but that under the pending agreement, the United States right of seizure will be limited by the general term," an hour's steaming distance from United States shores."

CREW BEFORE JURY

GALVESTON, Texas, Nov. 27— Captain W. H. Farrell, master of the British schooner Island Home, and eight members of his crew, were bound over to the Federal Court Grand Jury at preliminary here to-day by U.S. Commissioner C. O. Dibrell on charges of unlawfully importing liquor. Pleas of not guity were entered.

The Island Home, bound from Georgetown, Grand Cayman, for Nassau, via Matamoras, was seized by Customs officers Friday while anchored off Galveston Island. Bonds of $1,000 each were made for the captain, mate and purser, and $350 each for other members of the crew.

UNDER "HOVERING" ACT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—The seizure of the rum runner Tomaka, of alleged British registry, was not made under the provisions of the proposed treaty between the United States and Great Britain it was officially stated at the White House today.

In the absence of official reports the White House spokesman did not care to discuss the case, other than to say that it was rumored that the alleged British registry of the Tomaka was faulty and illegal and the seizure might have been based either on this ground or under the "hovering" act.

Seizure of the alleged British rum runner Henry L. Marshall last year under these acts was concurred in by Great Britain when American authorities proved to the British Foreign Office that the ship was sailing under false colors, being in fact an American vessel.

UNION EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN CONCLUDED

Rev. Arthur Barton's Services in Millbrook Were Appreciated By Large Attendances at Meetings During Two Weeks.

MILLBROOK, Nov 26.—The two weeks' union evangelistic campaign conducted in the Methodist church by Rev. H. Arthur Barton, of the department of Social Service and Evangelism, was concluded on Sunday evening. A large congregation being in attendance.

Though Mr. Barton's personality is a type all his own, and his addresses are not delivered on any stereotyped fashion, it was evident from the beginning that they came from a heart filled with an earnest desire to see the interests of the Kingdom of God advanced in the community. Inspired by the Holy Spirit, drenched with prayer and intensive Bible study, the gospel message which is "everything to the saint, and nothing to the sinner," was presented night after night lovingly and plainly. Christians were urged to a fresh consecration and higher spiritual experience, while sinners and those who had grown careless and lukewarm in righteous living, were plainly warned of their danger and invited to repentence, surrender and faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour, Lord and King.

Throughout the entire two weeks, allowing for unavoidably untoward circumstances at times, the attendance was good, and the hearing given the evangelist marked by reverence and close attention. Possibly the address on "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" drew the largest week night gathering, and gave widest scope for the speaker's dramatic ability, though the reading from memory of the scripture lesson each evening was a feature few would care to have missed. The Scripture passage upon which the lesson from Stevenson's story was based was from Romans, 7th chapter, where Paul pictures vividly the dual natures warring within, "the good that I would I do not, but the evil that I would not that I do."

The special musical numbers at each meeting were a helpful feature, those assisting in this way being Rev. G. S. and Mrs. Gervan, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Rev. S. T. Tucker, Mrs. G. W. Sayles, Miss Hattie Bernard, the boys' choir, and others.

That no direct appeal for decision to start the Christian life, or if already a follower of Christ, to strive for higher attainments, was made until the last Sunday morning was practically unprecedented in connection with evangelistic services, but evidently in this, as in all else, the speaker acted as the Spirit impelled.

Among those who opened their homes for the daily prayer-meetings at 3 p.m. were Mrs. I. E. Needham, Mrs. W. Mullen, Mrs. J. Hatherly, Miss A. Hampton, and Mrs. (Rev.) S. T. Tucker. Unfortunately Rev. Mr. Tucker was too ill to be out at all on Sunday, his place being capably filled in the morning by Rev. Joseph Wilks, Rev. G. S. Gervan assisting at night the service in the Presbyterian church being withdrawn as was done the previous week also.

Meeting For Men

The men's meeting on Sunday afternoon was a purely evangelistic nature and the appeal, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" undoubtedly went home. The large congregation which gathered for the farewell service on Sunday evening was not only an external expression of a desire to unite in honoring and praising God, but also a tribute to the inspiration and instruction which the evangelist's addresses have been to the thinking portion of the community, at least, during his brief period of ministry here.

In addition to his regular lesson from the twenty-first chapter of Revelation, by special request Mr. Barton recited the fifth chapter of Daniel, "Belshazzar's Pride and Down fall," which he had given earlier in the campaign. The subject, "The Gates of Pearl," with the text from Rev. 21: 13, "On the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates," was particularly appropriate for a closing service containing, as it did, a vivid description of the various avenues of entrance into the Christian life. The eastern gates bring the vision of morning, sunrise, and typify childhood, youth; the very best time to begin to serve God when the soul is like a sensitive film and the daring young life is ready to do heroic service for the Kingdom. The gates on the north speak of trouble, pain and tears. "God has to pull some souls into His Kingdom through the northern gates of calamity." "Our sorrow either makes or breaks us. Learn the character lessons God has in it for you. The south speaks of summer and sweet-throated birds, and those who enter through these gates are of the emotional type where the heart rules rather than the reason. A word of warning was given here that spiritual skies will not always be blue but "better make a mistake sometimes than never make anything. A mistake is not necessarily a sin always."

Farewell of Friends

Naturally the western gates make one think of sunset and evening and typify age with retrospect rather than prospect on its horizon. Remorse, a foretaste of perdition, is the bitter portion unless "ere the sun of life drop behind the mountains of time, as eternity dawns," the sour gets right with God. An earnest appeal that the "crimson stream from the Victor-Victim on Calvary's skull-shaped hill" might be accepted as the only means to wash away the scars of sin and usher the new-born soul into God's Kingdom closed the impressive service.

Practically the entire congregation, acceding to Rev. Mr. Barton's request, came to the front of the church and shook hands with him in friendship and farewell.

BETHANY NEWS

BETHANY, Nov. 26.—The young people's League of the Methodist church was well attended on Wednesday evening and was in charge of the social committee. The chair was taken by Mr. A. H. Monk for the opening devotional period. The scripture reading was found in Joshue, 1st chapter, where Joshua had just taken charge of the leadership of the children of Israel and was telling the people to be strong and have good courage. Mrs. Brown, 3rd vice-president, had charge of the programme, and Mr. W. A. Brown gave a most interesting talk on the topic "Moral Courage." Reading by Roy Monk, "My Pa at Ten"; duet by Marian Fallis and Betty Salisbury, "I Have an Anchor in Jesus"; Reading "Is It Any of Your Business," by Helen Byers; a quartette "Are You Coming Home To-night," by Misses Verna Belle Lee, Miss Pricillia Howden, Messrs. Ed. Bray and P. C. Brown. Mrs. Thorndyke in view of the fact that Mr. W. A. Brown's topic was on 'Courage' gave a reading entitled "Curfew Must Not Ring To-night." The British Elections

(By WICKHAM STEED)

(By Wickman Steed, former editor of the London Times, Editor Review of Reviews. Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act, 1923.)

LONDON, Nov. 27. — Twenty years ago when a school of French artists began to paint incomprehensible pictures, one wag exhibited a perfectly black picture in a round frame. The title given in the catalogue was "fight between negroes in tunnel." A reproduction of that masterpiece ought to appear in British picture papers now as an illustration of the electoral campaign.

Fourteen hundred and forty candidates were nominated yesterday as compared with 1365 last year. The total is 60 short of earlier anticipations. The Conservatives put up 529, Liberals 454, Labor 434 Conservative Free Traders 7, Independents 16. Among the Independents are three Irish Nationalists, one Sinn Feiner, two communists and one prohibitionist. Fifty members were returned unopposed, including 35 opposed, including 35 supporters of the Government and 15 oppositionists where of 11 are Liberals. Triangular contests will take place in 273 constituencies a circumstance that moved Lloyd George to taunt Baldwin yesterday with "playing his song of victory on the triangle" Nevertheless, some triangular fights have been avoided. In the county of Durham some Liberals and Tories have withdrawn their candidatures in their respective constituencies in order to enable the likeliest victor to have a straight fight with the Laborite. Similarly Ramsay Macdonald will not benefit in Aberaven by a contest between his Tory and Liberal rivals the latter failing to turn up for nomination. On the other hand, Asquith who was expected to be beaten in Paisley in a straight fight with Labor now profits by the nomination of a Tory and co-operative candidate.

As predicted in an earlier despatch the tendency of the final stages of the election is to emphasize the question of whether tariffs are likely to cure unemployment. Conservative headquarters yesterday instructed their candidates to stick to this point and insist that tariffs are the only possible cure. Liberals and Laborites are answering vigorously that protection is a quick remedy:

The Labor organ, The Daily Herald, has received a contribution of seven shillings to the party fund from the the compositors employed on propaganda work for Premier Beldwin. The compositors add: The paper on which the Tory dope is printed comes from Germany, a state ment wherewith much play is likely to be made this week. Lloyd George who is daily addressing tens of thousands of electors in Northern England, yesterday offered them a big political bribe by declaring that the unemployment allowance might be increased and paid entirely from the National Exchequer, not, as now partly from local rates, the Labor party on the other hand is concentrating its efforts upon the capital levy as the remedy for all evils and endeavoring to persuade the lower and middle classes that it will not harm them because nobody whose fortune is below £5,000 net will be affected by it.

Despite, or because of, the strenuous propaganda the outcome of the contest is as obscure as ever. It is inmpossible to predict which nigger will emerge with victory from the tunnel, though all are likely to be pretty well mauled.

Premier Baldwin is away to a good start, with 25 out of a total of 50 acclamations.

"Tay Pay" O'Connor is the solitary Nationalist standing in the Scotland division of Liverpool. Hon. J. H. Whteley, speaker in the last house, Liberal and three Laborites Vernon Hartshorn, G. Barker, G. H. Hirst are a feature of the acclamations.

Mrs. Phillipson, better known as Mabel Russell, actress is opposed by Mrs. E. Penny, journalist, Labor, and Capt. H. Robson, Liberal, in Berwick on Tweed.

Canadians nominated in the elections include Col. Grant Morden in Chiswick, Maurice Alexander, Southwark, Dr. T. J. Macnamara, Camberwell N. W. L. P. Macdonald, Isle of Wright, Hamilton Gault Taunton and Sir Hamar Greenwood Sunderland.

Labor is making the most of the charge that the Conservatives and Liberals are acting as a coalition, wherever possible in an effort to stem the tide of the Labor success. Labor is seeking to re-establish the breach between Asquith and Lloyd George, Liberals by allegations that the Asquithians are ging exploited until an opportunity arises for Lloyd George to enforce control.

Randolph K. Jones, the McGill University man brought over by the Conservatives to explain the workings and the results of the Canadian tariff, began his campaign addressing Viscount Curons meeting in Battersea. He met a friendly reception and was not heckled, though his colleagues on the platform did not escape. He spoke last night for Norton Griffiths at Westminster, going later to Birmingham and Manchester.

CAVAN FARMERS WANT APPROACH TO DRANOEL

C.P.R. Have Facilities For Shipping But Efforts to Obtain Access By a Good Road Have Failed Up to Present.

FOXES NUMEROUS.

CAVAN, Nov. 28.—The residents of Cavan Centre East, are anxious to have a road into Dranoel Station on the C.P.R. It has a comfortable nice appearing station house, sidings and all facilities for shipping grain; but so far no steps have been taken, either by the C.P.R. or Cavan Council to buy a road into the station. The lane through the farm tenanted by Mr. Chas. Porteous has been used. This is not satisfactory as there is danger of the gates being left open and the stock getting out.

Arrangements have been planned to have the Council and Railway Officials meet to discuss the matter, but so far without success.

It is understood that Mr. Galbraith owner of the property, has offered a road free, provided the C.P.R. or Cavan Council build and maintain it ,this offer to hold good until January first, after which date Mr. Porteous intends to lock his gate so that there will be no means of gaining access to the station.

This is a matter of interest to the resident of Bethany as well as the farmers of the vicinity, as it is their nearest station on the main line of the C.P.R. It is to be hoped that the matter may be arranged as it will be a great inconvenience if the private road is closed and not other provided. The C.P.R. surveyors staked a road through this summer. This would be a handy place for the farmers to ship grain from if a suitable road was built.

Shipped by Truck

In the fall, Mrs. John Douglas, Peterboro, bought the wheat from some of the farmers of this vicinity at their barns and took it to Peterboro on his motor truck.

Foxes Plentiful

Foxes have been fairly plentiful this season there have been a great many seen and a few shot. One of our local hunters succeeded in tracing one last week or rather the hounds chased it into a ground hog hole and the boys dug it out.

Share Christmas Gifts

Cavan Sunday School had an interesting session last Sunday. Mr. Carley took charge of the closing exercises of the school, and he requested the scholars to think of and to plan to spare at least one Christmas gift for other less favoured boys and girls. This idea appealed to the children and they went home thinking of trying to share their Christmas joys with others.

Already they are beginning to plan for their Christmas entertainment.

Institute Meeting

The Cavan Women's Institute will meet at Mrs. Lloyd Sutton's on Thursday afternoon instead of at Mrs. Paulo's as announced. All members and others who care to come are invited to hear the report of the Provincial Convention.

Mrs. Paul has returned from a visit with her niece, Mrs. Brown in Oshawa.

Miss Agnes Stark is visiting her friend Mrs. Oaks, Peterboro.

Many Cavan people took advantage of the good sleighing on Sunday evening to attend the last service of the series of Evangelistic services conducted by Rev. Mr. Barton in Millbrook.

JUDGMENT FOR PETERBORO REVIEW

The appended judgment handed down by Judge Russell in the Yarmouth High Court, involves an action to recover the cost of a typesetting machine sold by the Peterboro Review to the Yarmouth Times, plaintiff and defendant, respectively. Peck, Kerr and McElderry appeared for Mr. A. H. Stratton representing the plaintiff company. The judgment follows:

Peterborough Review vs Yarmouth Times.

This action has arisen because of a purchase of a Linotype Machine from the Plaintiff company which the Defendant company alleges was not in the condition represented and guaranteed. The point has been passed at which the machine could be returned to the vendor, and the purchaser is driven to his cross action for damages if he has suffered any, because of the alleged defects. The representative of the plaintiff company, Mr. Stratton, was examined as a witness. His statement is, that in September 1920, Mr. Trask, who was the owner of the majority of the stock in the defendant company, came to the office of the plaintiff in Peterborough to purchase a linotype in consequence of an advertisment of the plaintiff company. There were three machines for sale, two being so-called K models, and the third a number 5 model. Mr. Trask concluded to purchase the latter. It had been demonstrated so far as it could be in the absence of melted metal. One of the others had the metal heated. It was suggested, or at least, hinted in the course of evidence that perhaps the metal had been purposely left unmelted in the case of the number 5 so that it would not b necessary to make a full demonstration and thus reveal deficiencies. At least I understand that some such suggestion was made. If so there was and is nothing in it for neither the vendor nor the purchaser knew at the time the metal was heated which of the three machines would be the subject of the sale. Mr. Stratton says that he supposed Mr. Trask was buying for the Yarmouth Times, but Mr. Trask's understanding is that he was purchasing for himself with the view of selling to the Yarmouth Times. His intervention as a purchaser between the plaintiff and the defendant, however, was simply an expedient to enable him to secure a commission of $200 on the purchase price, which was $2,200. The purchase was made September, 1920, and one of the terms was that $500 should be paid on the 16th of that month. The payment was not made and an extension of ten days was asked for and granted. Efforts were made by the defendant company to raise $500, but they were not successful, and at length after a suit was threatened, Mr. Trask lent the defendant company $500 which was paid on account and a note given which is the cause of action sued on by the plaintiff. The machine was shipped in May 1921, and reached Yarmouth in June. It remained unpacked from June to the following January, 1922, when it was unpacked, and according to the claim of the defendant company was found to be defective. Mr. Stratton said he attended personally to the packing of the machine, purchased 2 containers at $40 each and engaged the services of an expert of the highest quality, for whose services he paid $66.50 in order that the packing should be properly done. As to the condition of the machine when shipped, he is fully corroborated by the expert whose evidence has been taken by commission, one of them, Halsey, a linotype rebuilder, the other, Carrick, an employee of the Canadian Linotype Company. The former had been employed to examine the three machines already referred to, and says he devoted most of his time to the No. 5 machine, because Mr. Stratton told him it was to be sold and wished it to be put in perfect order. He may be mistaken about this because I understand all three were for sale. However that may be, he says that the machine in question was put by him in perfect condition, every worn or imperfect part was replaced. On his cross examination he could not recall every detail demanded by the examiner as the circumstances referred to had occurred as he claimed three years before examination. Carrick's evidence is to the same effect as that of Halsey as to the condition of the machine. If I can depend on the evidence of these witnesses the machine was in good working order and in perfect condition when shipped at Peterborough and the plaintiff company's contract had been fully performed by the shipment. How it came about that eight or nine months later one or more parts of the machine were found to be cracked is not explained. It seems that the machine is a very complicated one, consisting of thousands of pieces as Halsey said in his evidence although this seems an exaggeration. It is suggested by one of the witnesses that the crack might have been caused by a fire through which the machine had gone, and in consequence of which $150 insurance had been collected. If the existence of the crack was fatal to the successful operation of the machine at Yarmouth it must, if existent in Peterborough, have been equally fatal there, but the evidence is that the machine was working well when there. I am left to infer the crack was developed at a later stage, and at a time when the plaintiff was not responsible for it. (Lipsett, by the way, who demonstrated the machine for Mr. Trask also says that it was in good working order.' The burden is on the defendant to prove the existence of the defects on which he bases his defence and counterclaim and I have not been convinced by the evidence.

With regard to the defects if any in the Rogers Tabulator attachment I accept the plaintiff's statement that this was thrown into the bargain for what it was worth, without any guarantee that it was complete and with the understanding on both sides that it was no part of the machine which was the real subject of the contract.

To deal with all the points raised by the very elaborate briefs furnished after the trial would call for a treatise. I am strongly inclined to the belief that if the defendants had been able to provide the purchase money agreed upon, the machine would not have been found to be seriously defective, and one of their own witnesses, Carey, has testified that if he been allowed a little more time or the requisite time he would have been able to get the machine in working order.

I have not dealt with the claim connected with the replevin proceedings because I understand this to have been put forward as an alternative. The judgment must be for the plaintiff with costs for the amount claimed on the note of hand and the counterclaim dismissed, the latter without costs unless I am obliged to award them, as the counterclaim was merely put forward for the purposes of defence to the plaintiff's cause of action.

A FIGHT AGAINST WATER DIVERSION

Sir Adam Beck Elected Chairman of New Organization.

TORONTO, Nov. 28. — In her fight against the further diversion of the Great Lakes waters by the Chicago Sanitary Commission, Ontario will have co-operation from the territory in Illinois river valley also adversely affected by the proposal. Congressman Guy L. Shaw, writing to Sir Adam Beck from Beardstown Ill., tells him that residents on 100,000 acres of most fertile and in United States situated in valley district, have formed an association to oppose the move and that he had been elected chairman of their executive committee.

"The riparian landowners of Illinois river valley," he says, "have been compelled to organize drainage districts, build, levees, erect pumping plants and construct large drainage systems for the prevention their lands being flooded by this flow of water from Lake Michigan into Illinois river by way of the Chicago drainage canal. We are just as much opposed as you are to the United States authorizing the increased flow of water from the lakes into the Illinois River.'

"It is straight business proposition with them —a matter of being too close fisted to face cost of putting in a decent disposal system of their own", declared Sir Adam Beck, yesterday.

NOTED DOCTOR GRAVE ROBBER

Planned Flight to Canada to Escape, Grandson Reveals — Doctors' Prices 100 Years Ago.

BOSTON, November 28. — Dr. Stanley Cobb, neurologist and psychiarist, has written for the Medical and Surgical Journal an interesting account of how his great-grandfather robbed a graveyard, and, fearful of conviction in court, had prepared a relay of horses for a flight to Canada, when angry relatives found him out.

It was all in the interest of science however, explains Dr. Cobb, whose article is contributed to show that doctors of 100 years ago and more worked for about the me fees as they do to-day, while the wages of ordinary workmen have doubled, tripled and quadrupled.

"Among many old papers in my uncle's house," says Dr. Cobb, "we recently found a diploma, a certificate and a list of charges which belonged to my great-grandfather, Dr. Archelaus Green Smith." Then follows a "list of Medical and Surgical charges established by the Associated Physicians and Surgeons of the City of New York, December, 1815, and approved by the New York County Medical Society, Jan. 1, 1816."

Among the 106 varieties of charges are:

MILLION DOLLAR BLAZE STARTED IN STOVE PIPE

DETROIT, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press.—Fire starting from an overheated stove in a watchman's shanty early to-day destroyed the Detroit and Windsor ferry company dock, housing the United States immigration and Customs officials spreading to six storey Munger building which was burned to the ground and then destroyed a four story warehouse and several small buildings on Woodward Avenue and Bates street. Total loss was estimated at one and half million dollars.

Although three fourths of city's fire fighting equipment reached the scene twenty minutes after first alarm pouring fifty streams of water into flames, fire continued to press northward. Three firemen were injured.

Flames were brought under control at five o'clock this morning.

SUGAR TAKES ANOTHER JUMP IN STORES HERE

This Time it is the Failure of the German Beet Crop Stores Begin to Look Like Christmas

Sugar has taken another rise in price in the last week, and is very firm just at present. Down to $10.42 per hundredweight wholesale, some time ago, it is now up to $10.92, with prospects of a further increase. The failure of the German beet crop, which is said to be a total failure, is blamed as the cause of the increase.

Eggs are selling in the stores, as on the farmers market, at a price per dozen of seventy-five cents, and butter is up a cent or two on the pound.

Fish is one of the most popular commodities in the fruit and many of the grocery stores. There are many varieties with salmon in pink and red, flaky white halibut, herring, salt and fresh little trout from Georgian Bay, at 20 and 25 cents a pound and boned cod has come into its own again at 20 cents a pound. Oysters are said to be scarce this year, and are selling from $1.40 to $1.50 a quart or 75 cents a pint straight.

Chickens appear in butcher shops and groceries both, at a general price of 25 cents per pound. Meat prices are about as usual and hogs, as a wholesale commodity, have not varied over much from the prices of a fortnight ago, after a long period of decreasing worth.

Hides are lower. In the last few weeks horse hides have decreased in value by half a dollar, sheep and lamb skins by a quarter and cow hides are a cent easier an the pound than formerly.

In the grains, red clover and sweet clover are the very latest arrivals. Red clover gets a price of six to ten dollars a bushel, the sweet clover five to five and a quarter.

Pears in good quality, both Duchess and Keefer, are on sale at prices ranging from 75 cents to one dollar a peck. Pears from California are 50 cents a dozen. Apples are fairly plentiful. Snows are a dollar a peck, Spies 50 and 75 cents, Wealthies 40 cents, Tolman Sweets 70 cents and cooking apples all the way from 25 to 40 cents a peck.

Cauliflower, that was so plentiful this summer, is already beginning to come in from California, the local supply petering out to the small end They come at 25 and 40 and 50 cents apiece and California tomatoes are 40 cents a pound. One or two stores have the last remnants of the local tomato growth, at 15 cents a pound.

New peas are selling at 2 pounds for a quarter and new beans are 10 cents a pound.

One store has a display calculated to conjure up thoughts of Christmas time and Christmas dinner. There are raisins, muscatel and Valencias, shelled almonds and walnuts, currants, and the big British Columbia wine apples. Cranberries are another red commodity for the holiday table, and there are preserved cherries in glass jars, and whole small preserved fruits, in dull reds and greens and browns, and Christmas cake already on sale, at 50 cents a pound.

In the florists' window are the red cyclamen and small sprays of valley lilies clustering about deep purple violets, and one store has a lovely mauve iris with a gold heart. Bright cherry trees are another sign of the approaching festive season.

SILENT GUNMAN DENIED LIBERTY

Terror Who Slew, Unseen and Unheard in Albany Must Stay in Asylum.

ALBANY, N.Y., Nov. 28.—Seven years ago silent death stalked in Albany and Poughkeepsie. Persons walking in the street suddenly flung up their arms, gave a shriek and fell to the sidewalk, a bullet in their backs. And yet there was no sound of a gun. Ten, in all, fell victim to the silent terror in the two cities, and two of these died.

With the uncanny horror lurking unseen, unknown, the streets were deserted after dark. Those having business downtown came and went in taxicabs, with the drivers crowding the speed limit. The police patrolled the streets in plain clothes—but for days they hunted in vain for the ghostly slayer.

Then, at last, the mystery was cleared. A man was found with a sawed off repeating rifle, equipped with a silencer.

Harold Severy by name, he was found criminally insane and sent to Mattewan. And now, seven years after the commission of his crimes, he is in the limelight once more — this time with a fight to free him from his asylum, the asylum which saved him from the electric chair, for it was only on the plea of insanity that he escaped passing through the little green door at Sing Sing.

Persistent efforts of "friends" resulted in the bringing of a habeas corpus petition. Then Raymond Kieb, superintendent of the asylum, was cited for contempt of court for failure to produce him on the order. This, however, was quickly dropped when Kieb explained the man was a dangerous criminal and that it would be positively dangerous to permit him out even in company of guards.

Obsessed with the idea that persons are hounding him, making uncomplimentary remarks, he has assaulted fellow inmates and employes at Mattewan, so now it is necessary to keep him under close guard.

And so "the silent gunman" remains at Mattewan, while Albanians grimly recall his "reign of terror."

FIREMEN SAVED NEW BORN BABE

Dying For Air, Baby Was Saved After Ywo Hours Application of Pulmotor.

DETROIT, Nov. 28. —A slight gasp for breath —almost inaudible —the attending physician smiled toward the mother and Mrs. Mary Gitschlag sank back against her pillow realizing that some blue-uniformed men had saved the life of her newly born babe.

It was 1 a.m. yesterday at the home of Ernest Gitschlag. The baby was born at 10:20 p.m. Monday. But when the child arrived it could not get its breath. Dr. Charles W. Knaggs, the attending physician, tried all known methods of bringing the child to life but his efforts were to no avail. Finally when the baby was turning blue and hope for its life was rapidly waning, the doctor shouted to the nurse to call Rescue Squad No. 3 of the fire department.

The squad arrived in a short time and pumped oxygen into the baby's lungs by the aid of a lungmotor. They worked incessantly for two hours and a half. At various intervals the baby's skin grew pink and showed other signs of life but it was not until 1 a.m. that Dr. Knaggs, leaning over the tiny form heard the intake of breath.

"The child will live,' he announced, and Mrs. Gitschlag smiled her thanks toward the firemen.

A few hours later Glynn, as the child has been named broke into a powerful and healthy cry, proclaiming to the neighborhaad that he was very much alive.

"My, what lungs!" the mother said softly. "I'm sure he's going to live now!"

YOUTHFUL SHAH IS RUNNING TO PARIS

Cabinet Ministers Tear Their Hair But Pleas Not Heeded.

MARSEILLES, Nov. 28. (United Press.)—The youthful Shah of Persia, disregarding vehement protests by his cabinet, and members of the Persian parliament, arrived here today for a good time along the Riveria and in Paris.

His ministers protest that the Shah is over fond of the gaieties of life in France, and that His Highness is spending most of his time and too much money in this country.

It is common gossip that the Shah is greatly attracted by a certain dancer at the opera.

STEEL TUG LOST IN A COLLISION

Captain Went Down With the Ship and Body Has Not Been Recoverd.

BUFFALO, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press)—The steel tug Craig was rammed and sunk early to-day in the Niagara River, opposite Grand Island ferry landing, by the steamer Zillah, of Bay City, Mich.

Captain Frank Roneker, Jr., of Tonawanda, stuck to the helm and went down with his ship when the steel tug heeled over from the impact. Howard Slover, fireman, and Leo. Kropp, engineer, were rescued by the ferry boat Long. Captain Roneker's body was not recovered.

The Zillah, loaded with lumber and towing a barge, was about to pass the line to Craig when the tug ran unexpectedly under her bow. The Craig was rammed on her port side, and went down immediately.

BOY IS SEIZED AS RUM SELLER

Detroit Patrolmen Charge He Sold Them Whisky in Back Room of Restaurant.

DETROIT, Nov. 28.—An investigation by two policemen in plain clothes Monday night of a mysterious room at the rear of Joseph Yestrbey's restaurant at 5812 West Jefferson avenue, resulted in the arrest of a 12-year-old boy in connection with an alleged liquor law violation.

The officers, Patrolmen Michael Larco and William Jacobs, of Scotten station, said that Mary Yestrbey, wife of Joseph, and Gobrial Varkony, 12 years old, were in the back room when they entered and sat down.

"Gobrial, take care of the gentlemen," Mrs. Yestrbey ordered, according to the policemen. The boy, they said, produced a bottle of whiskey and poured out two drinks. Yestrbey was arrested charged with violating the prohibition law.

The boy is held at the Juvenile Detention Home as a witness. He is Mrs. Yestrbey's brother and lives at the restaurant.

HOME REMEDIES OF OUR ANCESTORS

Almost every man and woman in America can remember the botanic recipes of our mothers and grandmothers for the treatment of disease and they were wonderfully dependable too. Every fall there were stored away in the attic thoroughwort, pennyroyal, catnip, sage, wormwood rue, etc for treating ills of the family during the winter months that followed. In 1873 Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was first prepared from one of these botanic recipes, and the demand for it has increased to such an extent that hundreds of tons of roots and herbs are now used annually in its preparation. It has recently been proved that 98 out of every 100 women who try it have been benefited by its use, which is a marvelous record for any medicine to hold.

ST. JAMES' SUNDAY SCHOOL BAZAAR, A GREAT SUCCESS

The bazaar held by the Primary Department of the Sunday School of St. James' Methodist Church, in the Sunday School Hall, yesterday afternoon and evening, proved a very successful affair. Appropriate decorations were carried out in colored paper streamers. The Sunday School orchestra of the church provided pleasant music during the evening. Miss Mary Collins, superintendent of the Primary Department, acted as general convenor. The sale of quilts, fancy work, candy and cake, and the supervision of the tea-room, was in charge of Mesdames Cox, Spurway, Sargeant and Miss Collins. Mrs. J. O. Fife was the lady with many pockets, a novelty for the children. This affair, the first of its kind to be held by the Primary Department, was in furtherance of their present aim and object, the purchase of a new piano.

A TALE OF WOE OVER LABORERS

Canadian Congress Journal Not in Position to Suggest Remedy.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28. — (Canadian Press).—Criticism of the bringing of harvest laborers from Britain to Canada is contained in the current issue of the Canadian Congress Journal, the official organ of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

"A large number of these disillusioned harvest laborers," says the journal, "have returned to the Old Land—wiser but poorer. For reasons yet unexplained, many of them were unable to secure employment, and others were compelled to accept employment under promised wages and conditions."

"We are not in a positon to say just how many of the harvest laborers returned," adds the Congress organ, "but this we do know—sufficient of them have done so to cause considerable publicity in the British press which certainly will do future immigration work in Britain considerable harm, and has also given Canada much adverse advertising."

True, she seemed more than able to take, care of herself, but she was very beautiful, very blonde, very unprotected, and in that wistful second youth he most admired. He had thought himself the chivalrous son of chivalrous Southerners, excited and not too happy, but convinced, for the height of his restlessness and absorption, that she was but a romantic and passing episode in his life.

When Gora Dwight had ruthlessly led him into those unconsciously guarded secret chambers of his soul and bidden him behold and ponder, he had turned as cold as if ice-water were running in his veins, although he had continued to smile indulgently and had answered with some approach of jocularity. He was floored at last. He'd got the infernal disease in its most virulent form. Not a doubt of it. No wonder he had deluded himself. His ideal woman—whom, preferably, he would have wooed and won in some sequestered spot beautified by nature, not made hideous by man—was not a woman at all, but a girl; twenty-six was an ideal age; who had read and studied and thought, and seen all of the world that a girl decently may. He had dreamed of no man's leavings, certainly not of a woman who had probably had more than one lover, and, no doubt, would not take the trouble to deny it. He hated as much as he loved her and he felt that he would rather kill than possess her.

It was half an hour after he reached his rooms before he finished striding to and down; then, with a final anathema, he flung himself into a chair before his table. At last his brain felt clearer, now that he had faced the truth. Time enough to wrestle with his problem when he had won his leisure. If he couldn't pitch her off for one night at least he'd give his brain its due, he'd devise himself, and that, he vowed, he'd never do. He wrote steadily until two in the morning.

XVIII.

He awoke at noon. His first impression was that a large black bat was sitting on his brain. The darkened room seemed to contain a visible presence of disaster. He sprang out of bed and took a hot and cold shower; hobgoblins fled, although he felt no inclination to sing! He called down for his breakfast and opened his hall door. A pile of letters lay on his newspapers, and the topmost one, in a large envelope, addressed in a flowing meticulously fine hand, he knew, with speculation, to be from Madame Zattianty.

He threw back the curtains, settled himself in an armchair, read his other letters deliberately, and glanced at the headlines of the papers, before he carefully slit the envelope that had seemed to press his eyeballs. The time had come for self-discipline, consistently exercised. Moreover, he was afraid of it. What—why had she written to him? Why hadn't she telephoned? Was this a tardy dismissal? His breath was short and his hands shaking as he opened the letter.

It was sufficiently commonplace. "Dear Mr. Clavering:

"I have been in Atlantic City for a few days getting rid of a cold. I hope you have not called. Will you dine with me tomorrow night at half after eight? I shall not ask any one else.

"Sincerely,
"MARIE ZATTIANY."

So her name was Marie. It had struck him once or twice as humorous that he didn't know the first name of the woman who was demanding his every waking thought. And she had been out of town and unaware that he had deliberately avoided her. Had taken for granted that he had been polite enough to call—and had left his cards at home.

Should he go? He'd have his breakfast first and do his thinking afterward.

He did ample justice to the breakfast, which was also lunch, read his newspapers, cursed the printers of his own for two typographical errors he found in his column, then called up her house. Feeling as normal and unromantic as a man generally does when digesting a meal and the news, he concluded that to refuse her invitation, to attempt to avoid her, in short, would not only be futile, as he was bound to respond to that magnet sooner or later, but would be a further confession of cowardice. Whatever his fate, he'd see it through.

He gave his acceptance to the butler, went out and took a brisk walk, returned and wrote his column for the next day, then visited his club and talked with congenial souls until it was time to dress for dinner. No more thinking at present.

Nevertheless, he ascended her steps at exactly half-past eight with the blood pounding in his ears and his heart racing like a schoolboy's in his first attack of calf love. But he managed to compose himself before the footman leisurely answered his ring. If there was one point upon which he was primarily determined it was to keep his head. If he gave her a hint that she had reduced him to a state of imbecility before his moment came—if it ever did!—his chances would be done for—dished. He looked more saturnine than ever as he strode into the hall.

"Dinner will be served in the library sir" said the cootman madame will be down in a moment."

A tete-a-tete by the fire! Worse and worse. He had been fortified by the thought of the butler and footman. An hour under their supercilious eyes would mean the most impersonal kind of small talk. But they'd hardly stand round the library.

However, the small table before the blazing logs looked very cosy and the imposing room was full of mellow light. Two Gothic chairs had been drawn to the table. They, at least, looked uncomfrotable enough to avert sentiment. Not that he felt sentimental. He was holding down something a good deal stronger than sentiment, but he flattered himself that he looked as saturnine as Satan himself as he warmed this back at the fire. He hoped she had a cold in her head.

THE RELATION OF BRAIN POWER TO FOOD

A great artist, when asked what he mixed his colors, with, replied 'Brains.'

Brains mix as well with foods, yet they are entirely unemployed in the feeding problems of civilized races. If we used brains in this connection, we would know that refining out of our most important foodstuffs the grains, the alkali upon which the blood depends to keep it non-acid, must have serious consequences to the race. Uncivilized races have no cancer, goitre, tuberculosis, heart, kidney, liver, or other disease of civilized races until they adopt civilization's foods. Having lived upon alkaline whole grains, milk, nuts, beans, eggs, vegetables, fruits, when they take to white flour refined cereals, white sugar, etc., all "acid-formers," they become as subject to diseases as civilized races are. Knowing this, if we mixed thought with our food habits we would reduce to a minimum the use of acid white flour, refined cereals, sweets, meats etc., and live more largely upon alkaline whole grains, milk, nuts, greens, fruits, etc. Denmark did so during the war and reduced the death rate thirty-four per cent. in one year. So might we.

Roman Meal is the only alkaline cereal, alkaline, enough to correct the acids of flour, other cereals, meats and sweets. Roman Meal makes delicious porridge, pancakes, gems, muffins, johnny cake, pudding, etc. You can go several hours longer on an entire breakfast of Roman Meal without becoming hungry than any other food, because it is so nourishing. At all grocers.

AMMUNITION DUMP EXPLODED, SEVEN KILLED; MUCH DAMAGE

OFFICE GIRLS EAGER TO WED

All Expect to Get Married in a Year or Two, While All Men Expect to Get the Boss' Job.

By GEORGE BRITT.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—All women office workers expect to get married in a year or two.

All men expect to get the boss' job.

These are major obstacles to overcome in bringing "white collar workers" into the organized labor movement, according to Edward Hughes, Secretary of the Chicago Office Employes' Union, the largest office workers' local in the country. Miss Marie Erhardt, his office secretary, is ready to verify the statement.

But are they downcast at the difficulty? They'll tell the whole world "Not."

They're Optimistic.

With the promise of backing from the American Federation of Labor for a national extension campaign, they are looking forward to the day when the bookkeeper and the clerk shall drive down to work in a Rolls-Royce just the same as the janitor does.

Exaggerations aside, the campaign is to be waged this fall to develop the office workers' union into a serious factor in business instead of a mere vocal minority.

"Those two hopes in the hearts of men and women make it hard to arouse interest in unions," says Hughes. "The girls figure they are working only temporarily. The men fear anything which might antagonise the management and defer promotion. Then they think they have social superiority by being non-union.

"The squeezing which the office worker gets between manual labor and employers will bring him around to organization. The trades are unionized and are getting higher wages. The heads of business are organized and are getting larger profits. The cost of living soars. But the office worker, without effective protest, has to take what pay is offered.

City Hall Organized.

"Most of our 1,300 members in Chicago work in the City Hall. About 300 are women. When the cost of living started up, the unorganized clerical force here asked for a raise. They couldn't even get a hearing from the finance committee. They don't get everything they ask now, of course, but they are listened to and conditions have improved."

The "white collar" unions at present have no national organization, but are chartered directly by the American Federation of Labor. The plan of campaign is to enlarge the work in cities where there is already a foothold, seeking to unionize offices of private industries in which the shops already are organized.

"And the day is coming," says Miss Erhardt, "when the young man going to see his girl will have to show his card—not visiting, but union."

Mission Concludes

Sunday was the last day of the gospel mission that has been going on at St. George's Anglican church, South Peterboro, as a part of the mission being conducted by distinguished preachers in the City of Peterborough all last week. Meetings were held every night last week all of which was well attended.

A simple gospel message being given by the preacher, Rev. H. R. Mockridge, of Toronto, who without appealing to the emotions or trying to work up the feelings to a high strung condition, but relying solely on the power and influence of the Holy Spirit to convert the sinner and enlarge and deepen the faith of the believer.

Every afternoon a children's service has been held at which the missioner has instilled into the young minds the first principles of religion also a understanding of what the Anglican church stands for in the world. These meetings also were very well attended.

Sunday services commenced with Holy Communion, 8.30 a.m.; 11 a.m. Holy Communion and sermon. The preacher taking his text from Psalm 96, verses 9 to 13.

The final service held in the evening. The church was filled to capacity at which a hearty and reverent congregation joined in the service. The preacher took his text from Song of Solomon, 4th chapter, 16th verse. After the service a number of people signed cards of decision, intimating their desire to serve Christ.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

Dietetically doughnuts and fried cakes are looked upon more or less askance. But carefully fried doughnuts enjoyed sensibly surely can be a treat. The cheer and good will embodied in these homely and purely American puff-balls have a psychological effect of almost as much value to the human system on a drear November day as many calories of "high food value."

In reality doughnuts are bits of real bread dough sweetened and fried in deep hot fat.

Fried cakes are of the nature of a "quick bread" dough fried in deep hot fat.

Some cooks maintain that half beef suet and half lard is preferable to all lard for frying. That there is less trouble about the doughnuts soaking fat when the half-and-half fat is used.

Other cooks prefer a vegetable fat for deep fat frying.

This question each housewife must answer for herself.

But the temperature of the fat must be carefully watched and gauged during the whole frying process. This determines the fat soaking difficulty. The fat should be hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread from the soft part of the loaf in 60 seconds. An iron kettle is desirable as the heaviness of the material holds heat and prevents the fat from cooling when the cakes are dropped into it.

Drain doughnuts on heavy brown paper when removed from fat.

Sweet milk fried cakes should come almost immediately to the top of the fat, brown on one side, turn and brown on the other. Turn only once. Sour milk friend cakes can be turned several times while frying. The fat must be kept at an even temperature.

Sweet Milk Fried Cakes

One cup sugar, 1 cup milk, 3 tablespoons melted lard, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2 eggs, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon salt, flour to make a soft dough.

Beat eggs until very light with sugar. Add one cup of flour and beat until smooth. Add melted lard and beat again. Beat in milk. Sift baking powder with one cup flour and stir into mixture. Add salt and spice. Ad enough more flour to make just as soft a dough as can be handled. Put part of the dough on a well floured board, pat and roll to one-half inch thickness, cut with a doughnut cutter and fry in deep hot fat.

Sour Milk Fried Cakes

One cup sugar, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 2 eggs, 1 cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon soda, 4 cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon nutmeg.

Cream butter and sugar. Add eggs well beaten. Add cup flour. Add sour milk with soda dissolved in it. Add remaining flour and stir until smooth. Toss on a well floured board, roll and cut. Fry in deep hot fat.

Potato Fried Cakes

One cup mashed potatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, 3 eggs, 1½ cups sugar 1 teaspoon grated nutmeg, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup sweet milk, 5 teaspoons baking powder, 5 cups flour.

Beat butter into mashed potatoes while they are hot. Let cool and add eggs, one at a time. The eggs should not be beaten before adding to the potatoes. Beat until mixture is very light. Add sugar, nutmeg, salt and milk. Mix and sift flour and baking powder. Stir into batter and work until smooth. Toss on a well floured board, roll and cut. Fry in deep hot fat.

Raised Doughnuts

Two cups sugar, 1 cup yeast, ¼ cup lard, 1 cup milk, 2 eggs, 1 nutmeg, ½ teaspoon soda, flour.

If possible procure the yeast from a bakery.

In the evening scald the milk. Let cool to lukewarm and add yeast and sugar, salt and flour to make a thin batter. Let rise over night. In the morning add eggs well beaten, softened lard, nutmeg and three cups flour. Mix well and add soda dissolved in a little hot water. Add salt and flour to make a stiff dough. Let rise and if necessary add more flour to handle. Roll on a well floured board, shape and let rise until double their bulk. Fry in deep hot fat and drain on brown paper.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

A CURIOUS BIRD

"Have you guessed it yet?" asked the Riddle Lady.

This was the first riddle that the Riddle Lady in Riddle Land asked after the Twins arrived with Humpty Dumpty:

"Sing a song of sixpence, a pocket full of rye,
The bird I wish to speak of was never in a pie,
She never built a straw nest, she knows not how to sing,
And yet she is a fine bird and worthy of a king.

"This gallant bird, dear people, is worth a lot of money,
But hasn't got a feather, you'll think that rather funny!
Yet she has wings—quite large ones—that spread out when she flies,
And the longest tail you ever saw she pulls all through the skies."

"Have you guessed it yet?" asked the Riddle Lady.

"No," cried all the people of Riddle Land, puckering their eyes. "Tell us some more."

So the Riddle Lady went on:

"Sometimes she does a tail spin and often makes a dive,
And flies with ease quite upside down like nothing else alive.
She soars right over mountains, and sails across the seas,
And roars across the desert like a hundred thousand bees.

"Her master loves to ride her, like Mother Goose of old,
And birdie, like the broomstick, does everything she's told.
She kneels right down beside him and then like nimble Jack,
Her master gives a run and jump and lands upon her back.

"Away she goes a-roaring o'er the city, church and spire,
She never stops to take a rest—she never seems to tire.
Now I am sure you've seen this bird, you must have guessed her name,
It's really quite an easy word—it's just an'——!"

"Is it a poll-parrot?" asked one Riddle Lander.

"Oh, no!" laughed the Riddle Lady.

"An eagle?" asked another.

"No—not an eagle, either."

"I know—we know," called the Twins excitedly. "It's an airplane."

"Correct!" smiled the Riddle Lady, turning to Dick Red Cap, the Town Crier. "Give these children the first prize in the prize bag."

It was a pound of sugarplums, enough to make any pair of children quite ill—if they were greedy. But Nancy and Nick, being well mannered, passed the sugarplums around and kept only one apiece for themselves.

"Quite a good beginning," said Humpty Dumpty graciously. "I hope that you will do as well tomorrow."

KINDERGARTEN HAS SEPARATE PROBLEM

Teachers of First Classes Met in Central School With Miss L. Wilson in the Chair.

The kindergarten, primary and first book teachers met in the Central School. This procedure was found to be more helpful to the teachers concerned. Miss L. Wilson occupied the chair.

The first discussion was on "Language Work." Miss Rush introduced the subject, dealing with language in the kindergarten. She gave, as the main aim in this grade, the having of the child appreciate the true and beautiful. The memorization of poetry is emphasized here in order to develop rhythm. Miss Thomas' paper followed, discussing language in the primary grade. She pointed out that thought and language are inseparable. Oral work predominates in this grade. She stressed the importance of correcting English during the recitation, the value of praise to small children and the inculcation of virtues. Charles McMurray was quoted as saying, "Language well taught in primary grades is the foundation of good English." Miss McKay read Miss Gardner's paper on language in the first grade. Here, some written work is begun. Public speaking is difficult and therefore sympathy and praise from the teacher is necessary. Because language is the universal means of telling character best efforts should be put forth to have children speak and write language well.

The discussion of 'Reading' was introduced by Miss Foss. Reading is recognized now as the most important subject in primary work. Interest is the keynote of good reading. A very intimate relation exists between story-telling and reading. The present primer was criticized adversely because it is not properly graded. This does not make so much difference to the experienced teacher but is detrimental to the inexperienced. Miss Dix, after having given the subject of supplementary reading a thorough investigation, submitted a list of supplementary reading books.

The teaching of writing was discussed by Miss Esplen. There is great controversy as to the methods to be used to obtain the two essentials of good writing—legibility and speed. In order to obtain these there must be muscular movement and control. It was suggested that muscular movement be emphasized in the primary grades and that control be left until the senior grades. Inspector Phinn advocated blackboard writing, exclusively, for three or four months in the primary grades. He said also that he thought there was too much writing in primary grades and children became careless. In Toronto, Dr. Marty is stressing large writing.

The last, very unique and interesting item of the afternoon proceedings was, "The Demonstration of Class Room Games." Misses Bennett, Olga Johnston, E. Morrow, Eva Outram, D. Batten, C. McKay had charge of these and a very enjoyable, as well as a very profitable half hour was spent.

1087 THE PROPRIETORS

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Ennismore,
Nov. 26, 1923.

TO THE EXAMINER:

In your paper of Nov. 26, you have written regarding the adventure of Eddie Morton and Tommy Rice which to me seems very much in sympathy with the boys.

Eddie Martin, a ward of Children's Aid Society, Stratford, came to me in 1917 and has been in my charge since. I have trained and treated him as a child of my own and sent him to school till he was over school age. Since then he has been working on wages by no means as meagre as those mentioned by Mr. Rahal.

The hum drum of a farm may seem very monotonous to some, but the authorities of the Society seem to feel and know it is the place where the very cream of humanity is produced.

Eddie has received board, clothing and school, and since he stopped school has worked for a straight wage with which the authorities of the Shelter are quite satisfied. If Mr. Rahal well consider what we have done for the boy who came to me as a small child uneducated and untrained for work, he might then wonder less why he ran away, but I thank Mr. Rahal for sheltering Eddie who when he left me was in no need whatever for sympathy. As for Tommy Rice, he was free to go where or when he liked and had no need to take Mr. Coon's canoe as a means of transportation.

WORD SINNER IS OLD FASHIONED

Not Considered Polite, Says Rev. Dr. Nugent—Euphemisms and Abstract Terms Replace It.

OMEMEE, Nov. 27.—The Rev. Dr. Walter Henry Nugent, minister of the Central Presbyterian Church of Portland, Oregon, who is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nugent, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church on Sunday evening in the absence of the pastor, Rev. E. W. Rowland.

Dr. Nugent has been gone from Omemee for more than a quarter of a century, and has for many years occupied leading pulpits in large cities of the United States. Nevertheless, there were many present on Sunday evening who remembered him as a boy and who were glad of the opportunity of hearing him again.

"Religious address," said Dr. Nugent, in the course of his sermon, "has for the most part gone into the abstract and essayic. The word 'sinner' is almost dropped from the Christian vocabulary; it is not thought to be polite nowadays. It is old-fashioned. If I wish to convey to a man the idea that he is a sinner, I must say that he is spiritually erratic, or he has some moral deficiencies, or he has not received a proper spiritual development. While the old hymn,

Come ye sinners, poor and needy,
Weak and wounded, sick and sore,
Jesus ready stands to save you
Full of pity, love and power.
He is able, He is willing,
Doubt no more.'

When did you last hear it or sing it? In the first place, men are no longer sinners, according to some modern thought, and they are neither poor nor needy. Why, I have heard some good men say that there need be no great change in an individual to make him fit for future glory. All that is necessary for him to do is to stop sweating, clear his throat a couple of times, and he is fit for the kingdom of God."

Atonement Fundamental.

"We hear in religious circles the word 'fundamental' very often these days, and some things are by some people called fundamental which are not fundamental at all. When I hear the word, I always ask, 'Fundamental to what?' There is one truth, however, around which all the battles of Christianity must be fought—that is, 'the atonement'—the sacrifice made on Calvary's Cross for the remission of sins. And if the whole world is not sunk in ruin, if all men have not gone astray, if they are not lost without Christ, then the Bible is a gigantic fraud, for, from beginning to end, it sets forth that they are, and if there must be an earthquake in a man's soul, shaking down his sins, and if there must be the trumpet blast of Christ's resurrection calling him into the liberty wherewith Christ sets him free, why not proclaim it?"

Specific Invitations.

"I believe," said Dr. Nugent in conclusion, "that the great reason why more people do not come to Christ is because they are not specifically invited. The insurance solicitor, who only praises his company and never sells a policy, is not long retained by his employers. There are too many preachers and laymen, who also fail to make a sale, fail to bring those with whom they associate to a definite decision for Christ, because they are not specific. If after this service some of you should come and take me by the hand and say, 'I'm glad to see and hear you again, won't you come around and have dinner with us some day?' I would thank you and probably say, 'Yes, I shall be glad to do so if I can,' but I would not very likely go on that indefinite and general invitation. But if you were to say to me, 'Look here, you are going to be in town to-morrow and I want you to come to dinner at 12 o'clock. We'll kill the biggest chicken in the yard,' I'd say, 'Let me see! Yes, I can come,' and I would be there on time too. What the Church needs greatly is that from our pulpits and rostrums and in our commingling with our fellows we, who believe the Gospel, should be definite and specific in inviting men and women to become confessed followers of Jesus Christ, for the world will not more quickly accept a general invitation to the marriage supper of the Lamb than it will a general invitation to your home to dinner."

Died in Walkerton.

Mrs. M. J. Parsons was called away on Sunday owing to the sudden death of her mother, Mrs. Harrison. Deceased lady had been visiting her daughter at Walkerton, and was down town on Saturday afternoon, evidently in the best of health, when she was overcome by a stroke of paralysis, from which she never rallied. The late Mrs. Harrison had spent some months with her daughter in Omemee, and had become well and favorably known among the citizens in town, all of whom were shocked to hear the sad news, and extend to Mrs. Parsons their heartfelt sympathy in her bereavement.

Citizens Relieved.

Several Provincial detectives from Lindsay were in Omemee on Wednesday evening last to try and round up Russel Perrin," whom they believed to be here. However, they were unsuccessful, but he has since been arrested in Toronto, much to the relief of some Omemee citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Courtney commenced moving on Tuesday to their new home, formerly owned and occupied by Dr. A. R. Younie, on King Street West.

The stork called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Deyell on Monday and left a fine baby boy.

Miss Ruth Corneil has returned to her school duties at Fenelon Falls, after spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Corneil.

Master Laurence Sandy assisted in the entertainment in Rev. Dewey Stinson's church at Wilford Monday evening.

The Young People of Christ Church, Omemee, intend holding their annual bazaar on Wednesday next, Dec. 5th, in the basement of the church.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church held their regular meeting on Thursday afternoon last. Among the business transacted was the purchasing of three dozen hymn books, to be placed in the auditorium of the church, also a light is to be installed on the steps leading to the choir loft. Much discussion followed as to the decorating of the interior of the church, but it was decided to leave it over until spring. The annual Christmas tree was left for the Epworth League to arrange for.

The recent snowstorm of Friday brought a number of cutters and sleighs into Omemee, and the jingle of the bells reminded one and all that Christmas is drawing near.

The many friends of Mr. Melville Earle will be pleased to know he is able to be down in the office of his store, after his recent fall which resulted in the breaking of his leg.

WOMAN'S HAIR

The curling golden tendrill hair that is stirred so seductively by the breezes of fiction had best confine its stirring to the pages of the novel. The man of the present prefers the classic lines of the Greek coiffure—graceful waves whose undulations are kept in place by the helpful aid of a hair net.

Turmoil of bobbed hair and loosely piled coiffure have "gone out." The reason, perhaps, is that men have shown that they favor the smooth neatness of a hairdress which is not allowed to run rampant. Just as men thrive in a tidy home, so they either consciously or unconsciously admire tidiness in a woman's toilette. The carefully arranged coiffure is the keynote of a really trim appearance.

Therefore, a stray hair may now become as vital a detail as the stray nail in the horseshoe, for the want of which the kingdom was lost. The proverbial entrancing curl at the nape of the neck is so apt to become a straight wisp at the crucial moment! It has not proved impervious to wind and weather, and often times has failed at a most important moment, thus changing the fortune of many a maid.

There is a sad story of a girl whose hair stood out in a fluffy haze about her forehead. It was, to say the least, most alluring. But the day became warmer, and the fluffiness, with nothing to restrain its wayward tendencies, fell with the force of gravity across her forehead, and her appearance suffered that peculiar devastation which only straggling locks can give. Her young man was no longer entranced and went the way of all flesh.

"Well-Coiffed Hair" is the creed of Dorothy Bruce, a Winter Garden beauty, and her popularity on Broadway bespeaks its success. She says she spends more time in caring for her hair and arranging her coiffure than she does on all other details of her toilette put together. "A large portion of my life" she laughingly explained to me a few days ago, "is given over to having my hair brushed and waved, for the secret of beautiful hair lies in the brushing. It brings out a gloss and gives the hair a pliability that is an essential to the perfectly arranged coiffure."

While some of our beauties now adhere to the momentary Paris fashion of not waving their hair, Miss Bruce is still a strong advocate for the marcell wave. She thinks it greatly enhances the line of the head if the hair is dressed simply and gives a truly artistic contour.

To all who would achieve artistic beauty, Miss Bruce gives this advice: "Study the lines of your head, always remembering that the simple mode is most effective. Keep your hair care fully brushed and waved, and confined under the all-important hair net. Then you can meet the world and know that no stray lock may be your undoing."

A Thought

See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves and to all men.—1 Thess. 5:15

Never let a man imagine that he can pursue a good end by evil means, without sinning against his own soul. The evil effect on himself is certain.—Southey.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

Two principal kinds of head injuries are those that come from contact and shock and those that result from blows. In injuries of the first kind, where the victim is usually thrown on his head, the result may be skull fracture or a fatal brain concussion.

Another cause of severe head injuries is through fainting or loss of consciousness. Sometimes the head strikes with such terrific force that skull fracture results and death follows without regaining consciousness.

In injuries of the first class, little can be done by the layman, except to make the patient comfortable in a reclining position with the head slightly elevated. Insist on quietness and all absence of confusion. If you are sure about the manner and cause of the injury and no marks appear on the head or body, a cold compress or ice cap may tend to relieve the patient until the arrival of a physician, who should be summoned at the first possible moment.

In head injuries of the second class a bruise, cut or severe face or scalp wound may result. Guard carefully against any infection from which meningitis, intracranial infections, brain abscess or phlebitis may result. Such wounds on scalp and face should be disinfected at once with iodine.

If you have a chance to aid any person who is stunned or unconscious from brain or head injury, first find out if there are cuts, bumps or bruises. Be sure the person has not ainted by the loss of blood from fuch injury. Do not attempt any snternal treatment or pour any water ior other liquid down the throat.

POWER LOSS IN TIRES

In the aggregate several million gallons of gasoline were unnecessarily dissipated last year. F. C. Brown Assistant Director of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, makes this frank statement in a survey of gasoline production and use recently compiled. "We have heard much of the waste of gasoline" he says. "We may not be concerned seriously as to the right of any man, woman or child to consume gasoline, but we are concerned to know wherein the efficiency of motor vehicles may be improved both in the interests of economy and of the conservation of available fuel supplies."

Much of the gasoline which annually trickles through the several million carburetors of the cars of the North American Continent can be saved without resort to methods which entail expense or constant attention. Very few car owners are aware of the possible waste of gasoline arising from unnecessary power losses in automobile tires. The fact that much is lost, however, is definitely established by the survey, which embodies the results of a number of tests made under varying road and tire conditions. Power lost in tires, it has been found, is just about equal to the power lost in overcoming air resistance when a car is running at fifteen miles per hour. To consider stopping all of these loss would be of as little use as to endeavor to prevent the loss of heat in the engine itself, but it can be minimized, and that by very simple means.

Less Through Heat

Some of the facts brought out by the investigation are, by virtue of their magnitude, astonishing. For instance, most motorists will be surprised to hear that approximately two hundred million gallons of gasoline in 1921 were dissipated as heat in automobile tires, and it will be a further surprise to know how much of this loss is entirely unnecessary. Millions of gallons can be saved to advantage. It is much easier to gain public attention on waste that occurs in a new art than it is in practices that are generations old. For example, we get very little response if we show that one-half o. the coal burned in our household furnaces is ineffective in keeping our homes warm.

The heating of an automobile tire arises from imperfect elasticity. The tire flattens out where it touches the road, and this continual flattening out, followed by restoration to normal shape, generates heat in the same manner that continued bending and straightening of a wire generates heat. Heat is molecular motion, and if the bending of the wire does not displace molecules appreciably there is not much heat generated. For example, the spring actuating a pendulum in a clock is so elastic and moves such a slight distance that most of the energy put into the spring when it is bent is given back in assisting to push the pendulum to the opposite end of the swing. If an automobile tire could be made of steel and designed so as to suffer only slight deformation, we might almost do away completely with this power loss. There is, for example, very little loss of energy of this kind in the tires of railway wheels.

But we must not forget that the main purpose of pneumatic tires is to produce safe and comfortable riding with the least wear and tear of the automobile and the road.

Expense

The car user will not make any saving that requires either expense or continued attention. Fortunately the aggregate saving of which we are speaking can be made almost without expense or attention once the car user has become informed of the facts.

The power loss is greatest in relatively flat tires. When the air pressure as measured by the tire gauge, is 30 pounds per square inch on 33 x 4 cord tires supporting a car weighing a little less than a ton, the loss in the tires is 2.4 horsepower when coasting freely at 15 miles per hour, but if the air pressure is 90 pounds, the loss is cut approximately in half. This loss increases almost proportional to the speed.

The reader can conclude for himself that in going a given distance the speed makes no difference in the energy lost, and that the tires should be kept inflated at as high pressure as consistent with the condition of the car and the road-bed. Aside from the power loss, it has been generally known that tires give more miles service when properly inflated.

The tire loss is increased in direct proportion to the total load of the car and its occupants. Here again the reader may draw his own conclusion as to the economy of using the smallest number of cars that will suffice to give the desired transportation.

Fabrics vs. Cords

Wonderful advances have been made in the perfecting of tires, but it is difficult to describe in detail the requisites of construction necessary to obtain minimum power loss. Nevertheless, we can illustrate one line of development of which every car user should be aware. In fabric tires of the size previously mentioned and inflation pressure of 50 pounds, with a 25 miles per hour speed, the power loss was found to range between .87 and 1.17 horsepower for four different makes of tires. The mean loss was 1.02 horsepower. In a similar number of cord tires of as many makes the loss ranged between .65 and .8 horsepower, with a mean loss of .73 horsepower. In a single tire, therefore, there is about a quarter horsepower loss in fabric tires in excess of that lost in cord tires.

"There's Nothing to Equal "Dr. Wood's" Norway Pine Syrup For Coughs and Colds

Mrs. David Thompson, West River St., Paris, Ont., writes:—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

For myself and children I use nothing else.

My little girl, five years old, has had bronchial trouble ever since she had the "flu" a few years ago, and, now, whenever she gets a slight cold she develops a very nasty cough, but all I have to do is to give her a few doses of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Also for myself, and the other children, I can find nothing to equal it, in fact, it was only a short time ago that I gave it to my ten months old baby, and could immediately see the difference it made in her. Now, I always keep Norway Pine Syrup in the house, as I feel there is nothing to equal it."

A NEW HAVEN MAN RAN WILD AND KILLED BOY

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Geo. Kenneth Whiteside, whom New Haven physicians were preparing to confine for mental derangement, and Miss Willford E. Wheaton, aged 20, also of New Haven, who left New Haven yesterday to elope, dashed up to Hartford at 60 miles an hour, knocked down and killed John Fedora, aged 8, sped north on the main street on the wrong side of the street at 50 miles an hour, and crashed into four autos. The Fedora boy was knocked under the wheels of a trolley car going south, and his body was cut in two.

Whiteside was only slightly injured. Miss Wheaton sustained several lacerations about the head and face. Both were taken to Hartford Hospital. Whiteside served overseas and was a Yale student. Miss Wheaton, according to her brother, left home without hat or coat, and had gone with Whiteside to get married.

ALBERTA COAL IS LIKED HERE

Local Distributor Has Orders Booked For Ten Cars.

"Alberta coal has caught the people's fancy" is the verdict of Ed. Cooney, interviewed today regarding the success of his experiment in disposing of the western fuel. "I have orders booked ahead for ten cars with universal satisfaction. Many more had I not stopped taking them when the coal did not arrive" he said.

Mr. Cooney, appointed distributor in this district, disposed of thirteen cars with unversal satisfacton. Many of the people to whom he sold the coal have called on him to say how well satisfied they are, and he is now endeavoring to obtain more of the coal at the $9 freight rate.

As a test case Mr. Cooney has ordered one car, which may now be coming forward. If this is shipped at the $9 freight he will probably order more, but at the $12.70 rate he could not handle it at the low price he has hitherto charged—from $14 to $15 a ton. Despite the enormous expense for equipment to handle the thirteen cars he received, Mr. Cooney was able to undersell the Toronto dealers in this coal by fifty cents a ton. About five hundred tons were disposed of by him, and many of the buyers have placed their orders for repeat lots.

Voice Satisfaction.

With each of the first orders distributed by Mr. Cooney the Examiner gave a post card on which were printed questions relative to the burning and heating qualities of the coal, which it is intended to tabulate for public information.

Since a fairly good idea of the quality of the coal must now have been formed by purchasers, it is requested that the cards should be returned. There are still a few not received, and if the truth about the coal is to be established in Peterboro it is important that a complete record should be available.

Names of those signing the cards will not be used except by permission, and in case the cards have been lost or mislaid a service will be done the community if the users of the coal will write their opinions on a slip of paper and leave it in The Examiner office.

FRESH BUTTER DIRECT BY MAIL

600 Michigan Dairymen Show How to Oust the Middleman and Take His Profit.

RAVENNA, Mich., No. 28.—Six hundred Muskegon County dairymen today are not worrying about the profits of the middleman. They have solved the problem of direct selling to the consumer and for nine years have been taking the profits which ordinarily would go to the retail dealer. Uncle Sam is their salesman.

The farmers are members of the Ravenna Incorporated Butter Co. of Ravenna, which today is pointed out as one of the most successful examples of co-operative marketing. The secret is its direct selling campaign by parcel post.

The Ravenna company has 1,900 customers, most of them in Detroit, and 63 per cent. of the total business is done by parcel post. What is more, the company has proved that direct selling to the small consumer can be done as a credit basis with less loss than comes to the sale to large consumers or the middleman.

The direct selling campaign by parcel post has brought to the 600 members from 5 to 11 cents more a pound for butterfat than members of other co-operative dairies have obtained.

A $281,000 Business.

Figures tell the story of the Ravenna company, which was reorganized in 1914 under the special act of 1913. Until that time the concern was operating as a co-partnership. A fire destroyed the creamery and 200 old members advanced $36 each to wipe out the obligations. In return each received two shares of stock in the new organization.

There are 600 shares at $10 par value. Excepting the 200 old members all received one share, each and most of the 200 members have given up one share of their stock to new members since 1914.

The company has prospered since the reorganization and the business has grown rapidly. Last year it did $281,000 in butter business, selling 648,000 pounds of butter. Of this amount 400,000 pounds were sold by parcel post to the 1,900 different customers.

The operating plan is simple and the overhead is kept down to a minimum. The company maintains a sinking fund of $1,000. Twice monthly checks are sent out by the company to the farmers for the cream, but November checks are for October business. It requires about one month to sell the butter and to balance accounts, hence the month's delay in the checks.

The operating expenses are deducted from the two weeks' business and the sinking fund replenished to the $1,000 mark and then the balance prorated to the producers. In other words, the company obtains the cream, makes the butter and sells it, paying the farmer the proceeds less operating expenses.

The overhead expenses on the $280,000 business for 1922 were $20,000, or about 7 per cent. of the total. In view of the nature of the business, and the many customers, this is considered a low figure.

An Endless Chain.

The price of the butter is based on the Chicago market. The price charged to the customers is from 3 to 8 cents above the Chicago market. An endless chain business is conducted. One satisfied customer brings another, until today the company is unable to supply the demands for its butter.

All the parcel post business is done by credit. The company demands only a recommendation from some customer or a bank reference when it ships to a new customer.

The books show that the company suffered a loss of only $613 last year due to bad accounts. This, it was explained by H. S. Averill, was due largely to two customers going into bankruptcy.

"We used $5,000 in postage last year and our loss on postage was only $61.44," said Mr. Averill.

J. P. Bacon, employed in the wholesale stamp department of the Detroit postoffice, is the largest customer. Mr. Bacon obtained a shipment of 2,715 pounds of butter this week. This butter goes to Detroit postal employes and Mr. Bacon, like the Ravenna company, simply adds the operating expenses to the cost.

"To show how our business is increasing, the figures for the first six months of 1923 show the sale of 400,000 pounds of butter," said Mr. Averill. "During that time the average price paid for butterfat to the farmers has been 55.7 cents a pound. This is much in excess of other co-operative concerns. In fact, the price paid by co-operative concerns is all we receive here and it has been from 5 to 11 cents in excess.

"We have no competition. We sell fresh butter direct to the customer. He gets it at a fair price and he gets good wholesome butter. We do not allow a surplus for dividends. The money is divided on the business of the preceding month with the exception of the $1,000 sinking fund.

"We receive cream from those outside of our organization. They share the same as the members. Our organization does not make it possible to discriminate between stockholders and non-stockholders."

The company also sells coal to the public, but no profit is charged and this is a separate business started in the first place for the benefit of the stockholders.

Mr. Averill, the manager, is himself a farmer. He has been manager since the reorganization.

The company plays an important part in the community life of this community. Yearly, it has a picnic which has come to be a civic affair.

GOLDEN RULES KEEPING WELL

Some Good Advice for Women—A Three Mile Walk.

The biggest thought in the world today is to keep well. Health means happiness. Health enables us to accomplish our ambitions, and without it life is pretty futile.

The only perfectly healthy person is the one who has never been sick. Perhaps this axiom is realized best by some of our stage favorites, so many of whom make the candle burn at both ends.

One of the hardest working of our popular actresses is Fannie Brice, the comedienne, who thinks nothing of playing in a revue and dashing from that to vaudeville in one of the current bills, or in a midnight revue at the same time she is doing something for the motion pictures. All such activity, in addition to managing her house and superintending the care of her children, takes a lot of energy. She has made the quest for health her creed.

Three golden rules she observes to the letter. They are: to eat wisely, to exercise, to keep clean. If these are observed, she says, one can accomplish any amount of work and still have time for play. She does play, too.

A diet is very difficult to recommend, according to Miss Brice, for all women are "so different." If one really wants to keep in condition she should learn just how certain foods affect her. Of course, there are good general rules that can always be taken into account, but the fine points can only be worked out by the woman herself. Having learned these important details, she should observe them to the letter. Of course, a woman should always eat moderately, which does not mean that she should starve herself. A light breakfast and well balanced luncheon and dinner will keep any figure trim and fit.

Quite as important to Miss Brice are exercise and cleanliness. She believes that the pores of the skin cannot breathe unless the body is kept perfectly clean. She is a strong advocate of the simply bathing processes, free from unnecessary cleansing accessories and even a sparing use of talcum powders and toilet waters. With the body perfectly clean, the day's exercise should begin.

A three-mile walk is ideal, says the actress, but if that is not possible a strenuous game of tennis is a splendid substitute for the Daily Dozen will do the trick. But the dozen cannot be taken frivolously. Many women are prone to sail through the exercises, lightly pointing their toes and carefully bending their bodies. Not a drop of perspiration do they start, and then they wonder why they do not get results. The exercises have to be taken like work or any serious pursuit. And they should be followed by a shower bath.

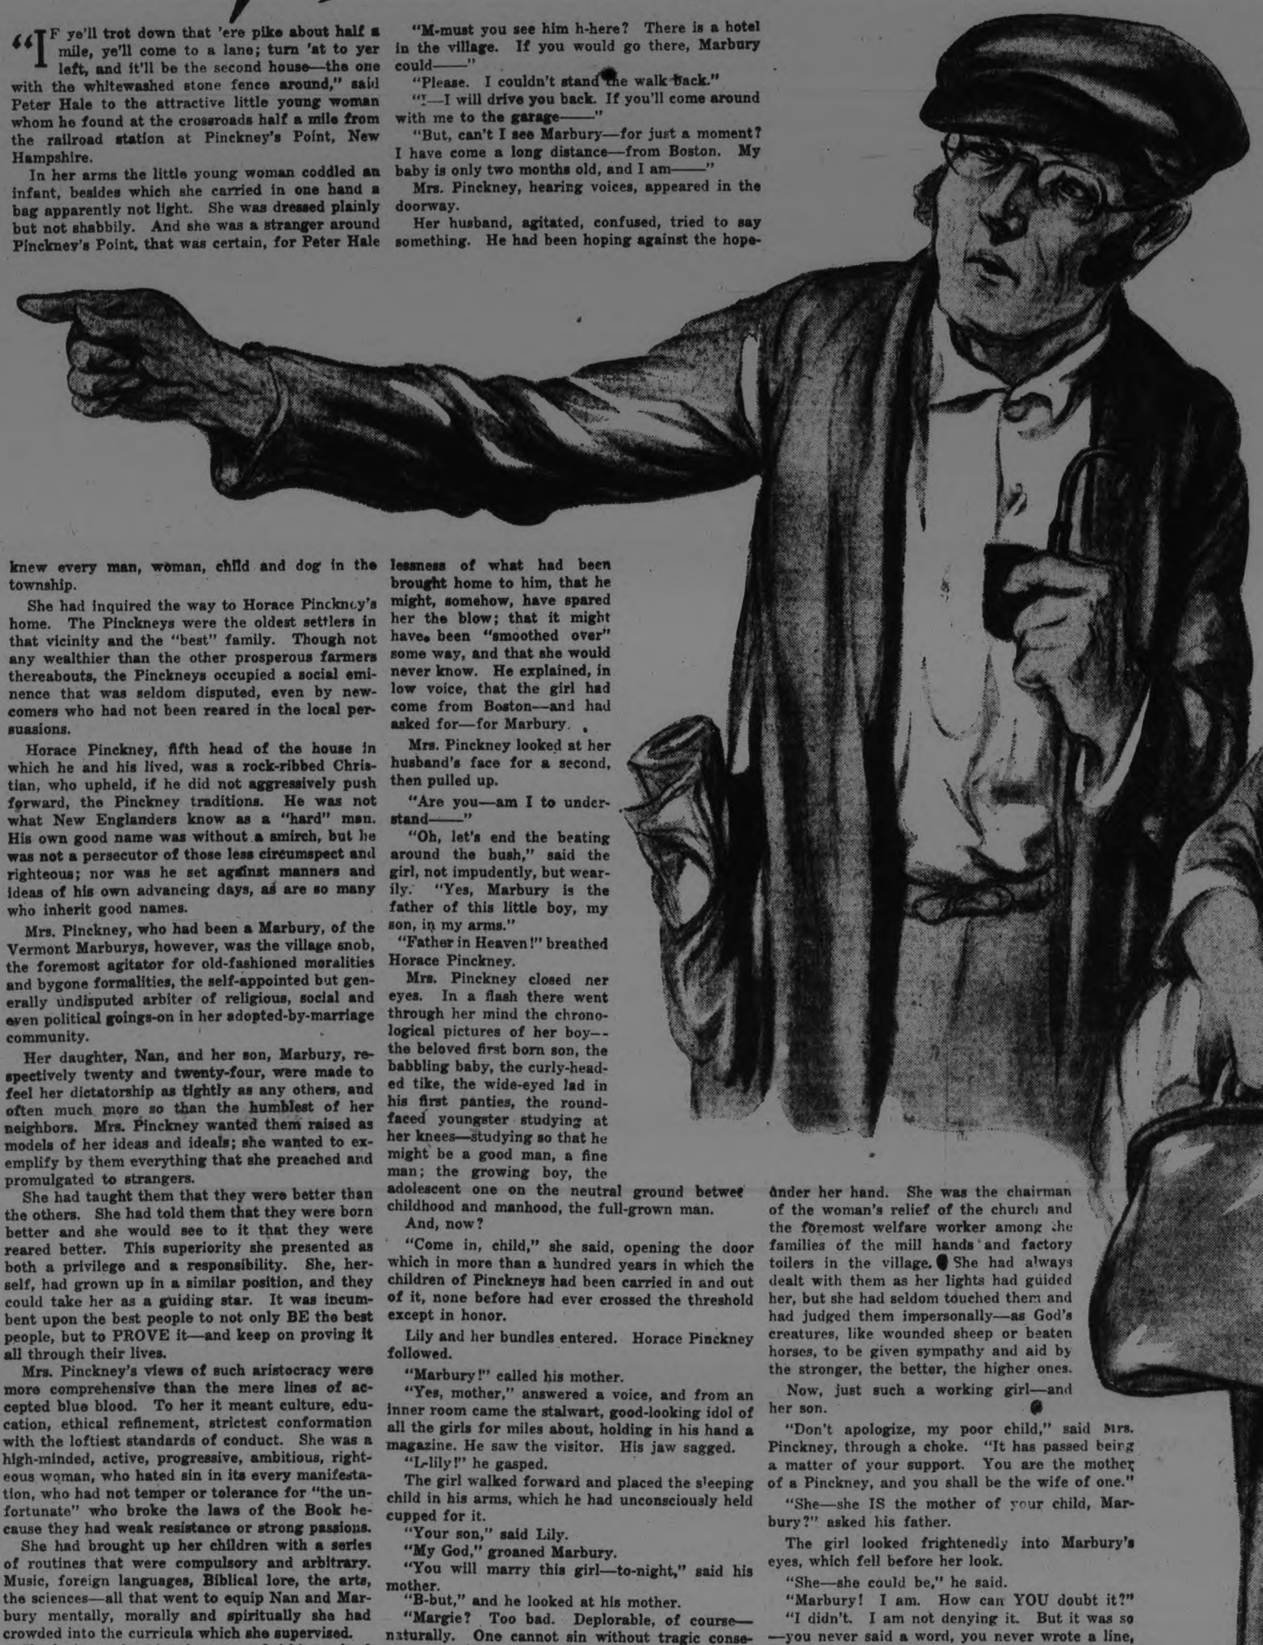
Stop, Look, Listen by Jack Lait

"IF ye'll trot down that 'ere pike about half a mile, ye'll come to a lane; turn 'at to yer left, and it'll be the second house—the one with the whitewashed stone fence around," said Peter Hale to the attractive little young woman whom he found at the crossroads half a mile from the railroad station at Pinckney's Point, New Hampshire.

In her arms the little young woman coddled an infant, besides which she carried in one hand a bag apparently not light. She was dressed plainly but not shabbily. And she was a stranger around Pinckney's Point, that was certain, for Peter Hale knew every man, woman, child and dog in the township.



She had inquired the way to Horace Pinckney's home. The Pinckneys were the oldest settlers in that vicinity and the "best" family. Though not any wealthier than the other prosperous farmers thereabouts, the Pinckneys occupied a social eminence that was seldom disputed, even by newcomers who had not been reared in the local persuasions.

Horace Pinckney, fifth head of the house in which he and his lived, was a rock-ribbed Christian, who upheld, if he did not aggressively push forward, the Pinckney traditions. He was not what New Englanders know as a "hard" man. His own good name was without a smirch, but he was not a persecutor of those less circumspect and righteous; nor was he set against manners and ideas of his own advancing days, as are so many who inherit good names.

Mrs. Pinckney, who had been a Marbury, of the Vermont Marburys, however, was the village snob, the foremost agitator for old-fashioned moralities and bygone formalities, the self-appointed but generally undisputed arbiter of religious, social and even political goings-on in her adopted-by-marriage community.

Her daughter, Nan, and her son, Marbury, respectively twenty and twenty-four, were made to feel her dictatorship as tightly as any others, and often much more so than the humblest of her neighbors. Mrs. Pinckney wanted them raised as models of her ideas and ideals; she wanted to exemplify by them everything that she preached and promulgated to strangers.

She had taught them that they were better than the others. She had told them that they were born better and she would see to it that they were reared better. This superiority she presented as both a privilege and a responsibility. She, herself, had grown up in a similar position, and they could take her as a guiding star. It was incumbent upon the best people to not only BE the best people, but to PROVE it—and keep on proving it all through their lives.

Mrs. Pinckney's views of such aristocracy were more comprehensive than the mere lines of accepted blue blood. To her it meant culture, education, ethical refinement, strictest conformation with the loftiest standards of conduct. She was a high-minded, active, progressive, ambitious, righteous woman, who hated sin in its every manifestation, who had not temper or tolerance for "the unfortunate" who broke the laws of the Book because they had weak resistance or strong passions.

She had brought up her children with a series of routines that were compulsory and arbitrary. Music, foreign languages, Biblical lore, the arts, the sciences—all that went to equip Nan and Marbury mentally, morally and spiritually she had crowded into the curricula which she supervised.

She had sent her daughter to a finishing school for a year, so that she might meet young women of the better classes from larger cities and other localities, lest she be provincial. Marbury she had sent to one of the most famous of American universities for the full course, and he had been graduated as an engineer.

Horace Pinckney was sitting on the front veranda of his ancestral home when he heard the metal gate in his stone fence click to. He glanced down the neat graveled path and saw a strange girl coming toward him, with a child in her arms and a bag in one hand. He had heard the twilight train whistle away nearly an hour earlier, so he at once judged that she must have walked the distance of something more than a mile with her heavy burdens, for he knew that she was not a resident of the vicinity.

He rose and walked to the edge of the steps.

"What can I do for you?" he asked, as he saw her approach him instead of taking the turn that led to the rear of the house.

"I am looking for Mr. Pinckney," she said.

"I am Mr. Pinckney."

"I mean Marbury."

Horace Pinckney almost staggered. The situation was too obvious for conjecture. His boy had been away from home the better portions of four years. Here was a girl mother, coming home to him, with——

"Y-you want to see my son?" he asked, with quavering voice.

"If you are Marbury's father, yes. Is he at home?"

"He—I think he is."

"Will you please tell him Lily is here?"

That settled it. Lily!

"M-must you see him h-here? There is a hotel in the village. If you would go there, Marbury could——"

"Please. I couldn't stand the walk back."

"I—I will drive you back. If you'll come around with me to the garage——"

"But, can't I see Marbury—for just a moment? I have come a long distance—from Boston. My baby is only two months old, and I am——"

Mrs. Pinckney, hearing voices, appeared in the doorway.

Her husband, agitated, confused, tried to say something. He had been hoping against the hopelessness of what had been brought home to him, that he might, somehow, have spared her the blow; that it might have been "smoothed over" some way, and that she would never know. He explained, in low voice, that the girl had come from Boston—and had asked for—for Marbury.

Mrs. Pinckney looked at her husband's face for a second, then pulled up.

"Are you—am I to understand——"

"Oh, let's end the beating around the bush," said the girl, not impudently, but wearily. "Yes, Marbury is the father of this little boy, my son, in my arms."

"Father in Heaven!" breathed Horace Pinckney.

Mrs. Pinckney closed her eyes. In a flash there went through her mind the chronological pictures of her boy—the beloved first born son, the babbling baby, the curly-headed tike, the wide-eyed lad in his first panties, the round-faced youngster studying at her knees—studying so that he might be a good man, a fine man; the growing boy, the adolescent one on the neutral ground betwee childhood and manhood, the full-grown man.

And, now?

"Come in, child," she said, opening the door which in more than a hundred years in which the children of Pinckneys had been carried in and out of it, none before had ever crossed the threshold except in honor.

Lily and her bundles entered. Horace Pinckney followed.

"Marbury!" called his mother.

"Yes, mother," answered a voice, and from an inner room came the stalwart, good-looking idol of all the girls for miles about, holding in his hand a magazine. He saw the visitor. His jaw sagged.

"L-lily!" he gasped.

The girl walked forward and placed the sleeping child in his arms, which he had unconsciously held cupped for it.

"Your son," said Lily.

"My God," groaned Marbury.

"You will marry this girl—to-night," said his mother.

"B-but," and he looked at his mother.

"Margie? Too bad. Deplorable, of course—naturally. One cannot sin without tragic consequences, even more tragic to others, always. But, having dishonored the good name you bear, once, you will not further violate it by acting the coward. You will write Margie a note, giving what explanation you feel is best. And you will marry this girl to-night—here—in our home. I do not know the circumstances—who she is, or how this came about. But if you are the father of her child, you will marry her and she will live here as do the other Pinckneys and as have all the other Pinckneys, until you are willing and able to establish your wife and child in another home of your own. Make the girl comfortable. I shall phone the minister to be here as soon as he can make it."

"Thank you," said Lily. "I shan't bother you, though, if Marbury doesn't want it. I just couldn't go on any further. You see, I work. And for weeks I haven't been able to earn a cent, and the doctors' bills besides—it was very hard. So I borrowed enough to come here and ask him if he wouldn't help me take care of the little fellow, at least, so that I could go back earning my way and start paying off my debts. Otherwise I wouldn't ever have troubled you, really."

A working girl! Mrs. Pinckney couldn't quite resist a little shiver. After all, she was still a snob in her breeding and in her natural selection. She was a strict moralist and a heroic Christian, but she loved good blood, more as a matter of taste than justice. She had married Horace Pinckney because she loved him, but she wouldn't have loved him had he been Horace Jones. She had held her head high, all through life. She had no illusive dreams that this episode would remain a secret. She must face the world, her world, to-morrow.

More than once other working girls had come under her hand. She was the chairman of the woman's relief of the church and the foremost welfare worker among the families of the mill hands and factory toilers in the village. She had always dealt with them as her lights had guided her, but she had seldom touched them and had judged them impersonally—as God's creatures, like wounded sheep or beaten horses, to be given sympathy and aid by the stronger, the better, the higher ones.

Now, just such a working girl—and her son.

"Don't apologize, my poor child," said Mrs. Pinckney, through a choke. "It has passed being a matter of your support. You are the mother of a Pinckney, and you shall be the wife of one."

"She—she IS the mother of your child, Marbury?" asked his father.

The girl looked frightenedly into Marbury's eyes, which fell before her look.

"She—she could be," he said.

"Marbury! I am. How can YOU doubt it?"

"I didn't. I am not denying it. But it was so—you never said a word, you never wrote a line, you—how was I to know?"

"That's enough," sighed Mrs. Pinckney. "I am going inside, to telephone."

The three of them—the father, the son and the girl, with the fourth of them asleep in the boy's arms—stood there. From one to the other they looked at each other, and all were silent.

"Hey—what's up out there?" came a merry voice, a girl's voice, from within.

"Nan," whispered Horace Pinckney. "Good Lord, she doesn't know anything of this—yet."

"What's the pow-wow?" called Nan.

No one answered. So she tripped in. The mischievous expression in her pretty face died out as she took in the four-angled picture.

"Lily!" she exclaimed.

Horace Pinckney suddenly stiffened.

"You—you know her?" he asked. "You knew of—of—"

"She was a waitress in the lunchroom at school. The boys from Mar's college were always coming over to rush our girls. That's how Mar met Lily. He used to come over to call on Margie."

"And—you knew that this girl—that your brother and this girl—"

"I knew that he fancied her, yes. So did every other boy that ever saw her. Lily's a beauty. There were more boys crazy over her than over any of the students, believe me. But I never knew it had gone so far, although I saw them joyriding one Saturday . . . oh, I'm sorry; of course, if they were secretly married, that explains everything, doesn't it, though?"

"They were not secretly married," said Horace Pinckney, hollowly.

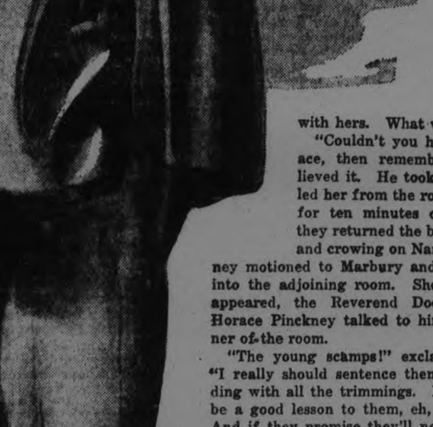
"It was a secret from me, and I'm his own sister. What IS your idea of secrecy?"

"They—they're going to be married—to-night. Mother is telephoning Dr. Casson now."

"They—they—what? Oh, I see; they were married by a justice, and now they're going to have a religious ceremony. Isn't that romantic? . . . H'm, Mar—let me see my—is it a niece or a nephew?"

Marbury looked blankly at Lily.

"I haven't seen it myself," he confessed sheepishly. "Is it a boy or a girl?"



"A boy," said Lily. "A beautiful, blue-eyed boy. He's the image of you, too. Look at him."

Nan tip-toed over very quietly, and with reverent hands unfolded the shawl. A chubby little child lay there. Marbury, his pulses pounding and his knees knocking, gazed down. Horace Pinckney, so suddenly a grandfather, crept forward and bent his head to see. The child was waking. Its eyes slowly opened, then blinked at the light. Then it cackled. Lily hastily took the bundle from Marbury's arms and held it warmly. Again they all gathered about and looked at it, curiously, frightenedly, yet fascinated. That was the picture Mrs. Pinckney beheld when she returned to the room unheard by the others.

She came up and looked over her son's shoulder.

"It surely is a Pinckney," she said. "The family resemblance is marked."

"Yes," said Nan, feeling that she should save any explaining that her mother might make to her, who had not been within hearing when the first council was held, "it's a darling. I want it called Horace, after dad."

Marbury looked at Lily.

"I hadn't named it yet," she answered. "Thought of calling it Marbury, but if you'd rather——"

"I—I should be very happy to have your son named after me—his, h'm—grandfather," coughed Horace Pinckney.

"Isn't that too dandy?" effervesced Nan. "And just think, mother, Mar and Lily have been married ever so long, secretly—by a justice of the peace—and now they're to have a religious ceremony. Oh, I think it's just too sweet for words."

Mrs. Pinckney swept all eyes with hers. What was this?

"Couldn't you h——," started Horace, then remembered that Nan believed it. He took his wife's arm and led her from the room. They were out for ten minutes or more, and when they returned the babe was wide awake and crowing on Nan's lap. Mrs. Pinckney motioned to Marbury and Lily to follow her into the adjoining room. Shortly after they reappeared, the Reverend Doctor Casson came. Horace Pinckney talked to him quietly in a corner of the room.

"The young scamps!" exclaimed the minister. "I really should sentence them to a church wedding with all the trimmings. But maybe this will be a good lesson to them, eh, Brother Pinckney? And if they promise they'll never, never be married secretly again by a justice of the peace, why, I'll unite them—again, of course—here, as you wish it. . . . Step forward, you young rascals. you should get a good spanking, both of you. . . . Do you, Marbury Pinckney, take this young woman . . . what is the name? Oh, yes . . . this young woman, Lilian Pinckney . . . no, that won't do. This is awkward, isn't it?

"Just this situation never came up before me before . . . that is . . . oh, very well. The maiden name? Swanson? H'm, never met the Swansons of South Boston. However . . . we will proceed. . . ."

"The family honor is saved," said Horace Pinckney to his wife that night, after they had driven the newly-weds and their child to the station and seen them on a train.

"Saved—yes," said Mrs. Pinckney. "A sin atoned is a sin wiped out. The honor of the Pinckneys is saved, all except for the fib that saved it—in the eyes of others."

"Do you think, dear, that a black mark has gone up against us above for that? Would it have been more righteous if we had disgraced the poor girl, branded the lovely child, vilified our own son, shocked our innocent, trusting Nan into shame and grief, dishonored our forefathers and made ourselves the fallen, jeered-at laughing stock of this community?"

"No, dear. It would have served no good end and would have disarmed us in the good work we want to do for others. It has taught us a new and bigger sympathy and understanding for others. Justice is not the highest of obligations. Hereafter, I shall stop, look and listen and perhaps I shall be inclined to spare rather than to condemn."

"Yes, dear. The easiest thing in life is to be right. But to be kind——"

"That is easy to—to ourselves. Good night, grandpa."

"If ye'll trot down that 'ere pike for about half a mile—

BAR PRESS CAMERAS FROM OLYMPIC GAMES

French Committee Grant Exclusive Photograph Rights to Private Firm—Feared Flock of Press Camera Men.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The familiar crowds of press photographers and moving picture camera men will be missing from the greensward of the Colombes Stadium and will not be permitted to mingle with the athletes around the track, the jumps and the take-offs of various sorts at the coming Olympic games. The French Olympic Committee has just signed a contract with a private French firm granting it the exclusive moving picture and still picture rights for both the winter sports at Chamonix and the summer games at Colombes. The firm, in its contract, undertakes to supply films and photographs in any quantity desired by film companies or newspapers of the various nations participating in the sports.

The decision was reached only after a long investigation and study into the situation, leading to the conclusion that the great number of cinema men and photographers likely to be attracted to the games would interfere with the carrying out of the program, especially when several events were being run off at the same time.

Information of the committee's action has been conveyed to all the Olympic committees.

Dempsey Flirting With Footlights

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, will have a busy winter and spring, but his activities are more likely to be before the footlights than in the ring Plans for his campaign are being mapped out by Jack Kearns, the titleholder's manager, who arrived in New York yesterday.

Kearns declared he was ready to sign for a return match with Luis Firpo, and also ready to listen to proposals for bouts with Tom Gibbons, St. Paul light heavyweight, or Jack Renault, Canadian contender, but said he was more interested now in several stage and exhibition offers.

BOWLING

THREE LEAGUE GAMES PLAYED LAST NIGHT.

Last night there were three different leagues in action at the Water Street Alleys. Some good bowling was turned in and the games were witnessed by large crowds, which packed the alley practically al night.

In the Brinton Carpet League, the Carltons won three from the Dominions. The three games were very closely contested. A. Taylor was the high man on the evening's play, rolling a total of 618. He also had the high single of 230.

In the City Ten Pin League, the De Laval won two from the High Rollers. The De Laval crew got a nice score in their second game when they rolled 922. In this game every man rolled over 170. McGee was the high man for three games rolling 541. He also rolled the high single of 209. That the De Laval were rolling in great form is shown by the fact that every man on their team rolled over 500, which is no mean accomplishment.

In the Mercantile Five Pin League the Western Clock took two from the Examiner. These games were productive of some nice bowling. Stokes was the high man for three games with a total of 566, while Cairns and Glover, both of the losers were tied for the high single with 204 each.

The Examiner bowlers were also over last night and rolled off their game for the turkey tournament which they are holding. The score which will win the prize is to be selected from between 100 and 125. The boys had some great fun out of this tournament and a lot of them disqualified right of the reel by rolling over the 125 mark. The winner will be selected Saturday night.

WESTCLOX WON TWO FROM EXAMINER.

COLLEGIATE IN TORONTO TODAY

Playing University of Toronto Schools in Semi-Final Rugby.

The P.C.I. rugby team are playing University of Toronto Schools' squad at the Varsity Stadium this afternoon in a sudden death game to decide which team shall enter the Ontario Interscholastic finals. This mid-week game was forced upon the locals in spite of all their coach, C. S. Brown, and the authorities of the school could do to avoid it. The O.R.F.U. would not change their decision. It was either play the game or forfeit it.

The Peterborough boys find it necessary to journey the ninety odd miles to play a mid-week game when at the same time a Toronto school playing games right in that city refuses to play mid-week games and thus disturb the school routine, and therefore is not asked to. The O. R. F. U. executive seems to favor Toronto teams at every turn, and the big city seems to be "hogging" everything.

The P.C.I. boys left yesterday afternoon, all fit and ready and prepared to do their best to wipe out the defeat of two years ago received at the hands of the U.T.S. team. The game will be a real battle, and this year's team will uphold the school standard of sportsmanship set up by the previous team.

BILLY CUTT TO MEET CHAMPION

Former Local Boxer Has Made Name For Himself In Rochester Ring Circles

Billy Cutt, the former local youngster who made such a good showing in the P.A.A.A. boxing classes when they were first started, has been making a name for himself in Rochester, N. Y., where he has been living for some time. Under the management of Willie Buff, who won the U. S. A. amateur featherweight title at Cleveland a short time ago, Cutt has made rapid progress in the fight game.

On December 3rd he is engaged to meet the American international amateur bantam weight champ at Cleveland. On December 6th he is billed to clash with a fast Buffalo boy at Batavia, and on the 7th he hooks up with K.O. Chase at Rochester.

A Rochester paper says: "With a chubby Brown hair cut, a grin that flattering can't smooth out, confidence galore and a muscular development that flexes beautifully beneath the skin, Willis Cutt has all the makings of a champion. He's just raging to fight any and all comers, from lightweight down to his real class, the flyweight.

"Willis Cutt will be a world's champion or a lot of us who have seen him think boxing is a game of pedro."

Cutt is very anxious to get a bout in Peterborough as he would like his home town fans to see him perform.

JUNIOR WORKOUT WELL ATTENDED

Some of the Candidates Already In Good Condition--Open to Everybody

The following juniors were in gym. togs at the junior hockey workout at the Y.M.C.A. last night: Holland, Collins, Johnston, Ward, McDonagh, Young, LeBarr, Mahood, Marchand, McDougal, McInnes, Clarke, McFadden, Gray, McCall, Thornton. Any other prospective candidates for the team should start training at once, and are invited to turn out on Friday evening.

Commission Suspends Boxer For Sixty Days.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Carl Duane, New York boxer, yesterday was suspended for sixty days by the State Athletic Commission as a result of his failure to make the stipulated weight of 122 pounds for his match last Friday night at Madison Square Garden with Frankie Jerome, also of New York. Mike Valentino, his manager, was set down for a similar period, while Duane was barred from further competition in bantamweight ranks in this State.

Duane's suspension halted negotiations which were under way for a match with Johnny Dundee.

ROCHFSTER TEAM WILL TRAIN AT SAVANNAH

ROCHESTER, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The Rochester club of the International League will train at Savannah, Ga., next spring, it was announced by officials of the club last night. The squad, about thirty-five strong, will report to Manager George Stallings on the first or second Monday in March.

REGINA SKATER DROWNED.

REGINA, Nov. 27.—Elmer Chamberlain, chemist at the Imperial Oil Company's plant, was drowned in Wascana Lake last night while skating.

If you have flat feet do not despair. A flat head is much worse.

RUTH SENDS HIM ROSES.

MORRIS ISAACS MILLER HUGGINS

Cincinnati, home town of Miller Huggins, manager of the world's champion Yankees, put on a big feed for its native idol some nights ago. Nice speeches were made extolling the genius of Mr. Huggins by Morris Isaacs, the man who started him in baseball, and by others. And Babe Ruth—possibly you've heard the name before —sent Mr. Huggins a big floral baseball, on which was inscribed the phrase, "The Giant Killer." Mr. Huggins was quite taken back. "I wonder how much it cost," he commented.

PICK GIBBONS TO BEAT CARPENTIER

FRENCHMAN WILL NEVER BE FIGHTER HE WAS BEFORE DEMPSEY GO
A Fight Prophecy in Pictures

Georges Carpentier sails for America again this month. Tex Rickard is expected to match him with Tommy Gibbons. Neither Carpentier nor Gibbons holds a title of consequence now. Still a match between the two would be more interesting.

It would be more interesting to see the Frenchman against Gibbons than against Gene Tunney or Mike McTigue, light heavyweights who are soon to meet for the world's title. Gibbons is a more capable performer than either of these. Carpentier is still a great hitter with his right and for that reason his next American bout should find him facing a real opponent.

How would a duel between Carpentier and Gibbons end? The dope is overwhelmingly in favor of the St. Paul Irishman. Carpentier was battered to atoms in four rounds by Jack Dempsey. Had Dempsey gone into the fight determined to win in a round he could have done so. The Frenchman was entirely too small and too deficient on defense to stand up long against a crushing hitter of the Dempsey type.

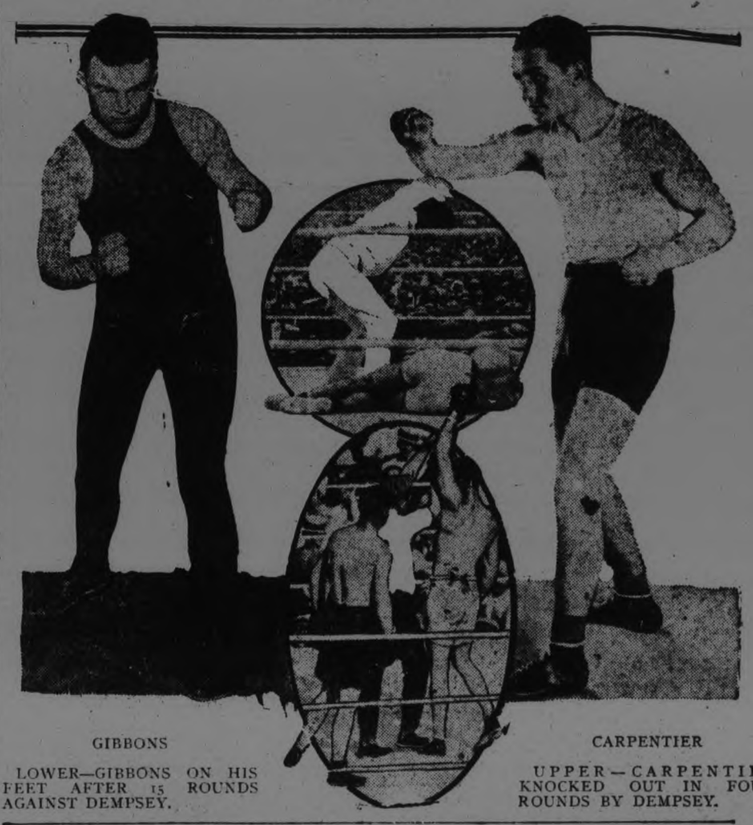
Gibbons did much better against the champion. At the end of the fifteenth round at Shelby Gibbons was still on his feet. More than that he had not been knocked down a single time. Few expected Gibbons would last more than six rounds.

Gibbons' Feat Legitimate.

Various explanations were offered after it was all over, the most popular of which was that Dempsey, having incurred the hostility of the westerners by his excessive financial demands, did not dare to knock Gibbons out. Gibbons, fighting for nothing, was the popular hero and the sentimental favorite to win.

It is possible that when Dempsey and Gibbons meet again the champion will win by a knockout. But that will not prove that he didn't try to win by a knockout at Shelby. Gibbons is a splendid defensive fighter—probably the best in the game today. Nobody has ever knocked him off his feet. Against Dempsey he wisely fought a defensive fight. It is no cinch to knock out a man who is waging a defensive fight, not even if you are a Dempsey.

Gibbons' feat at Shelby was undoubtedly legitimate. Gibbons will not need to fight a defensive fight against Carpentier. He is a better boxer, faster and can hit almost as hard.



GIBBONS CARPENTIER

LOWER—GIBBONS ON HIS FEET AFTER 15 ROUNDS AGAINST DEMPSEY.

UPPER—CARPENTIER KNOCKED OUT IN FOUR ROUNDS BY DEMPSEY.

Pick Gibbons to Win.

Carpentier can not hurt him with his left and if Gibbons displays ordinary caution he will not get hit with a right-hand punch. As this writer views it Gibbons would be returned winner over the Frenchman, certainly on points, and very likely by a knockout.

Carpentier is not the man he was three years ago. Dempsey handed him a body beating from which he will never fully recover.

Battling Siki caught him out of condition and cut him up cruelly. A couple of devasting beatings like that generally finish a fighter.

Carpentier is unquestionably on the downgrade. Americans fans, however, will turn out to see him in action again because he is colorful, daring and aggressive, and he still has the best straight right hand punch in the game, even if it is a bit brittle by now.

BOXERS AFTER COIN, NOT HONOR

But Will Be Forced to Defend Titles Once Every Six Months.

By HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(United Press)—Failing by every other method to force champions to fight, the New York Boxing Commission is going to put them on their honor to observe the rule requiring the defense of titles once in each six months.

The theory is laudable, but, like a lot of other high-minded ideas, it will not work where drastic measures have failed.

The boxing business is not totally without honor and the men engaged in the profession are not all rogues, but there is too much money involved in the sport to place such a premium upon honor.

Champions and their managers fell that there is nothing dishonorable in refusing to follow a rule that has not been handed down with the old traditions of the fight game and some of them may figure that they will be in a better position to eat when they have a little money in their pocket rather than a heart full of honor and high ideals.

• • • •

Tennis and golf champions, it has been pointed out, must defend their title annually. If they do not enter the championship tournaments, they are champions no longer.

Track and field champions are forced by the A.A.U. to enter the annual championships and defend their titles.

Baseball champions have to fight through 154 games each season and then engage the champion of the other league to win the world's title, and it's rather a rich prize.

There is one big obstacle that prevents the application of these rules to boxing, however.

Tennis, golf and track and field athletics are sports. Professional baseball still possesses an element of sport, but there is nothing in boxing but commercialized business.

Boxing is the business of fighting for money and taking no chances. Sport involves the taking of chances, or there would be no sport.

National organization, it has been pointed out frequently, is the only solution of the problem as it is found in boxing. But it is not a sure solution.

In Europe, the International Boxing Federation assumes the control of the game, but its rulings are accepted generally only in the countries where the rulings are beneficial.

The International Federation acknowledges Eminio Spalla as heavyweight champion of Europe, but in every country, with the exception of Italy, he is looked upon as the biggest punk of Europe.

England has a good working plan of keeping the titles of ring championship straight through the awards of the Lonsdale belts. Possessors of the belts are regarded as the class champions of England and they have to live up to the deed of title to retain their championship emblem.

It would take a good many years, perhaps more than boxing will live in this country, to build up the prestige for any belts that might be offered in this country that are attached to the Lonsdale belts.

The "Police Gazette" belts were prized in the old days in this country but they have passed out of circulation.

Tex Rickard offered a lot of belts, but his purpose was too selfish and they were used as a club over the boxers who won them.

Dave Bancroft ought to be a success as a manager with the Boston Braves. Perhaps it will be argued that he will have to be given better material to ever figure in a pennant race, but championship material is not essential in every case. Wilbert Robinson won two pennants for Brooklyn with material that wasn't much above second division class. Robinson is an exception, however, and Bancroft hasn't the personality or the qualities of leadership that Robby possesses. No one else in baseball has.

Bancroft ought to know baseball. He was trained in the McGraw school, the graduates of which are now Bill McKechnie, of the Pirates; Robby, of the Robins; Art Fletcher, of the Phils, and Pat Moran, of the Reds. Moran, however, might be considered a post-graduate student from New York.

With Christy Mathewson in charge of the business end of the team, Bancroft ought to get plenty of co-operation. Matty surely knows baseball and, being himself a McGraw product, he ought to have about the same ideas of management as Bancroft.

Matty made a smart deal when he got Bancroft and Bill Cunningham. Cunningham is a fine young ball player. He did well with the Giants, but he will do better with the Braves, as he didn't like his surroundings in New York any too well.

Dates Arranged For Speed Skating Races.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The United States National Amateur Speed Skating championship will be held at Saranac Lake, N. Y., February 13, 14 and 15, and the international championship at Lake Placid, N. Y., February 19, 20 and 21, according to an announcement last night by Joseph K. Savago, President of the International Skating Union.

These dates were fixed so that articipants in the Olympic skating events at Chamonix, in the French Alps, beginning January 26, will have time to return for the competition.

Harry Kasky of Chicago is the present national amateur titleholder, while the international ice king is Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid.

Firpo Returning With 500 Per Cent. More Pep.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Luis Angel Firpo expects to return to the United States next year with "five hundred per cent. more pep," and capture, "for his beloved country," the world's heavyweight title he nearly toppled from Jack Dempsey's head last September at the Polo Grounds.

This declaration was contained yesterday in a cablegram received by Tex Rickard from the Argentine heavyweight.

HEALTH HINTS.

Do not allow your conceit to become flabby or run down. Listening to yourself on the radio will help.

Virile, upstanding ears are unfailing marks of perfect health. Practice ear wiggling to music, using the selection, "I Hear You Calling Me."

Watch your hips. The well-hipped man is in great demand these days.

The tonsils should be oiled regularly and bathed in sunshine, to avoid rust accumulation.

No self-respecting man will be without well muscled eyebrows. Engage in short, spirited eyebrow lifting exercises before breakfast.

Always be sure that the nose knows. An occasional trip through a cheese factory will be convincing.

Remember eyes are the windows of the soul, and windows should be washed weekly.

If fruits do not agree with you, cut out your Adam's apple.

Dont' neglect your wind. A blimp is nothing but a toy baloon that has watched its health.

Corns are troublesome rather than dangerous, and that's something Colonel Anthony could not say of Cleopatra.

Get nervous if you can. Some day you may be good enough to pass as a shimmy dancer.

REVOKE RACE LICENSE.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—An ordinance seeking revocation of the licens, of the Business Men's Racing Association to operate the Fair Grounds racing track here was introduced in the Commission Council here yesterday by Richard Murphy, Commissioner of Finance. The racing association owes the city $39,000, according to Murphy, and the city wants its money. A canvass conducted yesterday indicated the ordinance would be passed by a 4 to 1 vote.

It is understood the meet would be transferred to Jefferson Park, just beyond the city limits, in the event the license is revoked.

FIX BILLIARDS DATES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The challenge match for the world's 18.2 balkline billiard championship will be played in Mechanics' Hall, Boston, January 10, 11 and 12, after the play-off for the title at Chicago, December 17, 18 and 19, officials in charge of arrangements announced last night.

Willie Hoppe, the present champion, and Welker Cochran, who finished in a tie with him in the international tournament which ended here November 5, will be the principals in each match.

FOOTBALL'S BIGGEST THRILLS

BY DR A. H. SHARPE
Famous Yale Star and Coach

The play that stands out in my memory as the greates play I ever saw helped Cornell win her game from Harvard in 1915.

Shiverick, of Cornell, standing on his own two-yard line, was called upon to kick the ball out of danger. When the ball was snapped back the Harvard line broke through quickly and he kicked the ball apparently through a mass of outstretched Harvard arms.

With Mahon and Wilcox waiting in midfield for a possible fair catch or run back, the situation looked rather dangerous. You can imagine the relief to the Cornell team and her supporters, when the ball rolled out in the vicinity of Harvard's 15-yard line, leaving Harvard in a defensive and not an offensive position. It doesn't take very long to write this play, but it will be a good many years before another such kick as that is produced under such trying circumstances.

When Shiverick received the ball it seemd certain that a half dozen Harvard players would certainly block the attempt to punt. How he managed to get the ball away will always be a mystery to every one who saw that game.

To make the play all the more remarkable he got such distance to the boot that it carried over the Harvard men stationed in the backfield, the kick approximately carried over 80 yards.

BY LIEUT. COL. MUMMA
Former West Point Star

I think unquestionably the greatest play I have ever seen in football during 30 years of observation, happened on Saturday, November 25, 1922, in the game between Iowa and Northwestern.

The ball was in Iowa's possession on Northwestern's 20-yard line, fourth down and about seven yards to go. Shuttleworth, who has been doing most of the dropkicking for Iowa during the season, dropped back as though to attempt a goal from the field. The logical supposition was that Shuttleworth would attempt a field goal.

However, the play signaled was a backward pass from Shuttleworth to Rich, who was in motion to be in position to receive the pass from Shuttleworth. Rich, in turn, was to make a forward pass to Kadesky, who was to receive the ball very close to Northwestern's goal line.

A bad pass was made from center to Shuttleworth and the ball rolled on past Shuttleworth on the ground about ten yards back of the line of scrimmage. Rich rushed on past Shuttleworth, picked the ball up off the ground, turned and forward passed to Kadesky, who received the pass perfectly and stepped over Northwestern's goal line for a touchdown.

Of course when the ball rolled on the ground, the Northwestern players practically abandoned every other idea except to recover the ball, leaving Kadesky wholly uncovered. Practically everyone in the stands thought this was a trick play, intended to work out just as it did work out, but it was only Rich's quick thinking that made the play possible.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Nov 28.—(United Press.)—Trading in the early dealings on the stock exchange had virtually the same characteristics as marked Tuesday's session. Heavy selling continued in stocks like Davison Chemical and Maxwell issues, whose erratic fluctuations had proved so disturbing the previous day.

On the other hand, marked strength was displayed by Steel Common, which opened at 95 3-8, selling without the regular dividend and the extra of 25 cents. This price was the equivalent of the best figure the stock had attained on the current upswing. Less irregularity was in evidence toward the end of the first hour and the forward movement was resumed in several sections of the list. Low priced Rails showed special strength under the lead of the Erie, which were active at the best level of the year. The Industrials were strong by special demand for issues like Mack Trucks, Baldwin and Steel, American Can displayed a better tone, rallying from the pressure to which it was subjected by traders who had entertained the notion that some action would be taken regarding an extra dividend on the common stock at Tuesday's meeting. The commons dividends were not due for consideration this month, but the belief is growing that an extra payment of $1 will be declared late in December. The directors are said to be highly gratified with the showing of the company in the first nine months of the current year. One estimate places the current rate of earnings at a new high record.

Y.W.C.A. SCORED A WIN LAST EVENING

Westclox Team Defeated By a Good, Safe Margin

At 9:30 last night in the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium, the Westclox basket ball team were defeated 67-5. The score does not indicate that all the play was around the "Y" goal. The Westclox centres played well and kept the ball flying towards their forwards who failed to find their basket. H. Jackson helped to keep the score down by her good defence work. The line up:

Westclox: G. McIlvain, M. Merriott, forwards; A. Scott (Capt), V. Martin, centres; J. McIlwain, E. Wolf, defence.

Y.W.C.A.: G. Gimblett, P. Young (Capt.), forwards; T. Paxman, M. Graham, centres; I. Chambers, H. Jackson, defence; F. Thompson, A. Sanderson, N. Francis, substitutes.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

THE DUMBELLS.

The Dumbells are in a fine strategic position to break their own attendance records in Peterboro during their present run, which terminates at the Grand to-night. The second performance of "Cheerio" last night was greeted by an audience that filled every nook and cranny in the house, and there is every reason to expect another capacity crowd to-night, showing that Capt. Plunkett's entertainers are not only holding all their old admirers, but are making new friends.

Last night's performance of the revue was if anything even snappier than on Monday evening, and every number was rapturiously received.

Al. Plunkett, Ross Hamilton, Ben Allen, Pat Rafferty and all the old favorites, got a warm reception. Capt. Plunkett, in his song numbers and his orchestra directed by Teddy Reves, made a great impression, and Stan Bennett, John Hagan, Jack Grace and the rest of the crew, added to their laurels.

"Cheerio" sets a new standard even for a "Dumbell" production, and if there is a chance of a return engagement during the present season, which is not likely in view of the long booking ahead of the company, there will be no question of the heartiness of the welcome that will be accorded this splendid attraction.

After completing their local engagement to-night, the Dumbells will finish the week in Kingston, and then will go to Toronto for their second run of the season there, this time billed for two weeks at the Princess theatre. The long trip to the Coast follows.

Capt. Plunkett's artists have established new success records since their return from overseas, and their visit each season is looked upon as an annual institution, just as desirable, and as necessary, as turkey for Christmas dinner. Canadian, clean and clever, in those three things lies the secret of their phenomenal showing. They can always be counted on for a tuneful melody, a hearty laugh, and a touch of sentiment, for scenic surprises and unusual effects, and there is a wholesome spirit to it all that puts them and their audiences on terms of comradeship. Most of the theatrical attractions come from New York, a few from Old England, but the Dumbells are our own show, and everybody's friends.

The closing performance of the present run at the Grand to-night will probably be the last opportunity of the season of seeing "Cheerio." It is too good to be missed.

BRINGING UP FATHER.

Kingston Standard—"Bringing Up Father on Broadway" was the big attraction at the Grand Opera House last night before a very large audience which enjoyed every minute of the bright musical comedy in which the famous cartoon artists, Jiggs and Maggie, are featured. This company presenting "Bringing Up Father on Broadway" is considered much above any company that has ever presented this well-known musical comedy before and the applause tendered for the different numbers during the evening was ample evidence of how the audience appreciated the efforts of those filling the different roles. There were smiles and laughs throughout the story and the amusing episodes which were depicted throughout the show kept the audience in high glee throughout the evening.

The musical rumbers were bright and lively, the chorus with this company being especially good. Particularly fine was the singing of Evelyn Butler, whose excellent voice made a decided impression on the audience while the singing of Emma Weston was also very greatly appreciated. Frank Kirk, the wandering musician, made a great hit in "Musical Nonsense" and he was forced to respond to encores several times. His imitations of a pipe organ were exceptionally good. "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" was a number that was especially pleasing, while other numbers rendered by the company proved to be equally entertaining and enjoyable.

The part of Jiggs was well taken by James K. Wesley, whose make-up resembled the famous cartoons of Jiggs to perfection. Emma Weston as Maggie played her part exceptionally well, while Ed. J. Morris as Dinty was very good. Evelyn Butler was one of the outstanding members of the company and played the role of a movie vampire of fame in skilled fashion. The costumes worn by the members of the cast and chorus were much commented upon and were pleasing to the eye.

"Bringing Up Father on Broadway" has been improved in several details and the show as presented at the Grand is certainly well worth seeing. "Bring Up Father" will be in Peterboro, Friday and Saturday, with matinee on Saturday.

AT THE CAPITOL.

TOM MIX COMING IN ZANE GREY STORY AT CAPITOL THURSDAY

A combination of actor and author that should attract the attention of the most fastidious of motion picture followers and provide a distinct treat as an entertainment comes to the Capitol Theatre Thursday, with Tom Mix, the William Fox star and Zane Grey, the noted American fiction writer.

The screen offering is "The Lone Star Ranger" with the Saddle Monarch in the title role. The story is an adaptation of Mr. Grey's famous book, which, according to its publishers, has been read by more than five million people in the few years since its apparance on the literary market.

With Mix, Lambert Hillyer, the director, has accomplished new heights in the fields of romance. He has assembled a talented cast. Miss Billie Dove, the beautiful Ziegfeld Follies dancer, plays the feminine lead. Others are L. C. Shumway, Stanton Heck, Ed. Peil, Frank Clark, William Conklin, Minna Redman, Tom Lingham and Francis Carpenter,

The production was staged in the heart of Texas.

GERMAN MARKS GIVEN AWAY WITH TICKETS

In the past three days $480,000 has been given away! Right here in Peterboro, too! It was given away in notes each worth (once upon a time) $2,400.00 and 2,000 of them were handed out. They were German Marks not dollars. This is the latest advertising stunt used by the Capitol theatre. The idea of giving money away has aroused much comment. The German mark has shrunk in value until today it is worthless outside of Germany and even in Germany has very little value, as it requires millions of them to buy a loaf of bread. Manager J. C. Kennedy of the Capitol states that he was quoted a cent a piece per mark, in any denomination from one-mark to one-million mark notes, by a New York broker. However, he considered this too expensive and succeeded in buying $480,000 or 20 million marks in 10,000 mark notes each with a pre-war value of $2,400 for less than $10.00. If the German mark ever reaches its pre-war value, or half of it, after this advertising, Mr. Kennedy says there will be nothing left for his friends to do but send flowers. The name of the picture advertised was printed on the reverse of the Mark notes.

AT THE ROYAL.

LAST SHOWING TO-NIGHT OF ENGLISH-SCOTCH COMEDY "STOP YOUR TICKLIN' JOCK"

To-night "Stop Your Ticklin' Jock" will be screened for the last time at the Royal. This comedy from the old country may not have the same laugh-getting qualities that made "Me and my Gal" so popular, but it does contain a lot of surefire laughs, and the story is entirely away from the beaten track. The aded attractions, especially the comedy "Scout Pluck," is worthy of special mention.

"WES" BARRY HAS BUSY TIME IN LATEST PICTURE.

At the Royal Thursday, Friday and Saturday. — Things Move Briskly around him in "The Printer's Devil."

The old saying, "Boys will be boys," is proved true by Wesley Barry in his latest picture "The Printer's Devil" which will be the feature picture at the Royal Theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The story is a romance woven round the humdrum workings of a small town newspaper, and tells of Brick Hubbard, a young printer's devil for the Briggsville Gazette, who gets his full share of fun and enjoyment out of each day's work.

The theme deals with Brick, who is a youth thrown from his own resources, and who in order to earn a living, works hard to fill the manifold duties of his job.

When his employer decides to close shop he walsk to the outskirts of the town, wondering how he will get along in the future. Here he meets Sidney Fletcher, a young man who who has been held up and robbed near the town. Brick takes him to a boarding house and befriends him, later introducing him to Vivian Gates the prety daughter of the local banker.

In order to stay in the town permanently, Sidney purchases the Gazette and reinstates Brick in his old position.

Then scenes rapidly follow, showing how Brick by his quick wit and plucky spirit, saves his employer from a great deal of hardship and unjust punishment, because Sidney is later arrested and thrown into jail on suspicion of having robbed the bank. And as this incident follows the publication of a scathing editorial against Banker Gates in his capacity as president of the local power company, things looked pretty black for him.

The picture is brought to a happy conclusion by Brick, who by an ingenious scheme, brings the real robbers to justice, clears Sidney of suspicion, and is instrumental in bringing together Sidney and Vivian and is himself acclaimed the hero of the town.

"The Printer's Devil" is a Warner Brothers' Classic of the Screen especially written for Wesley Barry by Julien Josephson, Harry Myers, Katherine McGuire, Louis King, George Pearce, Ray Cannon, Mary Halter and Harry Rottenburg support Wesley in the cast. William Beaudine directed the production.

AT THE REGENT.

The Toronto Telegram: Once more has the English director demonstrated that he can take a simple story with human characters and make it so realistic and appealing that it far outshadows in real merit so many of the film productions that are produced. "In the Shadows of Whitechapel" tells a story of the London slums, about the regeneration of a drunkard and his rise to position and happiness during a series of episodes that have a great human appeal. Throughout the picture there are many comedy situations that bring gales of laughter from the lifelike manner in which they happen, Henry Edwards, as Bill, gives as nice a performance of screen acting as has ever been witnessed by the writer, and Mary Brough contributes another splendid portrayal to the long list of former triumphs. The scene on the roof when Bill goes blind is as thrilling a piece of screen realism as can be produced and the audience was held spell bound until the final fade-out. Toronto has seen a lot of English productions, but "In the Shadows of Whitechapel" surpasses them all in real entertainment. It is a credit to both country and the producers.

THE ROTARY-ANNES' DANCE

"The prettiest dance ever held in Peterborough" was the general expression of opinion from those who attended the big Rose Ball at the G.W.V.A. Hall last evening, held under the auspices of the Rotary-Annes, whose energetic endeavours to make their dance an outstanding event met with the success they deserved.

The president, Mrs. F. L. Roy, and her corps of assistants deserve much credit for their work in connection with the pretty affair, which was attended by nearly three hundred people.

The decorations were elaborate and unique, carried out in pink roses, hundreds of which were arranged in tasteful and lovely fashion about the interior of the hall. Long green window boxes held dozens of the natural-looking artificial blooms, the long green festoons of fine moss across the hall were intertwined with the pink roses, and a tall pink blossom with green standard, formed the punch bowl holder at the north end. Green and rose-pink paper festooned the electric lights, and tall rose-shaded piano lamps stood against the side walls. In the centre was placed the orchestra, in an enclosure formed of white trelliswork, festooned with roses. In the far corner, an arch of green and white, with a tall basket of roses, held the spotlight that was used for an innovation in several spotlight dances under vari-coloured tints.

A very comfortable corner was the rest room. The small room at the south end of the hall had an entrance of rose-wreathed green, and here were cosy chairs and lounges, with hanging baskets of roses against the white curtains and tall reed stands holding the pink blooms. Rose-shaded lights and fern baskets completed an attractive interior.

The music for dancing was excellent, provided by Roy Nickren's five-piece orchestra, and the ball was opened with a lovely interpretive rose dance, by members of Miss C. Littlefield's dancing class at the Y.W.C.A. Eight of the young ladies gave the French dance Roseatte, in graceful, charming fashion, with two tiny tots scattering rose-leaves in their path.

Just before supper the dance was repeated, under a changing spotlight that gave a fairylike effect to the lissom figures, in their soft draperies of rose-pink chiffon. Misses Phyllis Hall, Mildred Morphet, Jane McDuffee, Jean Gilman, Marjorie Lawrence, Annie Lawrence, Dorothy Tyrer, and Vera Hiland danced the Roseatte dance, with small Hilda Hall and Mary Dunlop as attendant maidens. Miss Gwen Donley acted as accompanist.

Innovations in the dancing programme of the evening were the rose-petal dance, with a shower of petals, and a favour dance, with rose-decorated shepherdess' crooks for the ladies and rose-tasselled cornucopias for the men.

During the supper hour, Mr. V. J. McElderry expressed the appreciation of the Rotary-Annes to the young ladies of Miss Littlefield's class, and announced the next event to be held under the auspices of the ladies in a Valentine card party in the Peterborough Club on 14th of February.

Patronesses present last evening were: Mesdames F. L. Roy, R. H. Turner, J. H. Seels, H. O. Fisk, Gerald Wood, Dickson Hall, C. G. Graham, N. D. Buchanan.

Stewards were: Messrs. V. J. McElderry, R. Dobie, L. A. Potvin, R. L. Dobbin, A. O. DeGraw, and J. D. Kennedy.

A feature of the dance, which was altogether one of the most successful balls ever held in the city, was the number of new and very beautiful gowns worn by the ladies.

Among those present were:

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. Raine, Mr. and Mrs. P. Westbye, Mr. and Mrs. Ford Turner, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Park, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Browne, Dr. and Mrs. Ray Scott, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. NEW HALL CASE BEFORE COURT

Case Opened This Afternoon Before Judge Ward of Port Hope.

Before His Honour Judge Ward in Division Court this afternoon the case of Chief Constable Samuel Newhall versus the Corporation of the City of Peterboro, was commenced in which the Chief Constable claims the amount due for his salary from November 1 to 15 and accounts for $25.50

These accounts were for gasoline repairs to motor, a new inner tube and car rental in connection with the Mervin hold-up.

Chief Newhall is represented in the case by R. R. Hall, K.C., while Joseph Wearing, City Solicitor and G. N. Gordon, K. C. appear for the defendant city.

A Test Case.

While this is nominally a suit for the arrears of salary due Chief Newhall, it is in fact a test case of province wide interest, hinging upon the question whether or not the City Council has the authority to prune the Police Commission estimates. The City Council claims this absolute right by virtue of sub-section 1 of section 363 of the Consolidated Municiapl Act 1922.

On March 5 last the Finance committee of the City Council discussed the Police Department estimates and a resolution was adopted reducing the amount from $28,843 to $25,000.

The sum authorized by the City Council has now been exhausted and on November 15 there was not sufficient to pay Chief Newhall's outstanding salary.

The first witness called to-day was Mr. S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk of Peterborough.

Mr. Hall produced a certified copy of the minutes of Council on 23rd February, in which meeting the various appropriations, including the appropriation for the Police Department, were discussed, along with correspondence passing between the City Council and the Board of Police Commissioners, which were identified by Mr. Armstrong.

Mr. Armstrong said the Police Commission estimates were based on recommendations from the Chief Constable.

City Treasurer Frank Adams identified a detailed statement of expenditures of the Police Department from January 1 to November 1, this year, and told Mr. Hall that the authorized appropriation of the Police Commission has been exhausted with the exception of about $14.

To Mr. Gordon, Mr. Adams said the police station is situated in the City Buildings, which are vested in the City Trust.

Chief Newhall.

Chief Constable Newhall said to Mr. Hall that he had held his present position since 1920. He identified his report of the activities of the Police Department for 1922, saying the facts contained in it are correct.

The efficient protection of this city would require 25 men, Chief Newhall said. Sixteen men are absolutely necessary.

"In July last in view of agitation and the attack on me personally, I decided to try to reduce the force although I thought it was a risky experiment.

In the four months prior to July 8, there were 27 petty thefts in the outside district while in the four months after the outside patrol was taken off they jumped to the alarming figure of 91. This does not include misdemeanours, but only indictable offences.

Chief Newhall said his expenses are very reasonable as compared with other cities.

Mr. Hall—What about the Police Matron's salary of $400

"That is very necessary."

Mr. Hall: "How about the motor car?"

"Expenditures for the upkeep of the motor car and cycle are reasonable and cut down to the lowest figure to economize. The police force without a motor car would be a laughing stock. The motor cycle, because of its speed, is a direct enemy to the motor thief."

Regarding the Chief Constables' Convention, the Chief said: "In these days the Chief who does not keep himself rested is a piece of dead wood. Matters pertaining to the benefit of the police force are discussed at the convention and ideas exchanged. A great many Chiefs attend.

"The appropriation was $200, but I spent the magnificent sum of $50.

"Through the slash in appropriations there has been no insurance carried on the police car—if a fire occurred to-morrow that would be a direct loss to the city."

Salary Cheque Missed.

Asked about his salary, Chief Newhall said:

"On the morning of November 15 I saw that my cheque was not with the others. I went to see the Mayor and asked him why my cheque was not there. He wriggled and squirmed and told me there were no funds in the treasury. I went around to the City Treasurer's office and saw my cheque on his desk unsigned by the Mayor or the Chairman of the Finance Committee.

"The Chairman of the Finance Committee told me he had strict orders not to sign any more cheques for the Police Department."

Cross-examined by Mr. Gordon, Chief Newhall said the police force had extended steadily from 1911. In 1920 there were 13, in 1921, 15 men, in 1922 there were 16 men.

Mr. Gordon—"How do you explain that a city like Kitchener, with about the same population, is policed by 8 men?"

Chief Newhall—"You can get away with anything in Kitchener."

Mr. Gordon—"But you can't get away with it in Peterboro?" "No."

Chief Newhall declared in years gone by when 12 men were on the force he had to do the outside patrol himself as detective working 24 hours a day.

Mr. Gordon—"How long did you keep that up?"

"Many a night when you were in bed."

Reverting to the matter of the police car, Mr. Gordon inquired to what use it was put in outside work.

Chief Newhall—"If you kill the rats in the barn you won't have them in the house."

This car has never patrolled in the county. That is the whine of these people who are making it up. We have gone for prisoners over the week end when there are no trains. Those are the only occasions the car has gone outside the city—bringing back prisoners or in the pursuit of crime.

Mr. Gordon—"The car is not put to any other purposes?"

Chief Newhall: "I think one great gentleman, a merchant in the city of Peterborough, says the Chief rides home to his dinner every day in the police car. I do, to save time."

Mr. Gordon here asked the Chief not to make a speech, and after a passage of arms and a word from His Honour Judge Ward, the hearing resumed.

Mr. Gordon: "Is the car put to any other purpose than the city patrol?"

Chief Newhall: "It takes me home to my meals, and is going to. There is no general practice of taking men home to their meals. It is not a joy-riding machine."

This concluded the evidence, and Mr. Gordon proceeded with the presentation of numerous authorities.

The bride looked charming in a suit of white silk, trimmed with radium lace. The bride entered the room on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march, rendered by Mr. H. Hotson. The bridesmaid, Miss Evelyn Drury, sister of the groom, was dressed in blue cannon crepe with hat to match, carrying a bouquet of carnations.

Mr. S. C. Chatten, brother of the bride, supported the groom. After the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served to the guests at Mrs. York's.

The decorations were carried out with red, white and blue streamers. The groom's gift to the bride was a string of pearls, the bridesmaid a pearl ring, to the best man a cigarette case, and to the pianist a gold pencil

SECRETARY BETRAYS RHINELAND CABINET; MINISTERS ARRESTED

Smiling Joseph Matthes, Leader of the Separatist Movement, Discovers Internal Plot Was Engineered By Prussian Spy, His Own Secretary.

COMEDY-DRAMA ENDS

DUESSELDORF, Nov. 29. Canadian Press. — "The Rhineland Republic stands, but the government has fallen."

Thus Joseph Matthes, one of the chiefs in the separatist movement announced yesterday his dissolution of the provisional government, which followed quickly upon an internal military coup at Coblenz. Matthes fled when the military dictatorship was set up. The other members of his cabinet were placed under arrest but later some of them were released and the others joined the new dictatorship.

Regarding his future plans, Herr Matthes was non-committal. Herr Matthes showed to the correspondents a letter he had addressed to Paul Tirard, president of the Inter-Allied Rhineland Commission, announcing the dissolution of the provisional government and informing him that the main organizer of the military coup was a man named Rosenbaum, who until a few days ago was Mathes' private secretary. It is further stated in a letter that Rosenbaum is a native of Cologne speaking French fluently, and was a Prussian spy. Rosenbaum had worked with French firms of high standing, and was under no suspicion.

Within the past week two or three members of the de facto cabinet resigned, according to the letter, and remainder split into two parts, issuing independent cabinet decrees.

Secretary a Spy.

"The so-called High Army Command, which was dissolved a fortnight ago by Dr. Dorten and his faction, as well as by myself," continues the letter, "has attempted a military dictatorship, in which the principal part was played by my already dismissed secretary, Rosenbaum, who proved to have been a Prussian spy working under orders from Frankfort, after being in the French service for the same object. This military dictatorship, which used funds liberally, has attempted to seize the power from the de facto cabinet.

"The military dictatorship, however, took no steps against me personally, although the cabinet was powerless to resist its efforts. This, as well as the fact that the provisional government was composed of incompetent or dishonest persons, caused me to take the above step."

Cabinet Arrested.

On Tuesday night Matthes assembled the remnants of his cabinet for a meeting in the old castle, the provisional seat of the government since Coblenz was made capital of the Rhineland. As Matthes entered for the meeting he observed several members of the guard scurrying about with carbines and other weapons. He asked Herr Mertz, who appeared to be the generalissimo of the new dictatorship, what was up, and was informed:

"Absolutely nothing. Our men are somewhat restless on the third floor. We are trying to reduce them to order."

Matthes then went into the meeting, which had barely begun when a deputation from the third floor, armed with rifles, appeared at the door, and declared that the members of the cabinet were under arrest, and that a new military dictatorship had been formed.

Matthes Went Free.

Matthes again informed the deputation that the military command had already been dissolved by decree, but his words were without effect. He asked the members of the council what they proposed to do. They seemed to equivocate; so feeling himself without sufficient support, as he relates it, he decided then and there to declare the cabinet dissolved. Matthes was allowed to leave undisturbed but the others remained for some time under arrest.

Seize Munitions of Communists

BERLIN, Nov. 29. — An object lesson of the Communist activities in Germany was provided in the Prussian Diet to-day when a table was covered with rifles, revolvers and machine guns by order of Minister of the Interior Severing as proof of the Communists' preparations for armed revolt.

The Communist Deputies had protested vigorously against the arrest yesterday of the Communist woman deputy, Rosi Wolffstein. In reply, Herr Severing said yesterday's demonstrations were carried out by order of the Moscow Executive Committee and constituted a rehearsal of the proposed general outbreak.

He also announced that 24 machine guns, 4,000 revolvers and 500 rifles had been confiscated from the Communists since November 15.

NAVAL DISPLAY AS KING'S PART

Spanish Monarchs Sailed Out to Sea in Lane of Italian Warships and Neapolitan Twilight.

NAPLES, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).—King Alfonso and Queen Victoria, accompanied by their entourage, left Italy last evening on their return voyage to Spain. An Italian squadron accompanied the Spanish battleship Jaime, on which the royal party is making the passage, far out to sea, where it fired a farewell salute and returned to port.

Prior to his departure King Alfonso addressed a message to the Italian people. In it he said he already had expressed to the King of Italy, the Government and the Italian authorities, his own and the Queen's sincere gratitude for the unforgettable welcome they had received during their visit, adding:

"But at the moment of leaving the blessed land of Italy I wish to express my profound gratitude to the whole of the Italian people in order to assure them that the memory of this event will remain in our minds as among the happiest of our lives."

Pomp and Beauty.

The Spanish armada steamed out of Naples between lines of the Italian fleet, all the vessels dazzling with electric lights. The Italian warships roared a royal salute, which was replied to by the Spaniards. The Spanish monarchs had awaited the Neapolitan sunset before starting, and as twilight fell the thousands of lights along the shore added to the beauty of the scene.

Before going aboard the Jaime, King Alfonso, Queen Victoria and the members of their suite had luncheon on board the Italian battleship Duilio. Large numbers of high Italian personages were present. As the King and Queen left the Duilio and went aboard the royal launch to embark on the Jaime, the Bay of Naples reverbrated with shouts of "Long live the King," and "Long live the Queen," sent up from the men on the nearby Italian battleships.

MULTITUDE AT BOLTON HEARD LLOYD GEORGE

Says His Friend Lord Derby Is Nightly Looping the Loop As Free Trader and Tariff Reformer.

USES AMPLIFIER.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press). — Extraordinary scenes marked the progress of Lloyd George from Leeds to Preston. He delivered eight speeches on the journey, in the course of which there were vigorous exchanges between him and Socialists and other interrupters. His audience in every case was increased by the use of loud-speaking apparatus, and in this way 30,000 people listened to him in Bolton.

His Active Wit.

In his speech at Preston, Lloyd George exercised his wit at the expense of Lord Derby, whom he described as an erring son of Lancashire. He said Lord Derby, who was an old friend of his, was nightly giving an exhibition of looping the loop—one moment a free trader and the next moment a tariff reformer, and back again. One moment sitting upright for the principles of free trade and the next moment with head down and heels up for protection, Lord Derby would have fallen off long ago had he not been strapped to his seat.

Harpooned Walrus.

Nobody could find out where Lord Derby stood on free trade, Lloyd George declared; Derby flopped and floundered about like a harpooned walrus.

Manchester was exporting more cotton goods than any other country in the world, including the United States, where the raw material was grown, Lloyd George said. No tariff, he asserted, could exclude British goods from foreign countries. All the efforts of the United States to exclude them by tariffs had failed.

MORE IMMIGRANTS COMING NEXT YEAR.

C. N. R. Agent Advises Better Facilities For Placing People on Land.

MONTREAL, November 29. — "If Canada will improve the facilities for placing people on the land, making it easier by means of better organization or otherwise to become settled, the flow of people from the British Isles to this country will be greatly increased," said Dr. W. J. Black, manager of the Colonization and Development Department of the Canadian National Railways in London, England, in an interview on his arrival in Montreal from England.

Dr. Black has returned to Canada to take part in a conference of all officers of the Colonization and Development Department of the Canadian National Railways.

Dr. Black is genuinely enthusiastic over the outlook and while he refrains from making any claims that might be called extravagant, he expresses the belief that the immigration to Canada next year will be much heavier than last year. This prediction he bases upon two fundamentals. The first is the growth of interest in Canada in immigration, and the evident desire of the federal and provincial governments to arrive at a clear understanding for the putting into action of the proper machinery for bringing into this country immigrants of a desirable and adaptable type. The second is the manifestly genuine interest shown by Britishers in Canada, and the opportunities which Canada offers. This interest is not local to one or two sections of England or Scotland, but is general throughout the British Isles, according to Dr. Black.

WINNING RESPECT FOR PROHIBITION LAWS BY FORCE ALONG BORDER

Comparatively No Leakage On Manitoba Front and the Detroit Sector Has Been Tightened By Intensive Measures.

$6,170,198 IN FINES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press)—Federal Prohibition Director Stone, of North Dakota, returned yesterday after a visit to Winnipeg, where he investigated conditions under which liquor is being sold in Manitoba. He reported that restriction on the sale are "very tight," and despite reports to the contrary, little liquor was coming across the border in the United States.

In his report, made to Federal Commissioner Haynes, Mr. Stone said that few persons were crossing the Canadian border to purchase liquor in Manitoba, but that "as long as they are selling $12,000 worth of hard liquor a day, a little is bound to leak across the border."

Purchases Limited.

"Of course, a 'runner' from the States might have assistants in Manitoba who buy the liquor for him," Mr. Stone added, "but they can only buy a case a day and if they buy the limit for any length of time, the police are going to become suspicious. By the time the 'runner' has paid his agents and gets his cargo across the border his price must necessarily be beyond most people, and he does not find the business very profitable."

Enforcement of the prohibition laws, so far as the Department of Justice has jurisdiction, has "steadily advanced," Attorney-General Daugherty stated in an announcement yesterday, reporting conditions in a number of States.

Force Gets Respect,

"There is becoming more and more respect for these laws," the Attorney-General said, "because of the concerted forces we have been enable to enlist and apply against those who would attempt to defy them."

Mr. Daugherty emphasized particularly the effect of the recent invoking of the Tariff Act against border smugglers, especially in the vicinity of Detroit, and also the more intensive application of the "padlock" provisions of the enforcement act. Referring to procedure under the Tariff Act, he said:

"County and State officials of Michigan have been co-operating very intelligently with the federal agencies under the Department of Justice, and the result has been that if we could not get these border bootleggers under one charge we got them on another. The results in this way have been particularly marked since the recent conference of governors called by President Coolidge."

Prohibition Score

A summary of reports from Federal attorneys throughout the country given out Wednesday at prohibition headquarters showed that from July 1, 1922, to October 31, 1923, a total of 55,626 indictments were returned on informations filed: 43,293 convictions obtained, and fines of $6,170,198 imposed. Combined jail sentences totalled 2,771 years, one month and 21 days, the reports showed.

SECRET ORDER OF CRUSADERS

New British Organization Conducted Service at Warrior's Tomb.

LONDON, November 29 (Canadian Press Cable). — There was a picturesque scene at Westminster Abbey yesterday on the occasion of the commemoration service of the Most Noble Order of Crusaders, who selected the unknown warrior as their head.

The Duke of York was present.

A number of members of the Order were robed in different coloured habits.

The service was conducted by the Dean of Westminster, after which the Pro-Grand Master, followed by the Crusaders, placed a wreath on the grave of the unknown soldier as a tribute of respect to Britain's dead.

The service was concluded by the trumpeters of the Household Cavalry sounding a Reveille.

The Order of Crusaders, which was recently created, is a body of a secret character. Its leaders include Lieut.-General Sir E. Bethune, Col. Faber, and Sir C. Wakefield. The Cross is a prominent feature on the regalia.

Prepare Attack on Ruhr Occupation

PARIS, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press)—The visit to London of Sir John Bradbury, British delegate on the Reparation Commission, is explained yesterday by The Temps in an editorial as being connection with preparations for an attack on the Commission, on the plans for which it says a number of experts are working under "inspiration" of the British Foreign Secretary, Marquis Curzon.

The Temps predicts that the "attack" will turn upon the question of Franco-Belgium right under the Treaty of Versailles to occupy the Ruhr and that the Commission will be invited to interpret the articles of the treaty upon which this right is based by the occupying powers. The editorial represents the British as arguing that a correct interpretation will establish that no such right exists.

PREFERENCE AS IMPERIAL BOND OF THE FUTURE

Neville Chamberlain Says System of Mutual Preferences Would Assist Canada's Manufacturies.

AN ELECTION POINT.

LONDON, November 29. Canadian Press Cable. — Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of he Exchequer, speaking in London on Wednesday, referred to the Imperial aspect of Premier Baldwin's protest on policy.

"I quite agree," he said, "that you cannot get the full effect in imperial developments unless you secure to the Dominions a market for their goods in the British Isles. Personally I believe that some day it will be worth while pursuing our investigations far into that aspect of the policy in order to see whether it would not be possible to obtain from the Dominions a sufficient "quid pro quo" to justify us in giving them security for their agricultural produce. Lloyd George did his best to suppress and destroy that policy 20 years ago, and when he now says it was the only statesmanlike part of the policy which he could support, he had lost sight of the fact that in the last 20 years the situation had changed both at home and in the Dominions.

Changed Conditions.

Twenty years ago the Dominions were par excellence agricultural in character. The situation is different to-day. Take Canada. Year after year Canada is harnessing her great resources in waterpower and turning part of her territory into great industrial areas. There are indications that Australia and even India are moving in the same direction. The result is that whereas twenty years ago you could only help the Dominions by giving them a preference on wheat and meat, to-day there is another aspect of the question. There is a call for imperial preferences on the general tariff on manufactured goods which did not exist twenty years ago."

Quotes Meighen.

Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain said: "Mr. Meighen, leader of the Conservative party in Canada, addressing the associated boards of trade in Ontario recently, said that all the business men in Canada should comprehend the significance of Premier Baldwin's new fiscal policy, and realize that inter-imperial preference would be of over-shadowing importance in the development of Canadian export trade. Mr. Meighen added that even if Canada got a preference in nothing more than manufactured goods the benefit would be almost incalculable. It may be said that if the Dominions are going to develop their industries that their market in the future will be less valuable to us than it has been in the past. I don't believe that. It takes a long time to build up new industries in the country and the first result of starting new industries in the Dominions will be to increase their wealth and population and also increase their demand for goods which they are still unable to manufacture for themselves. I am certain that in the future as in the past the Dominions will be our best customers.

Bond of Preference.

It is however essential, when they are starting in this new line that we should endeavor to tie them to us by a system of mutual preferences so that this new development may prove a great bond between us rather than as a means of separation. (Cheers.) Of all the Dominions this is the most important in the case of Canada, because in Canada geographical lines tend to make traffic pass from north to south rather than from west to east. Every inducement exists for trade to pass across the frontier rather than across the ocean. But Canada is overcoming these natural obstacles. She is turning her trade west and east and is looking towards us. We should do all we can to encourage, develop and strengthen that feeling. I find that I am more easily influenced by appeal to my emotions. I have endeavored to put before you not catchwords, not appeals to your angry passions, but rather one or two considerations, which may not have been altogether present in your minds."

SPY PARDONED BY PRESIDENT

Only German Spy in the United States Convicted During War.

NEW YORK, November 29. Pardoned by President Coolidge, and freed from a life sentence at Leavenworth, Lothar Witzke, the only German spy convicted in the United States during the world war, was deported to-day on the Hamburg-American liner Albert Ballin.

Five years of prison life appeared to have left no traces on the countenance of the former spy, for he was robust and ruddy and looked 23 rather than 30 years of age.

After having been sentenced to death—war time penalty for spies—Witzke obtained a commutation to life imprisonment, and then, eight days ago, the president pardoned him on the condition that he leave the country.

GOVERNMENT AID IS TO BE ASKED

Home Bank Depositors Will Ask Government and Bankers' Association to Recoup Them.

TORONTO, November 29 Canadian Press. — The lines upon which the crusade for redress by Home Bank depositors is to proceed, will be practically decided upon to-day, when a general meeting of the depositors committee of fifteen will be held at the head office premises of the bank. The meeting is expected to last most of the day. Matters are developing rapidly and it is believed that in a series of resolutions prepared by a special committee, an appeal will be thrown out to the Dominion Government and the Canadian Bankers' Association, to recoup the depositors for the amount of their losses. Members of the coommittee admit that the fight to this end will not be easy but they rely upon unity of action and concerted organization.

ELZEAR RIOUX FELL BEFORE SCOTCH BOXER

MONTREAL, November 29. Canadian Press. — Archie Skinner, the champion heavyweight of Scotland, knocked out Elzear Rioux, giant Canadian lumberjack, in the second round of a scheduled ten round bout at the Mount Royal Arena, here, last night. Skinner had a slight shade in the first round, when he closed his opponent's eye. In the second round Skinner crossed three blows in rapid succession to the head and face, and Rioux went to the floor, and was counted out.

JUDGMENT RESERVED IN CASE TO DECIDE RIGHT OF COUNCIL

Masterly Summing Up by Counsel Brings Out Many Points in Dispute —Case is of Provincial Importance.

MANY CASES CITED

Following the hearing of the case brought by Chief Constable Samuel Newhall against the City of Peterboro for salary and expenses heard yesterday before His Honor Judge Ward of Port Hope in Division Court here, judgment was reserved to enable the Court to consider the issues involved which he said would require careful thought.

Only a few witnesses were heard briefly, when G. N. Gordon, K.C., representing the City with Joseph Wearing, and R. R. Hall, K.C., for the plaintiff, proceeded to argument.

Mr. Gordon claimed that the Commission has no right to make a levy or to call for any amount they desired, while Mr. Hall took the stand that the Council has not the right to arbitrarily slash the Police Commission estimates.

His Honor Judge Ward, in reserving judgment, said he realized the far-reaching import of the case and would take sufficient time in arriving at his judgment to carefully read all the authorities quoted. It is not expected that judgment will be rendered for some days.

C. N. Gordon.

In his argument, Mr. Gordon contended the Police Commission exceeded its powers. Not, he admitted, so far as the submission of its estimates went, but in the succeeding events. The interpretation of the section is that in order to make the estimates effective there must be a submission of them to the City Council, its consideration and its approval. Estimates submitted to the City Council do not become estimates of the municipality until they are approved by the Council. In this case approval was given to the extent of $25,000 only, and that sum has now been exhausted.

Referring to the position of the Chief Constable, who has not received his salary for the first two weeks in November, Mr. Gordon said it looks rather hard that such a condition should exist, but notice was given on March 5, and the Commission continued on the basis of $28,000 instead of $25,000.

"The Commissioners are not trustees," Mr. Gordon said, "but are created by the highest power of Parliament. The Commission is an entity the same as the City Council, subject to the creative statute. There is no agency; there is no trusteeship; the Commission is a creature of statute and cannot go beyond the powers of the statute."

In the case of the Schools Act, he said, the Council has no discretion. Councils are required to raise such sums as are required by the school authorities. But there is no such thing in this case; there is no provision except for a levy of the estimates of the Council. "These estimates were not the estimates of the Council," declared Mr. Gordon. Until they are approved by the

Devonshire Faced Heckling of Labor

LONDON, Nov. 29 — (Canadian Press Press Cable.)—The Duke of Devonshire, speaking at Hanley yesterday was heckled by members of the Labor party who also sang songs.

Speaking of the desirability of filling up the open spaces in the Dominions, the Duke described the Dominions as happy, prosperous and thriving communities. Voices interjected: "Why don't you go there then; we are not going to emigrate."

The Duke proceeded to advocate a policy of migration within the Empire and claimed to know Canada from from end to end. Great as had been the progress achieved there in the past, the opportunities to-day were a thousand-fold greater. Everyone of the Dominions wanted to develop the great national resources with British brains, British capital and British muscle.

HOWARD SMITH WANTS TARIFF

Unanimity in Demand for the Protective Tariff to Maintain and Foster Canadian Manufacturing Industries.

TORONTO, Nov 29.—(Canadian Press).—Unanimity in demand for protective tariff to maintain and foster Canadian manufacturing industries was feature of addresses of C. Howard M. Smith, Montreal President of Canadian Manufacturers' Association; Lieut. Col. Arthur F. Hatch of Hamilton, Vice-President and prominent captains of industry at luncheon and meetings of executive council and Ontario members here to-day.

"I have no apology to make for believing in protection for Canadian industry and labor. One only has to look at results that have been achieved in Canada since she adopted protective policy, to see that such policy is right one for this country," declared President Smith.

"In addition to this, one only has to look at tremendous strides made by United States. For 13 years United States has pursued protective policy for her industries and her labor, and has succeeded in developing most prosperous nation on face of earth today, and at time when Canada is clamoring for immigrants and population, United States has "put up bar." United States is truly "promised land" for immigrants and they are all struggling to reach it."

Referring to British preference and large imports from Britain which Canadian manufacturers were unable to compete against owing to low cost of Labor in old land, Mr. Smith said that he could not see that it was to benefit of Empire or Canada that "we should transfer some of two million unemployed in Britain to Canada, and while I am a believer in preferential tariff, I consider it should be on such basis that it would not put our working people out of employment."

In conclusion Mr. Smith said it was high time Canada "about-faced" on policy of reviving tariff. Lieut. Col. Hatch declared that manufacturers will be "killed" if Canada continued to lower her tariff, while other companies are increasng theirs and dumping their surplus goods in to Canada.

That Canada should import men and not manufactured goods, and needs a national policy which will keep young Canadians at home, and bring back expatriate Canadians from the south, including the colonies of splendid French Canadians now enriching the somewhat heterogeneous population of the United States, was the argument of George A. Dobbie, of Galt, president of the Canadian Woollen Manufacturers Association.

Mr. Dobbie quoted figures with the object of indicating that the woollen and knitting mills bore the whole weight of the present British preference.

PERMITS ISSUED FOR GUN TOTERS.

Over Thirty Thousand People a Year In New York Get Permits to Carry Firearms.

Do you own a revolver? It's amazing, how many do. For instance, gun toting or owning is severely restricted in New York City. And yet New York has been issuing legal permits to 30,000 people a year, to possess or carry pistols.

Pistol permits, of course, are not issued to known crooks. But legally owned pistols are frequently stolen by house-breakers. That's how the under world gets part of its firearms.

Mail order purchase is the commoner method by which crooks arm themselves. This method requires no police registration. A criminal can not only get pistol easily and stealthily, he can get as many as he wants and whenever he desires—by mail order.

Authorities in Buffalo the other day revoked all pistol licenses in town and the surrounding county. Fifteen thousand permits to carry firearms are affected by the Buffalo action, which resulted from discovery that a murderer wanted by police was the holder of a county pistol permit.

New York City is attacking the pistol menace in another way. Applicants for gun toting permits are being fingerprinted, the prints then checked up to make sure the applicants havenot criminal record.

As long as crooks are able to get firearms, there'll be shooting. Even the law-abiding citizen is apt to have moments of rage or drunkenness when possession of a pistol is dangerous.

But local restrictions cannot be other than puny until the national government prohibits, in interstate commerce, the sale and shipment of revolvers except for officers of the law. Legislation to that end is before Cohgress.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE TATTERED MAN

"Was it a haystack?" asked a fat man in a green suit.

This was the next riddle the Riddle Lady asked the people in Riddle Land, where the Twins were visiting. Humpty Dumpty told them to pay close attention.

"One misty, moisty morning,
When cloudy was the weather,
I chanced to meet an old man,
Who wouldn't hold together.
He was very shaky,
He was very thin,
'How do you do and how do you do,'
I said to him again.

"He nodded very weakly,
He really looked dejected.
I went quite close and shook his hand,
'Twas straw as I expected.
His coat was very ragged,
His hat was very torn,
And all the other clothes he wore,
Had certainly been worn.

"The gun upon his shoulder,
He held with such devotion,
Was nothing but a broomstick
I had a funny notion.
The pipe between his straw lips
(Twas just a cob of corn)
Dropped down upon his tattered coat,
In attitude forlorn.

"He stood right in a cornfield,
Where rows of corn were growing,
All up and down the tiny sprouts
Of tender green were showing,
Just then I heard a cawing,
I knew it, goodness knows,
And right above our heads appeared
A cloud of sooty crows.

"But suddenly their leader
Did call to their attention,
My limp and tattered friend of straw,
Whose name I needn't mention.
Then they departed quickly,
They departed fast,
'Ha, ha,' grinned Mister Straw Man,
'I have scared them all at last.'"

"Is that all?" asked Nancy.

"Isn't it enough?" asked the Riddle Lady. "My goodness, it took me a week and seven days to write it. Does anybody know who the straw man was?"

"Was it a haystack?" asked a fa man in a green satin suit.

"No!" The Riddle Lady shook her head.

"Was it a mattress?" asked a thin lady in a red satin dress. "They are made of straw sometimes."

"Goodness, no! How could a mattress smoke a pipe?" said the Riddle Lady.

"I know! I know!" called Nick. "It was a scare-crow."

"Right!" said the Riddle Lady.

And Nick got the prize out of the prize bag. I forget what it was but I think it was a bean-shooter. I wonder what the fat man or the thin lady would have done had they won it!

(To Be Continued)

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

(By F. M. DELA FOSSE)

Often, when I come upon pictures of chamois leaping from rock to rock in their native fastnesses, or of buffalo roaming at will over the western prairies, I wonder if the balance of happiness lies with the imprisoned creature or with the free. The canary, used to no other life than that spent within the four walls of its cage, sings just as beautifully and with as much gusto as the cock who carols on the twig outside the house, and the stall-fed ox ruminates with as much contentment within its narrow confines as the cattle in the meadow, or the buffalo on the plain. Lovelace, the cavalier poet, penned a very true sentiment when he wrote those memorable words,

"Stone walls do not a prison make

and they are just as applicable, in a certain sense, to the brute creation as they are to man.

It was owing to the fact that I had lately been looking through our Natural History section that the above thoughts came into my mind. It is a wonderfully interesting part of our Library, but one that is not nearly as well patronized as it should be. It is strange that it should be so, because most of us are really fond of animals and will throng to the Zoological Gardens of a big city or to a circus to see them. It is natural enough that we should be interested, for even in the nursery our ears were regaled with wonderful tales of bears and wolves and other wild animals, and from our childhood days we have all been accustomed to making pets of dogs and cats, and even of such small fry as white mice and guinea pigs. So, it is strange that we do not seem to care to read about that lower part of animated Nature that is represented by what we are pleased to term the brute creation.

There is no more interesting animal than the domesticated beast of the canine race, the dog. He is of all animals the most lovable and the most beloved by man, his master. There is a great deal of information about him in the Library. An old Arab legend, dealing with Adam's ejection from the Garden of Eden, states that when he sat down outside by the roadside, he felt a cool muzzle thrust into his palm, and, looking down, encountered the sympathetic eyes of a dog. So, it is evident that from time immemorial he has been regarded as the friend of man. All nations possess folk-tales in which the dog figures. But, leaving the old for the new, we find that in our own day and epoch writers have been mindful of his winsome character. Let us mention a few. First and foremost, there is Sir Walter Scott. He loved them, and in many of his tales they play a prominent part. There is Wasp, the litle terrier, in Guy Mannering; Roswal, the hound, in The Talisman; Wolf, in The Abbot; Bevis, in Woodstock; Fangs, in Ivanhoe. Unfortunately, to-day Scott's works are rarely taken off the shelves, and readers do not understand what they are missing.

Let us turn to a few more authors. There is Ouida, who wrote A Dog of Flanders; Dickens, who in David Copperfield immortalized Jip, the little dog that dies of grief for his mistress; Washington Irving, who in Rip Van Winkle depicts Wolf sharing the contents of his master's wallet. And think of those other splendid books, Bob, Son of Battle, by Alfred Ollivant, and Beautiful Joe by Marshall Saunders, and Rab and His Friends, by that benevolent physician, that true lover of dogs, Dr. John Brown. If the reader will take the trouble to dip into his book of miscellaneous writings, entitled "Spare Hours," he will find not only the tale of Rab and his Friends therein but a chapter recounting the histories of several of the dogs that he had once owned. And when you have read it you will lay the book down with the feeling that the writer was indeed a man of a fine and kindly character.

The holdup, according to confessions was planned at meeting of two of gunmen, Diamonds and two others.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.— (By Carl D. Groat, United Press.)—Adam Stegerwald, former Premier of Prussia, and latest to try his hand at forming a new German Cabinet, gave up his task to-day.

Stegerwald failed because the Social Democrats and other party politicians blocked his efforts.

BALDWIN HOPES FOR INCREASED EMPIRE TRADE

Says His New Policy Will Be of Immediate Benefit to Canada—Increase Manufacture Here—Immigration Discussed.

GLASGOW ADDRESS

GLASGOW, November, Canadian Press. — Discussing his new policy in his speech heer last night Premier Baldwin said:

"I don't say that this policy is going to bring the millenium, but I do say it is the only policy that actually can be employed to fight unemployment nad which, in my belief, will help our people all through. It keeps alive a most vital need for us, and that is the idea of a preference within the Empire. It may not be of much use at present to Australia and South Africa, but it will be of use to Canaad. I hope and believe that Canadian manufacturers will be able to increase in that country as against United States manufacturers, which would lead to what is necessary there—on increase in population.

DISCUSSES EMIGRATION.

"Our people must emigrate to a certain extent, our skilled men going into protected countries. I want to see them going to countries under the British flag. It can be done and at a time when the whole tendency of the world is to protect markets by high tariffs. It is worth everything to an industrial country like this to do all in its power to stimulate trade between ourselves and the Dominions. We have a chance of starting a movement in the Dominions that must build up an Empire with a white population, as large as the population in the self-contained United States of America."

COWBOY WINS FAME WITH HIS BRUSHES

Charles M. Russel Rises From Rider of the Plains to an Eminent Position in the Art World.

MISSULA, Mont., Nov. 28.—A cowboy genius.

Out of the obscurity of a Montana prairie rises Charles M. Russell, a rider of the range, to an eminent position in the art world as a painter of frontier life.

The story of this man who was found wandering over the prairie 42 years ago, hungry and alone, is as striking and as spectacular as his pictures, one of which has been purchased by the Prince of Wales for $10,000.

The Duke of Connaught also has bought one, as has a California millionaire, who paid $10,000 for Mr. Russell's "The Salute to the Robe Trade."

Hoover Finds Him.

More than twoscore years ago, Jake Hoover, known then as one of the best hunters in the Montana territory, came upon a 15-year-old boy seated beside a campfire in eastern Montana.

"What 're you doin' here?" asked Hoover.

"Campin'," replied the youth.

"Campin' hell! Where's your grub?"

"Ain't got any."

"Then come with me," directed the trapper. "I've got grub and a camp a short ways from here. I've got lots of elk meat, and it will feel pretty good in that empty belly of yours."

Without a word the youth arose, put out his fire and followed his new-found friend, and thus Charles Marion Russell found a real home in the west and became a citizen of Montana.

First Work.

In Hoover's cabin Russell began his paintings. He had only school water colors and his work was crude. He did his painting at evening, after his day's work was done, and he did it for the fun he got out of it.

Russell was born in St. Louis, March 19, 1865. He hated the city and was delighted when his parents removed to the country to live. He was downcast again when they returned to St. Louis and he ran away from home.

Self-Taught.

He is a self-taught artist—an example of genius developed through perseverance and love of his theme. His first picture to bring him national prominence was "The Last of 5,000," a title which has become a by-word in Montana.

It depicts a lone cow about to die of hunger and exposure and a coyote waiting for her to drop. It represents the last of 5,000 head of cattle which perished in a series of blizzards which struck eastern Montana in the eighties.

When he was just beginning to get recognition, he met Nancy Cooper, then 17. Both were living at Cascade, Mont., and Miss Cooper became his nurse when he was taken ill. They were married as soon as he recovered.

He had to borrow $10, half of which he paid to the minister and half to set up drinks for "the boys."

A picture of the Northwest Mounted Police was purchased some time ago for the halls of Parliament in Saskatchewan, Canada.

The Prince of Wales, on a visit, saw the picture and expressed a desire for one like it. The Canadian Government then arranged to purchase "When Law Dulls the Edge of Chance," for which the Prince paid $10,000.

ALBERTA COAL.

Some time ago the Examiner sent out post-cards to Peterborough people who purchased Alberta coal, asking them to answer a number of questions as to their experience with the Western fuel.

So far there has been nothing like a complete response to the inquiry, and apparently the majority of people are waiting until they have burned their whole supply of Alberta coal before answering the Examiner's circular.

Citizens who have tried the new coal and have given it a good test are asked to help the Examiner in this investigation by returning the cards to this office as soon as is convenient so that Peterborough's experience can be summarized.

If the Alberta fuel can satisfactorily take the place of anthracite the Examiner would like to establish that fact as a working basis for a campaign to secure for Ontario an adequate supply of the Canadian product.

On the other hand, if Alberta coal cannot stand up in a comparison with American anthracite it is just as well to have that condition clearly revealed as a result of the inquiry set on foot by the Examiner.

A speedy reply would do much to facilitate the securing of the desired information.

MANOEUVRING FOR POSITIONS.

There seems no reason why municipal aspirants should hold the announcement of their candidature back until the last possible moment, although that has always been the tendency in Peterborough.

Long election campaigns are, of course, not desirable, but the air would be cleared considerably if those citizens who have their minds made up to enter the contest for one of the vacancies in the civic roll would declare themselves early in the day.

There is so much hesitancy, so much behind-the-scenes manoeuvring and so much testing of the political waters by ambitious candidates who hesitate to take the plunge that well qualified citizens who might be of good service to the public grow weary of the whole game and will have none of it—to the loss of the community.

Much more interest would be shown in the question of civic government and in municipal affairs generally if there was not so much mystery stuff shown by aspirants whose minds are already made up but who prefer to keep the public guessing until nomination day at last forces them into the open.

The manoeuvring, in fact, continues even after the nominations are closed, and altogether it plays such a large part in municipal politics here that it is no wonder there is difficulty sometimes in getting new candidates to throw their hats into the ring.

THE ECONOMY CRY.

Much will be heard during the coming municipal election campaign about civic finances, economical administration, and all that kind of thing.

The usual pledges of rigid economy will be made, and there will be references to the necessity of a lower tax rate.

Everybody at first blush would welcome a substantial decrease in tax levies, so that it is a safe election platform, even if there are difficulties in the way of carrying it out afterward.

It is just a question, too, even if by pinching and cheese paring, a mill or two can be cut off the tax rate, whether that is not after all false economy.

If the saving can only be effected by a policy that absolutely prevents any necessary work being undertaken, that starves the civic departments, that makes it impossible to do anything but merely carry on, with no provision for the future, a Council is only half functioning that adheres to such a plan.

There is such a large percentage of the civic budget that is beyond the control of the Council, although they must provide the money, that it is difficult unless a parsimonious attitude is taken towards the controllable expenditures to effect any noticeable reduction.

The danger is that the pinching policy may be carried too far and the saving, which is not large in any case when divided per capita among the ratepayers, does not represent progress, but merely stagnation.

A Council that refuses to face conditions and authorise expenditures when they are justified, shoving the problems over to their successors in office, is not much better than an extravagant Council, for the latter generally have something to show for the money they spend.

BRITISH ELECTION AMENITIES.

One of the most interesting features of the British election campaign, to readers on this side of the Atlantic, is to be found in the exchanges between Lady Astor and her opponents, and between various other well-known political figures and their audiences. This sort of thing never seems to weary those who live outside the area of conlict. Yet it is a practically unnoticed feature in the British Isles, save that the exchanges are duly reported as part and parcel of the proceedings. Therein lies the difference. Over here, we are apt to look upon these amenities as something novel, sometimes extraneous, introduced into the fight for the purpose of giving it what we irreverently call "pep." The actual fact is that they are an integral factor in the British voter's electioneering methods. Heckling is his system of testing the temper, the versatility, the knowledge, and, above all, the humanity of the candidate. Many a clever man with a keen instinct for politics has lost a British election through losing his temper before the onslaught of the experienced heckler.

Lady Astor is dealing with the extremists of the Socialist party, who are not in reality experienced election agents or factors. They have the defects of their qualities, and they are non-plussed by her temper and her courage. Her tactics have floored them, in fact, and they do not know what to do to disturb her equanimity. The late Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain used similar methods to stop hoodlums when he went into hostile territory, and it was by his calmness, his contempt, and his obvious courage that he often turned enmity into unwilling admiration. Lady Astor seems well on the way to do the same thing. But this should not be accepted as typical. The hecklers in the rank and file of the electors are much more subtle and much more resourceful individuals than the Socialist rowdies whom Lady Astor has squelched They know their business thoroughly, and they pursue it with cunning, with persistence, and with a certain amount of diabolical ingenuity.

Their principal aim is to throw their opponent off his balance. They interject tantalising interruptions just when he is about to enter upon a fluent and eloquent exordium. He is compelled to stop and answer, and if he shows the least sign of being flurried, they press their advantage and worry him with more questions. If he is calm, they await another opportunity a little later on. But their work is done with precision and with judgment. It may seem haphazard, but it is nothing of the kind. It is a very significant and influential factor in the game of election fighting —the roughest sort of game that Britain knows. Nowadays, moreover, it is carried on with more deadly effect and with less reliance upon extraneous influences, than years ago. There was a time, not so very far back, when the employment of bags of pepper at the end of walking sticks, rosettes criss-crossed with sharp pins, and even needles, paper bags containing offensive odors, and similar weapons of annoyance, was common in British elections. But today the vocal factor is the main weapon in use. And it is employed in a manner and with a versatility that astounds and confounds the inexperienced and the nervous. Before this present election is over, it is not at all improbable that a few hardy spirits who have entered the lists without any real justification save a desire for experience and a fight will get a surfeit of both.—Montreal Star.

THE CAPITAL LEVY.

A despatch from London summarizes a statement issued by the Britsh Labor party expounding their political plan of capital levy, in other words of taking a large part of the means of wealthy people in Britain at one swoop to help pay off national debt. The statement claims that the levy would not hurt British business

> "because the greater part of the country's capital is invested in joint-stock companies none of which would be affected by the plan. The levy would be paid only by individuals.

The Labor party's assertion that the greater part of British capital is invested in joint-stock companies is no doubt correct. And what it goes to prove is that capital is not cash. The Labor declaration says most of British capital is in stock companies. Outside of companies, there is of course a great amount of value in private industries and in land, buildings, agricultural equipment and cattle, and privately owned ships and mines, etc. When you deduct all that sort of capital as well as the capital in joint-stock companies which the Labor statement says is the greatest of them all, there can be very little capital left represented purely by hard cash. None of these other things are cash. In a word, it may be said that practically in Britain, and indeed in all modern civilization, capital is not cash but investment.

But the capital levy is necessarily a demand for cash. A tremendous demand for cash. The scale of levy proposed by the British Labor party ranges from 5 per cent. on wealth or possessions amounting to $25,000 to 60 per cent, on wealth or possessions exceeding $5,000,000. On amounts of exactly $5,000,000 the tax proposed is 50.3 per cent. which would be equal to $2,515,000. In other words a man in England who possesses property which at present market value might perhaps bring $5,000,000 if disposed of by advantageous sale, would be called on by this capital levy to pay $2,515,000 cash to the State within a comparatively brief time.

What would be the likely result of such a levy?

Inasmuch as nearly all capital is investment, not cash, the persons in Britain called upon to pay the levy would have to sell investments to do so.

But who would buy?

Not the persons owning capital; they would all be busy selling investments to pay the levy.

The only possible purchasers in Britain of stocks or land or other property under such circumstances would be the people who have so little capital that they would not be liable for the capital levy.

What would follow?

Inevitably there would follow a tremendous depreciation in the values of all investments. Everybody affected by the levy would be wanting to sell; nobody or very few, able to buy. Not merely the stock of joint-stock companies would fall tremendously in value, but all the values of land, of ships, of private industries, of buildings, of agriculture. Further, alarmed by such falling values, most people who had loaned money on mortgages or to private industries, and all the banks which had been making commercial advances, would be calling in or reducing their loans on account of the decreased value of securities. All existing business would thus be more or less paralyzed. And there would be no new business or industries, for nobody would have money or credit to start anything.

Such is the picture which is forecast by the proposal of the capital levy in Britain if we accept the Labor party's own declaration that "the greater part of the country's capital is invested in joint-stock companies." By this declaration the Labor party damns its own case—by the admission thus made officially that capital is not cash, to any considerable extent. Every business man knows this and knows what it is liable to mean in business and industry. The leaders of the Labor propaganda in Britain for a capital levy are not business men unfortunately; and unfortunately also, whatever light is beginning to dawn upon them on the subject, the mass of their followers, still less well-informed, probably remain obessed by the idea that all that a capital levy means is digging money out of rich people's hoards of cash.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

There are numerous women candidates in England, but it is noticeable that not many men are giving up their seat to the ladies.

Neighbors are crazy people who tend to your business and fine people who tend to their business.

Neighbors are funny people who come over when you are sick and tell you how sick they used to be.

Neighbor women are people with their hair in papers who come over to borrow a cup of sugar.

Neighbor men are people in shirt-sleeves who explain why you should have used a little more yeast.

We don't know why neighbors act so foolish and neighbors don't know why you act so foolish.

Don't judge neighbors by what you see hanging on their clothes lines.

Shake hands with a collector and invite him in so the neighbors will not know he is a collector.

Treat your neighbors nice. If you didn't have any neighbors your neighborhood would be deserted.

Never get too mad at your neighbors. Very often your enemies this weeks are your friends next week.

Never tell your neighbors too much. Quite often your friends this week are your enemies next week.

Some neighbors talk too much. This is fine. You can cuss them instead of cussing the weather.

Rich people are neighbors who make a little more money than you.

Poor people are neighbors who don't make quite as much as you make.

Stingy people are neighbors who are trying to keep out of debt.

An inquisitive neighbor and her lace curtains are soon parted.

You seldom see a skinny neighbor forget to pull the shades down.

Early to bed and early to rise and you hear all the player pianos.

Least said about neighbors the better.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, November 29. — Daily sales at the Union Stock Yards are keeping close touch with the receipts and there will not be many cattle left over this week-end. Tuesday's sales were 1,250 head and total receipts 1,384. With yesterday's fresh cattle there was less than 1,200 on sale.

Yesterday morning's receipts of stock were: 365 cattle, 140 calves, 1,657 hogs, and 492 sheep and lambs.

Among yesterday's offerings were six loads of Western cattle, three of butchers' cows, and three steers. For the best load of the cows only $4.00 a cwt. was bid, but this was not acceptable. For the best of the steers it was expected to get near 6 cents a pound.

Trade was a little draggy yesterday morning in the common killers, but prices were steady. Medium to good butchers' cows sold at 4 cents and a few heavy bulls for export at 4 1-2 cents. A few good butchers heifers were bought by H. McCort at 6 cents a pound. The stocker and feeder market was quieter, without any price modifications.

There was no snap to the trading in calves, but prices were no easier and sales were made at about Monday's and Tuesday's quotations. Tops sold at 11 cents.

Some buyers are trying to get lower lamb market, but without avail. The demand is good for the light lambs, and these are keeping steady from 10 1-2 to 10 3-4 cents for ewes and wethers. Heavy lambs are harder to sell, and from one to two cents below these prices. The handyweight sheep are easily negotiated at 6 1-2 to 7 cents. Most of yesterday's good lambs sold at 10 1-2 cents.

Among the weakening factors in the hog market is the arrival of a large number of corn-fed hogs. Sellers appeared to be ready to accept a reduction of 25 cents a cwt. yesterday morning, making the quotation 7.50 a cwt. f.o.b. and $8.00 fed and watered. The price for selects is 75 cents a cwt. higher than this.

Constant Headaches And Dizziness.

It is hard to struggle along with a head that aches and pains all the time, and in nine cases out of ten the persistent headaches are due to some derangement of the stomach, liver or bowels.

Undoubtedly the cause must be removed before permanent relief may be had.

Burdock Blood Bitters removes the cause of the headaches, as it acts on every organ of the body and strengthens, purifies and regulates the whole system.

Mrs. Peter Curran, 27 Morrison St., Sydney, N.S., writes:—"I have been troubled for the last five years with constant headaches and dizziness. After trying several remedies, which I found to be of no avail, Burdock Blood Bitters was recommended to me.

B.B.B. did me a world of good, and I cannot praise this remedy enough."

PETERBORO STORE TAKEN AS A MODEL

Grafton Store Here Has High Standing in Chain

An illustration of the standing of the Peterborough branch of the Grafton Company's chain of stores, is shown in the way the local store is held up as an example to the others, Just at present there are two lady representatives of other branches, Miss Waugh, of London, and Miss McLean, of Brantford, paying a visit to the Peterborough store for the purpose of studying its stock-keeping system actually in operation, and to pick up any further ideas on the way the store is conducted, that will help put their home establishments on an improved basis. They will be given every chance to become thoroughly acquainted with the system, and on their return will be in a much better position to carry out the same methods, which the management desires to be put in practice at all their branches. As this system originated at Peterborough, naturally the local store is looked to as the guide and reference to which the others must look for instruction.

CROP REPORTS

The following is a summary of returns made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Fall wheat continues to have a fine appearance for entering the winter.

The acreage of fall plowing done this year has been well up to the average, and some farmers are willing to take advantage of any further open weather to extend the area turned under. Considerable land has been cross-plowed.

The fine weather of the last few weeks has made it possible for farmers to let live stock run on pasture somewhat later than usual on the grazing districts; and unless considerable snow comes many horses and cattle may be left out for a while longer.

Algoma—Hay is moving very slowly at from $15 to $16 per ton. Quantities of Michigan hay were imported this year, which had a tendency to spoil the local market.

Bruce—There is very little movement in the sale of grain owing to the large number of live stock being fed. Chickens are being sold from 23c to 28c per pound dressed.

Kent—What little hay has gone over the market weigh scales during the past week has sold as follows: Timothy $14 per ton; alfalfa, $15 per ton. On the market today the only fruits appearing are apples, pears and quinces. Apples are bringing 30 to 40 cents per peck and pears 50 cents per basket. The large quantity of onions on the market this morning found ready sale at 60 cents per peck. There is a great demand for all dairy products. Poultry products are finding ready sale through the dealers to more distant points.

Dundas—Live Poultry is being rushed on the market with falling prices. American buyers appeared locally on the market for turkeys at 36c to 38c dressed, the former part of the week, but have since disappeared. Some turkeys marketed the latter part of the week realized only 35c to 26c on the American markets including 6c per pound duty.

South Simcoe—While the cream receipts for 1923 are running much higher than last year, those for the present month are about the same as November of 1922. 37c per pound is being paid for butter-fat.

Leeds—Most cheese factories are now shut down or are operating only one or two days a week. Not much change in the market. Dairy butter is in greatest demand: No. 1 creamery 41c, whey butter 38c, cream 40c a lb., cheese 18¾c.

Kenora—Owing to the prospects of a dairy bein started in Dryden next spring, a great deal of interest is being taken in dairying, and it is likely that next season will see a great increase in the number of dairy cows kept in this District.

Brant—Drovers are continuing to unload feeders in this county, the prevailing price running from 4½-5¼c a lb. There are some reports of losses with little pigs.

Algoma—Cattle are in good condition for going into winter quarters. The local market is poor. Two year olds are selling as low at $20. per head in some localities. Shipments to Toronto bring better prices.

North Simcoe—Feeders being sold from 4c to 5c per lb. Hogs are quoted this week at 7¾c a lb. on the thick smooth basis.

Bruce—During the past week some 850 hogs were shipped from various points in this county, 48% of which graded selects, 50% thick smooths, and the balance heavies and shops. Walkerton and Lucknow standing highest with 60% selects.

Glengarry — Considerable hogs were shipped this week, but the price was down again $8.60 being the best offered. Old boars went at $2 per cwt.

Lincoln—Many men who earlier in the season scorned farm work are now looking to the farm for a job for the winter.

Lambton—Labor conditions are quiet. I expect eight Hollander farm laborers, next week. I have places for them all at $300 per year.

GERMANY IS BANKRUPT NEEDS FOREIGN LOAN NEW CURRENCY SCORE

Present Prices Soar Above the Arithmetical Knowledge of Humbler People Who Learned to Count Up to Only One Million.

Printers In Arrears.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.— (Canadian Press)—Germany is immediately confronted with a plain case of a state of bankruptcy and will no longer be able to meet her public payrolls, in the opinion of Dr. George Gothein, Democrat Reichstag leader, who yesterday vigorously upbraided the Socialists and German Nationalists for having needlessly precipitated a parliamentary crisis.

Dr. Gothein declared Germany's only salvation in the present situation would be in the form of a foreign loan under Allied supervision, "similar to that applied in the case of Austria."

Mountains of Marks.

Sixteen and one-half million trillions of marks in new paper currency were floated by the Reichsbank in the first week of November during which period its holdings of discounted Treasury bills, private checks and drafts increased by twenty-six and one half million trillions. The current return was the first reported this month, a circumstance which was the subject of comment on yesterday's dull and listless Bourse.

Dr. Schaht, the newly appointed Commissioner of Currency, hopes to have the entire issue of the rentenmark ready for distribution by the middle of next month. He declares that the scarcity of the iew money is wholly due to the fact that the printers are in arrears in their deliveries and that the initial output was placed at the disposal of the Government to enable it ot dispense with discounting Treasury bills.

No Parity Determined.

Until the rentenmark is available in large quantities no attempt will be made to establish a parity between it and the paper mark, the legal status of which meanwhile remains unchanged. It is estimated that about 200,000,000 rentenmarks now are in circulation, chiefly devoted to meeting the federal payrolls. Dr. Schacht believes that some friction will be inevitable during the period of transition from the one currency to the other.

Pathetic instances abound of the difficulties the humbler people of the older generation are having in trying to accomodate themselves to the bewildering currency figures of the present. Today, one old dame, shopping at a street market, was heard to confess that she could not understand the present prices, as at school she "only learned to count up to a million," and could never get any further.

LATINS LEFT OUT OF TANGIER PACT.

Italy Not Consulted By British and French in New Agreement.

PARIS, November 29 (Canadian Press). — The Franco-British agreement as to the future status of Tangier, which is now understood on the best French authority as well as from British sources to be full and final, although Spain is still holding out, is regarded here as one of the reasons for the particular warmth of the exchanges of compliments in Rome by the Kings of Italy and Spain and by the heads of the two Governments, Mussolini and Primo De Rivera.

The Italian Government is known to be greatly disappointed at the refusal of Great Britain and France to admit Italy to the Tangier negotiations, while Spain, in view of the united opposition to her ambitions on the part of the British and the French, was anxious to have Italy come into the agreement.

The Spanish delegate to the conference now is delaying action on the final draft of the document providing for the new status, with a view, it is believed here, of giving the Italian Premier time to find some way of getting in his word.

In the new convention as now adopted in the Anglo-French compromise the principal features are the open door in time of peace and neutralisation in time of war, with the zone of Tangier remaining under the full sovereignty of the Sultan of Morocco.

The French gained the point that the town and the hinterland must remain under the Sultan's sovereignty.

The British gained the point that Tangier must not be permitted to be used by anyone in case of war.

Spain's claim for control being rejected, compensation has been offered her in the shape of the extension of her zone of influence, which thus far has not been accepted.

CANADIAN FARM PRODUCTS GAIN IN BRITISH MARKET

Bacon Trade Is Improving and Apples in Strong Demand, Says Deputy-Minister of Agriculture--Investigated Opportunities.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).Dr. J. H. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture returned from his recent visit to Great Britain in an optimistic mood as to the future of the Canadian trade in cattle.

"The stocker trade of ours has met with many set-backs," he said, "and has many obstacles put in its way but it looks to me as if we were now over the hill and I am confident that very much more satisfactory progress and much more certain and remunerative returns may be expected from now forward."

Dr. Grisdale looked into Canada's trade generally with Great Britain in agricultural produce. Canadian apples, he says enjoy a very good repute on the Old Country, as also do Canadian eggs.

Trade over there in Canadian bacon is improving. The Deputy Minister, however, was not too optimistic about the British market for Canadian butter and cheese.

In company, with Duncan Marshall, Commissioner of Agriculture, Dr. Grisdale, went to Great Britain with a special view to improving conditions under which store cattle are admitted, and an announcement in this connection will be issued shortly by the Department. Many British farmers welcome Canadian cattle and speak highly of them, Dr. Grisdale reports, while many others are evidently doing all they can to injure the reputation of Canadian stockers. "Nevertheless," he adds, "our cattle are making steady progress in the estimation of the British feeder, and I have no doubt but that in a short time they will enjoy just as good as, if not a better reputation than they ever did since according to the salesmen in Great Britain, Canadian stores being sent over now are quite equal to, and in many cases, superior to those that found their way across 30 years ago.

Shown at Exhibition

At the Norwich Fat Stock Show held recently says the Deputy Minister, two classes for Canadian cattle were put on by friendly dealers. The entry in those classes was fair, there being nine Canadian cattle competing. A cable just received by Dr. Grisdale from a Mr. Chapman of Pakenham, who was largely responsible for the Canadian exhibits, reads:

"At Norwich Fat Cattle Show, the Canadian exhibit was greatly admired. It his been a most excellent advertisement for Canada. The nine cattle exhibited sold for an average of £58 14s. Two of the cattle made £69 and £70 respectively. Many very gratifying comments are appearing in the press."

Dr. Grisdale comments that this should do much to improve the demand for Canadian stores, particularly as Norwich is the principal town in the eastern counties where beef cattle for feeding is the chief class of livestock kept on the farm. The Deputy holds out the hope that improvements may be brought about very soon in the vexed question of ocean space and its cost. Efforts to this end he says are being made, in both Great Britain and Canada.

Cattle for Slaughter

The trade in fat cattle from Canada shipped alive has been fair, he states. Many cattle which were shipped as stores were rejected by the British authorities at the landing port as too fat, which resulted in lowering the price of fat cattle at Glasgow and Liverpool. It is hoped however, that this difficulty will be removed in the near future and the shipping of fat cattle thus become more profitable. Dr. Grisdale asserts that there is at present a great opening for cattle for immediate slaughter, and as a rule the trade is fairly profitable. Furthermore, he thinks that this trade will shortly be entirely in the hands of Canadian exporters, since the United States, the only other country taking part has been gradually decreasing her shipments year by year.

The trade in Canadian bacon is improving, he says and the product is meeting with considerably less criticism than was the case a year ago. The price has advanced a little and the quality is also higher due in some measure, Dr. Grisdale believes to Canada's new hog grading regulations. Canada's bacon won out very easily at the recent London dairy show in competition with exhibits from the other domnions. The great trouble is the limited quantity of becon exported says the Deputy. There is no reason, he thinks, why the amount now going over, should not be increased three or four times. Dr. Grisdale believes that the number of hogs in Canada might easily be doubled. With improved quality and a greatly increased output he feels assured that Canadian bacon would take its rightful place on the British market and favorably compete with that from Denmark.

Dairy Products

Canadian diary products, he comments seem not to have made much progress on the British market during the past year, although there is possibly some improvement on the whole. Canadian cheese, he says, has been standing up better this year than for some time, and as a rule has commanded a higher price than cheese from New Zealand. At the London Dairy Show, furthermore, Canadian cheese carried off both first and second prizes. The trade in Canadian butter, Dr. Grisdale says is very small and "in rather ill repute.' The great difficulty is the lack of uniformity in quality and packing. This he adds, is one of the matters which will be considered at the Dairy Conferene to be held in Ottawa this week.

Canadian eggs are looked upon as an excellent article in Great Britain he says, but the quantity going forward is too small.

Demand For Apples

Canadian apples were arriving in London in great quantities when Dr Grisdale was over there, and he was pleased to note that they were in high esteem. He thinks however, that packing methods need improvement. Some of the fruit, too, looked like windfalls, he says. The Canadian apple received a tremendous boost this year, he adds, by the fact of its being awarded premier honors in the British Empire at the Manchester Fruit Show. The demand for Canadian apples can be materially increased if the right article is sent over and properly handled there.

"On the whole," concludes Dr. Grisdale, "I am of the opinion that Canadian agricultural products will in the future command more and more the attention of the British consumer."

Cuticura Heals Face Disfigured With Itchy Eczema

"Eczema broke out in watery pimples on my face and head. Later my cheeks and head became so bad that they were covered with large scales. The itching and burning were so severe that I could not sleep at night. My face was badly disfigured. My hair became dry and lifeless and fell out so that I had to have it cut off close to my scalp.

"A friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Elmer King, Box 278, Jackson St., Oxford, Nova Scotia.

New Zealand Favors Trade Within Empire.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28. — "The rapid development of New Zealand as one of the greatest dairying countries of the world is resulting in an increased demand in that country for manufactured articles of all kinds," said Mr. George E. Bunting, Australian representative of the Canadian National Railways who is in Montreal from Auckland, New Zealand. "New Zealand is distinctly favorable to trade within the empire and as a result of these two conditions there is a large and eager market there for Canadian made goods."

WOMEN ACTIVE IN JANETVILLE WORK

Hold Community Dinner at Which Rev. G. E. Ross Congratulated Them on Achievements.

JANETVILLE, Nov. 28.—On Thursday evening last the Y. P. S., of Janetville, held a most successful meeting. The Trail Rangers, Tuxis Boys and C. G. I. T. Girls held their group meetings at 7:30, and were visited by the pastor, who gave each group a few minutes and some words of cheer and encouragement.

Then, at 8:30, all the young folks met, and as it was the social evening, a spelling match was conducted by the president. Four or five school teachers, half a dozen high school pupils, and the pastor took part, and there was a most enjoyable and profitable time in which over 40 young people joined.

After the spelling match was over lunch was served and much enjoyed by all. The company dispersed about 10 P.M.

The Community Dinner

On Friday evening last the Women's Institute held a dinner in the Forester's Hall which was a brilliant success. The heavy snow storm militated somewhat against the attendance, but the dinner excellent and the programme of a high order. It was opened by the community song, and followed by an address delivered by the chairman, Rev. G. E. Ross, M.A. He congratulated the ladies on the excellent dinner, the piano purchased by them and placed in the Forester's Hall, the rest room which they have furnished and fitted up for the ladies of the community, and also the community park which has been plowed, leveled and made ready for planting trees in the spring.

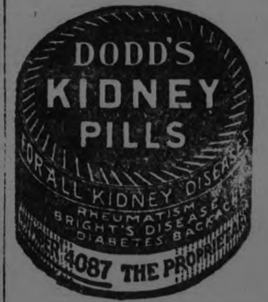
Mr Ross, in his address, enlarged on the park question, and suggested that the ladies begin in the spring to build a grand stand, to be used for the accommodation of the public as they witness from time to time the baseball games that will be played on the park. Mr. Ross also suggested that the institute push forward and secure as soon as possible a lighting system which migh be operated from the mill plant of Mr. R. J. Burn.

A community of such abundant wealth should have no difficulty in making their village one of the most beautiful in Ontario.

After the chairman's address the following took part in the programme: Duet, Misses Porter; solo, Mr. G. Heaslip; reading, Mrs. J. Bradburn; solo, Miss Thelma McMullen; duet, Mrs. Rev. Walker and Mrs. Anderson; solo, Miss Lorna McGill; club singing, Mrs. Heaslip, Armstrong and Deyell; this splendid programme was brought to a close about 10 o'clock.

Church Activities

Anniversaries will be held on Dec. 9th, when, by the request of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Ross, Rev. W. R. Ganton, of Napanee, will preach morning and evening. The Y. P. S. will hold an entertainment on Dec. 17th, when Rev. Mr. Campbell will entertain the congregation with views of his fields of service as social service secretary. The Sunday school are preparing for a Christmas entertainment during Christmas week, and the Mission Band are holding a social of their own in the near future. The young people will put on their play entitled "Martha Made Over," next Friday evening at Nestleton, at Mount Horeb in a week or two, and at Cambridge Street Church, Lindsay, in the near future. Janetville Y. P. S. is growing by leaps and bounds and has now about 93 members. The congregations are also increasing in interest and numbers.



A Severe Attack Of Heart Trouble Was Relieved By MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills

Mr. S. E. Barnes, Athens, Ont., writes:—"Four years ago I had a very severe attack of heart trouble. I consulted my doctor; he treated me for some time, but I only seemed to be getting worse. I finally went to our druggist and purchased three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and derived immediate relief from their use, and I can truthfully say they are a wonderful medicine. I always keep a box on hand, and if I feel out of sorts I take a few pills and feel all right again."

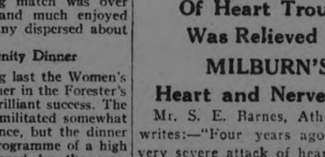
Warned she would ruin her skin

The winter sports girl still has the kind of complexion men bow to



WHEN girls started on a headlong career of winter sports, everyone warned them they would eternally ruin their complexions.

But they just did not. After several seasons of skating and skiing and wild tobogganing the modern girl still has the kind of complexion men bow to, fascinatingly fresh and smooth.

Because, as she would say, she goes in for taking the proper care of it.

WHY HER SKIN DOES NOT COARSEN OR CHAP

This is one thing the modern girl has proved. Give it these two indispensable things on which a skin keeps young and smooth, and no sun or ice, dryness or dampness can alter its fineness:—

The special kind of cleansing that will keep that transparent freshness in your skin for years. And the particular way of protecting it that will prevent any coarsening of its loveliness.

Women who use daily the two different creams which Pond's developed to fill these two needs, are entirely free from worry about the weather. Season in and out, no matter what exposure their skin must meet—their faces are fine-textured and supple. Begin today to try this famous method. Buy both creams in jars or tubes at 50 cents each at drug or departmental stores. The Pond's Extract Co., 146 Brock Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

MADE IN CANADA

EVERY NIGHT. Apply Pond's Cold Cream freely. It penetrates every pore. Let it stay on a minute—now wipe it off with a soft cloth. Do this twice. The black shows you how carefully this cream cleanses. Your skin looks fresh and is beautifully supple again.

THEN BEFORE YOU POWDER, smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream very evenly—just enough for your skin to absorb. How smooth and velvety your face feels. The worst weather cannot roughen or redden it.

Ruth Roland who does so much outdoor work says, "Pond's Cold Cream leaves my face very soft and supple. Then I use Pond's Vanishing Cream by day to prevent any roughness through the day."

"The name Marie doesn't suit you. I never I know you well enough I shall call you Mary.' "

But she had not. As she entered, dressed in a white tea gown of chiffon and lace, she looked like a moonbeam, and as if no mortal indisposition had ever brushed her in passing. Instead of her pearls she wore a long thin necklace of diamonds that seemed to frost her gown. She was smiling and gracious and infinitely remote. The effect was as cold and steadying as his morning's icy shower.

He shook her hand firmly. "Sorry you have been seedy. Hope it didn't lay you up."

"Oh, no. I fancy I merely wanted an excuse to see Atlantic City. It was just a touch of bronchitis and fled at once."

"Like Atlantic City?"

"No. It is merely an interminable line of ostentatiously rich hotels on a board walk! None of the grace and dignity of Ostend—poor Ostend as it used to be. The digue was one of the most brilliant sights in Europe—but no doubt you have seen it," she added politely.

"Yes, I spent a week there once, but Bruges interested me more. I was very young at the time."

"You must have been! Don't you like to gamble? The Kursaal could be very exciting."

"Oh, yes, I like to gamble occasionally." (God! What banal talk!) "Gambling with life, however, is a long sight more exciting."

"Yes, is it not? Atlantic City might do you good. You do not look at all well."

"Never felt better in my life. A bit tired. Generally am at this time of the year. May take a run down to Florida."

"I should," she said politely. "Shall you stay long?"

"That depends." (Presence of servants superfluous! "Are you fond of the sea?"

"I detest it—that boundless flat gray waste. A wild and rocky coast in a terrific storm, yes—but not that moving gray plain that comes in and falls down, comes in and falls down. It is the mountains I turn to when I can. I often long for the Austrian Alps. The Dolomites! The translucent green lakes like enormous emeralds, sparkling in the sun and set in white walls. A glimpse of pine forest beyond. The roar of an avalanche in the night."

"New York and Atlantic City must seem prosaic." He had never felt so polite. "I suppose you are eager to return?" (Why in hell don't those servants bring the dinner!)

"I have not seen the Alps since two years before the war. Some day—yes! Oh, yes! Shall we sit down?"

The two men entered with enormous dignity bearing plates of oysters as if offering the Holy Grail and the head of Saint John the Baptist on a charger. Impossible to associate class-consciousness with beings who looked as impersonal as fate, and would have regarded a fork out of alignment as a stain on their private 'scutcheon. They performed the rite of placing the oysters on the table and retired.

Madame Zattiany and Clavering adjusted themselves to the Gothic period. The oysters were succulent. They discussed the weather.

"This was a happy thought," he said. "It feels like a blizzard outside."

"The radiator in the dining room is out of order."

She was a woman of the world. Why in thunder didn't she make things easier? Had she asked him here merely because she was too bored to eat alone? He hated small talk. There was nothing he wanted less than the personalities of their previous conversations, but she might have entertained him. She was eating her oysters daintily and giving him the benefit of her dark brown eyelashes. Possibly she was merely in the mood for comfortable silences with an established friend. Well, he was not. Passion had subsided but his nerves jangled.

And inspiration came with the soup and some excellent sherry.

"By the way! Do you remember I asked you—at that last first-night—if you wouldn't like to see something of the Sophisticates?"

"The what?"

"Some of them still like to call themselves Intellectuals, but that title—Intelligentsia—is now claimed by every white collar in Europe whoe has turned Socialist or Revolutionist. He may have the intellect of a cabbage, but he wants a 'new order.' We still have a few pseudo-socialists among our busy young brains, but youth must have its ideals and they can originate nothing better. I thought I'd coin a new head-line that would embrace all of us."

"It is comprehensive! Well?"

"A friend of mine, Gora Dwight—at present 'foremost woman author of America'—is giving a party next Saturday night. I'd like enormously to take you."

"But I do not know Miss Dwight."

"She will call in due form. I assure you she understands the conventions. Of course, you need not see her, but she will leave a card. Not that it wouldn't be quite proper for me merely to take you."

"I should prefer that she called. Then—yes, I should like to go. Thank you."

The men arrived with the entree and departed with the soup plates.

Once more he had an inspiration.

"Poor old Dinwiddie's laid up with the gout."

"Really? He called a day or two after the dinner, and I enjoyed hearing him talk about the New York of his youth—and of Mary's. Unfortunately, I was out when he called again. But I have seen Mr. Osborne twice. These are his flowers. He also sent me several books."

SULPHUR CLEARS A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms, or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.

The British Elections

(By WICKHAM STEED)

(By Wickham Stead, former Editor the London Times, Editor Review of Reviews, Registered in Accordance with Copyright Act, 1923.)

LONDON, November 29.—Speaking in St. Andrew's Hall, at Glasgow last night, Premier Baldwin laid himself open to a serious retort from his political opponents. Until he plunged the country into this unwanted election, the simplicity and honesty of his methods has been the greatest asset to the Conservative Party. But the suddenness of his declaration that the verdict of the electors must be taken on the Protection issue in order to release the Government from the hampering effect of Bonar Law's pledge that no fundamental change in the British Fiscal system should be made during the life of the last Parliament, has exposed Baldwin to the suspicion of being guilty of electoral sharp practice. The question is being repeatedly asked whether, had he lived, Bonar Law would have approved of Baldwin's tactics.

Last night Baldwin answered in Glasgow that before speaking in Plymouth on 25th October, he informed Bonar Law of the main lines of his proposal, and received a message full of encouragement and approval.

The suggestion is, therefore, that Bonar Law sanctioned the general election policy, which was only finally decided upon after his death.

Unless Baldwin can produce evidence to prove his statement, the suggestion is warranted that his invocation of Bonar Law's name may do him great harm.

In the Plymouth speech on 25th October, Baldwin did not announce the approaching dissolution of Parliament. He only announced the intention of the Government to do everything in its power to safeguard British industries against further depression by foreign competition. But he stated expressly that this was to be done within the limits of Bonar Law's pledge, by extending the principle of the Safeguarding of Industries Act If challenged, the Government would take the verdict of the country.

Except in some opposition speeches, Baldwin was not challenged. Had he brought in any concert proposals before Parliament to extend the safeguarding of industries principle, so as to prevent dumping, he would undoubtedly have received the support of the Conservative majority, the Opposition would have been powerless to reject the proposals save by Parliamentary obstruction, which would have then justified an appeal to the country on the definite issue, an election would then have been fought on clear lines with enthusiasm.

I have reason to believe that Baldwin himself did not mean to appeal to the country immediately when he made his Plymouth speech, but that he was rushed into the decision by the Extreme Protectionists, especially Lt.-Col. L. C. S. Amery, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Therefore, to suggest by implication that Bonar Law approved in advance of a course he did not know about is likely to give the Opposition leaders an opening to seriously challenge the accuracy of Baldwin's reading of recent history.

I shall be surprised if this incident does not play an important part in the closing stages of the campaign. It will certainly not tend to increase the cohesion of the Conservative Party, which strenuous efforts have been made during the last ten days to represent as now perfect.

Lloyd-George, who is campaigning with irrepressible vitality, launched yesterday a telling gibe at the gyrations of Lord Derby, who, as a Lancashire Conservative anxious to please the Free Trade and Protectionist sections of the Tory Party has been daily performing miracles of versatility.

Lloyd-George said that Derby, the "erring son of Lancashire, is giving nightly exhibitions of looping the loop. At one moment he is upright for Free-Trade principles, at the next moment he is head down, heels up, calling for Protection. He would have fallen out long ago if he hadn't been strapped in."

If, as is widely expected, the Conservatives lose ground and sacrifice the majority they had last session, the consequences of Baldwin's tactics may well be that at that moment when the country most needs decisive action the Parliament will be impotent to sanction it.

The agreement concluded between the French, and Hugo Stinnes and other big German industrialists undoubtedly threatens to create a powerful Franco-German coal and iron monopoly in Central Europe which would be able to swamp the British markets with accumulated stocks.

In ordinary circumstances any British Government would be compelled to adopt emergency measures against this danger; but if it is possible to form a Government at all at this election, its members will have been so recently pledged not to adopt anything like Protection that damage may easily be done before measures of defence have been sanctioned or carried out.

The Franco-German agreement has been the subject of anxious conferences in London during the last two days, unless the British and the two days . Unless the British and French Foreign Offices are extremely prudent, it may rapidly bring on a fresh Anglo-French crisis. The chief hope of averting a definite rupture of the Entente now lies in the chaotic condition of Germany, which may before long compel the Allies to sink all their differences in order to establish some form of joint control over German affairs.

FLUORSPAR HOLDINGS IN HASTINGS COUNTY

A Statement by the Noyes Mining Company of Crookston.

The Noyes Mining Company, Limited, make the following announcement:

Through the efforts of the Noyes Mining Company, Limited, a company with its head office at the mines near Madoc, Ont., where they hold mineral rights over 300 acres of valuable fluorspar deposits, together with plant, buildings, power line franchises, and general tools and equipment, enough money has been contracted for, in the issue of $50,000.00 worth of gold bonds, bearing interest at eight per cent., and purchased by the Cowain Securities Corporation of the City of Peterborough, to enable them to commence operations at once in reopening and producing this non-metallic mineral, which will, from now on, be in considerable demand. in the near future the steel mills of our Dominion are going to make a heavy demand for this product and with the reopening of these deposits, and the development of our own Ontario resources, this will mean doing away with the necessity of importing this commodity from the United States of America, from which country a great deal of this has been imported in the last few years.

The apraised value of the holdings and equipment is placed at $350,000, while the estimated net annual earnings are figured at $62,400, or at more than ten times the required annual interest charges, so this will allow for the establishment of a substantial Sinking Fund to protect the Bond Holders, and assure the retirement of the bonds at maturity.

The company has announced the appointment of Mr. Edward James Cowain as being in full charge of the engineering work, and general manager of the mines. Mr. Cowain has years of valuable experience in the development and working of mineral resources all over Canada, and the company feel that they have been most fortunate in securing an executive of such calibre as Mr. Cowain, and look forward to a period of unbounded success with their interests under his supervision.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

The person who leads the "simple life" does not fall a victim to cirrhosis, or hardening of the liver.

This trouble, which always results fatally, unless taken under skillful treatment in its early stages, seems in the great majority of cases to be reserved for the high flyers in eating. Other favorite subjects are the inactive "fats" and the socially convival souls, who drink a little to keep up custom but neglect or sidestep the real health of their bodies.

The disease is caused by overeating of rich, highly seasoned foods, also by malaria, diabetes and the habitual use of alcoholic drinks. The old-time drinker was a good subject for cirrhosis. The present-day drinker has no time to contract the disease. He succumbs too quickly to the modern drinks. The toxic or poisonous part of alcoholis carried directly to the liver unchanged, from the stomach and intestines.

It starts at once in its destructive work on the cells and connective tissue. The symptoms at first present nothing that seems to interfere with the portal circulation (blood circulation from the stomach, intestines and spleen, into and from the liver). Some loss of appetite, also a decrease in weight, with a sluggish elimination, coated tongue and dyspepsia, are some follow-up symptoms.

The process of shrinking and hardening goes on all the time, however, until the liver is reduced in size and altered in shape. The glands and bile ducts at last become atrophied, while near the final stage the liver is filled with fat particles.

A yearly health examination by your physician will help you to avoid any such condition.

...CKEREL IS IN WINTER HOME.

"Scar Face Billy" Spends Winter in Tank Reservoir on Ranch.

O'NEILL, Neb., Nov. 27 (United Press).—"Scar Face Billy" is home again. He is a monster pickerel that spends his winters in the tank reservoir on the ranch of Frank Barrett, near here.

Annually "Scar Face Billy" wends his way to the huge reservoir in the fall and lazily rolls around in the sunny spots of the pool during the short days of mid-winter.

His name comes from a long scar across his head received from a spear fisherman. Billy was found eight years ago by Barrett. At the time the pickerel was lying half-dazed in shallow water, crimsoned from his wound. Barrett took Bill to the tank home of the fish and nursed him back to health.

In the spring the fish set out down stream for a summer's wandering. That fall he came finning his way against the current back into the reservoir.

Billy is appreciative of attention, Barrett said. Scratching of his sides and back and occasional rubs on his nose will win favor with the pickerel, specially if they are accompanied by an occasional frog or other tasty fish tidbit.

"Scar Face" shows a great dislike for carp and continually fought with them when quartered in a small pond where the "leather-backs" were kept. The pickerel has immense teeth, sloping backward, and has been known to successfully hold his own in combat with muskrats and beavers.

When Barrett rescued "Scar Face Billy" eight years ago the fish weighed two and a half pounds. Since that time he has grown until he now tips the beam at seventeen and three-quarter pounds and measures thirty-three and a quarter inches in length.

How Fat Actress Was Made Slim

Many stage people now depend entirely upon Marmola Prescription Tablets for reducing and controlling fat. One clever actress tells that she reduced steadily and easily by using this new form of the famous Marmola Prescription, and now, by taking Marmola Prescription Tablets several times a year keeps her weight just right. All good druggists sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at one dollar for a box, or if you prefer, you can secure them direct from the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. If you have not tried them do so. They are harmless and effective.

TAKE NO RISKS.

Don't risk standing on tables and chairs to dust your walls. Have long-handled mops—they are much easier to operate and much less hazardous.

NO PROSPECTS LOWER PRICE ON HARD COAL

Mr. F. H. Dobbin Suggests Means of Getting Alberta Coal Into Ontario.

(By F. H. DOBBIN)

Following the settlement of the strike of the men engaged in the anthracite coal fields of the Union, and the getting to work on production of coal, it was understood that further conference and discussion would ensue, with the probability that in the near future the consumer might look for some reduction in the prices (now at the peak) as charged for coal. Such will not be the case—operators, miners and brokers, railroads and trainmen will not let go of anything they now have and hold.

In this connection it is interesting to look at what Governnor Pinchot Pennsylvania), has to say after six weeks of continuous effort, thus: "Since the coal strike was settled at September 1st, I have taken up the question of price in a series of conferences with the members of a committee of the operators. On Friday last, this committee finally declined to recommend to the coal industry that it should clean its own house of extortion, as I have been urging it to do.

We do not have to prove the existence of abuses in the anthracite industry or of crying injustice to the consumer with extortionate prices. They are matters of common knowledge. It would have been merely the most elementary commonsense for the committee of operators to take these evils in hand. Being the producers of the coal, they have the power to do so efficiently and effectually.

They could, if they would, not only give the business a square deal, but at the same time free the industry from public condemnation, which now rests upon it. They have declined to do so. Then we must turn elsewhere.

We may accept the statement as above and give up all hope of getting hard coal at any reduction in price below the rates now existing. The local dealer has little, or nothing to do with the charges outside his own immediate field. He accepts the coal as it comes to him. It is admitted that the grade is inferior to that supplied some years ago, for mines at that time not in the field of supply have been opened and the product passed out to those who most have hard coal fuel. The amount of unburnable trash in the coal of today is astonishing.

We may deceive ourselves, from month to month, but in the near future Ontario province has to look for other sources of supply. Coal from Alberta has been brought in and trial given. Hard coal was ever a luxury, and having been brought up on it we are all loath to do without. It is conceded, after trial, that the Alberta coal will make for us a fine winter fuel, once we have adapted ourselves to its use. Some inconveniences and carefulness at first, but gradually we shall become accustomed. But the one obstacle to getting this fuel into our cellars at a less price than we pay for the hard coal is a matter of freight charges. Not only has the Alberta coal to bear the cost of rail transportation from the mines to Ontario, but the coal has to pay, in freight expenses, for sending the empty cars back again. And that cost will be (it is locked up in the rates as now quoted), fully one-half the haulage expense from the mines to the East.

If we could fill the cars with manufactured goods, for the North West and for export across the Pacific ocean, a freight rate of an entirely different amount could be made. But it will be many years before the West will make us of so much of our manufactured products, for there is competition to face from across the lines. And if we have failed to secure a favorable freight rate over either of the rail organizations, we may at least consider what a similar situation brought about as a remedy.

The trouble is that the Alberta mine operators own mines but do not own a railroad. If they can't own a rail line they might at least strive to own a piece of one. Two things are essential, cars to load the coal into and power to haul it and rails to run over. Suppose they decide to own the cars, (buy or build), possibly own locomotives, and arrange for running rights over the lines that tap the coal fields?

These owners have an investment in the mines, but a very uncertain market. To broaden this market they must make some exertion. Increase the capital involved and put the proceeds into coal cars of best capacity and adequately built for quick handling. One source of objection from the rail lines would be removed. The restrictions that the railroad puts on the coal shipper would vanish. It would only be a question of haulage and delivery at destination.

It is quite possible, that once the coal operators had the necessary cars, that a competition as to rates might ensue. Coal could be routed by the Canadian National Line, over all Canadian route. Or it could be routed south through the States to Chicago, there to find the National Line of rails into Ontario. The C.P.R. could afford running rights, and such would be made subject to the Canadian Railway Board. Even if the question of owning the locomotives was left out of consideration, the fact that the operators could load and send forward at will would ensure a steady supply. The season for shipping would have to be worked out, that in summer the quota coming forward could be disposed of locally to all who could buy and store in cellars.

Years ago, what has been suggested, is exactly what happened in the dead meat trade, the old business and latterly in the fruit business in the United States. The packers, at Chicago, finding things very unsatisfactory, bought and equipped their own cars. Icing in transit had ever been a vexatious problem. Now it is all arranged. The packers use refrigerator cars or do their own icing. We see whole trains of forty and fifty freight cars, rolling along the tracks of the late Grand Trunk, to sea board at Quebec or Portland, every car marked "Swift," "Armour," or other familiar name. The oil companies, in self defense had to supply cars and tank cars for their own use. The millions of barrels of gasoline, now being distributed is handled in tank cars owned by the producers and refining interests.

Why cannot something similar be worked out in the Western coal shipment? It would pay Ontario in large amount to have Alberta coal brought in freely. Once that is done the price of hard coal will drop. The hard coal operators have said so, and that they will not relinquish the Ontario market without a struggle. But as we must make the change from hard to Alberta coal some time, why not soon as possible? Once freely in use it will come to be preferred, for so long as the quality is kept up, it will prove to be all burnable fuel, and not a mixture such as is now offered.

PEAR BLIGHT MUST BE CAREFULLY CUT

Disease Threatens Many Orchards And Can Be Eradicated Only By Pruning.

Pear blight is caused by microscopic bacteria spread by insects from diseased wood to healthy shoots and blossoms where it grows and develops beneath the bark. For this reason spraying as a control is worthless. The only remedy is to cut out the infected parts.

Treatment Recommended

During the winter, at pruning all infected parts should be removed. The symptoms of this disease are: on the trunk or branches a blackish color of the bark; on twigs discoloration and shrivelling; also probably some leaves will still be attached. To make sure that the blackened areas on the trunk are really caused by blight take a knife and cut down the bark. If there is a reddish or brown appearance beneath the surface, the trouble is blight. Unless these infected parts are removed the disease will spread very rapidly and in two or three years at the most the tree will be dead or useless. In the meantime if left this tree is serving as a source of infection to all healthy pear and apple trees in the vicinity.

Pruning Tools Should Be Disinfected

The bacteria winter over at the lower margin of the infection, and while the trees are dormant cuts can be safely made two inches below the diseased part without the necessity of disinfecting the tools. If the trunk has become infected, the whole tree should be removed. Once growth begins, cuts must be made six to eight inches below any outward signs of injury. At this time the pruning tools must be disinfected thoroughly after each cut with corrosive sublimate, 1-1,000. (See Bul. 257, Ontario Dept. of Agriculture.)

Conditions In Spring

In the spring, insects and ants particularly feed on the exudate caused by the bacteria and then carry it to the flowers and from there the disease is spread by honey seeking insects; 10,000 bacteria could find room on a pin-head, and each is capable of increasing to a million or more in 24 hours. Shortly after infection takes place the blossom spurs will wilt and droop. Go through the orchard again after blossoming and break off with the hands all such drooped parts before the disease can penetrate to the main branches.

Control Is Only By Prevention

Control therefore is only by prevention. Cut out all infected areas during the dormant period. Again after blossoming break off all drooped spurs and remove any later infections. Disinfect the tools with corrosive sublimate 1-1,000 after each cut. Burn all infected branches and cultivate just sufficiently to keep the tree in moderate vigor.

KING TOREADOR DIES A BEGGAR

Downfall of Don Tancredo, Once Famous Bull Fighter, Caused by Woman.

MADRID, Nov. 27.—Forgotten by all, mourned by few, Don Tancredo has just passed away in a small and unhealthy room in a little wayside street of the capital. Don Tancredo was not a mem ber of the revolutionary party which has set itself the task of rendering Spain more prosperous, nor was he even concerned in the revolution. Governments and parties succeeded each other in the peninsula without ever awakening any interest in politics on the part of Don Tan redo. Yet several years ago and for many years he was famous throughout the world. Such fame made him a rich man, but unable to handle the large sums of money which came his way, Tancredo died the death of a beggar.

Tancredo's activities in the bull ring made him famous, but the appearance of a woman impersonator, like in many other circumstances of life, brought about his downfall. Tancredo was not a toreador in the true sense of the word and yet he braved scores of bulls in his short career and never once did he even suffer so much as a scratch nor did he ever attend the putting to death of any bull. Despite this his fame became so great in Spain that the only title appropriate to his actions which was considered high enough for him was that of "King of the Brave." Bull fight managers spent huge sums of money to have Tancredo appear in their ring, while his act alone netted him 5,000 pesetas for 10 minutes work.

Never Attempted Display

Contrary to toreadors he never entered the ring flashing bright red banners, nor did he in any way attempt to "stick" a bull purposely made ferocious. His success was scored by the remarkable way he was able to stand motionless in the middle of the ring and intently watch the infuriated animal dash for him.

While his companions did their best to madden the bull in a penned enclosure, Don Tancredo, dressed in white from head to foot, his face even thickly covered with white flour and carrying no weapons, would march into the ring amidst loud applause from the crowded arena and take up a position in the center, his eyes turned to a fence gate to his right from which a big savage bull would emerge. As the animal dashed out galloping wildly at the only person in sight, Tancredo, stiff as a statute, would turn his eyes in the animal's direction. In no way did he attempt to protect himself.

With the bull but a few inches from him Tancredo did not as much as wink his eye—he dared not. Crowds in the galleries hushed to silence fixedly watched the action of both man and beast. When almost ready to plunge at the motionless figure the bull would slowly begin to retreat, scared by the fixed gaze into its own eyes.

Woman Rival Appears

Other tore dors would then enter the ring and waving their red banners begin to attract the bull's attention, while Tancredo would majestically retire to the dressing room His performance for that day was finished. His popularity began to wane when rivals appeared in arenax in other parts of the country and attempted to imitate his act. None succeeded and probably Tancredo's success would have continued had not the appearance of a woman emulator caused the authorities to take action and suppress the act, not so much because Dona Tancreda, as the woman called herself, was thrown at times, but because the tearing of her clothes caused the prudes to complain.

Don Tancredo was then reduced to giving lectures throughout the country, but after one successful tour he found that his former admirers rapidly lost interest and being unable to gain admission into a ring as a toreador, chiefly because he was not trained, he returned to Madrid to lead a life of misery and despair.

STORED ONIONS.

Onions should be kept in a dry storeroom, for if they are stored in a damp place they will give out sprouts too early.

ONLY ONE MEDICINE FOR ME

That is Verdict of Mr. H. Brady, Who Declares Dreco Has Put Him in the Best Health He Has Known for Years.

"For the past few months," says Mr. H. Brady of 540 Aylmer street, Peterborough, Ont., "I have been in a run-down condition. I had a continual tired, worn-out feeling and I didn't seem to have the energy that I previously had. My work was an effort to me.

"My appetite was poor and the food I ate gave me indigestion. I couldn't sleep very well and was losing weight. Constipation was a source of continual trouble also.

"I took several so-called health builders, but nothing did me any good until I tried Dreco. This grand remedy sure went right to the spot. I have only taken one bottle so far, but I feel fine. That tired feeling has left me entirely and I can do my work with more ease.

"My appetite is great. I can eat and enjoy anything that comes my way and have no trouble whatever with my stomach. My bowels are regular every day. I feel just great all the time and have already gained several pounds in weight."

Let Dreco tone and strengthen your system and build it back to normal health. It benefits all the organs of digestion and purifies the blood. Dreco is safe and reliable, being made solely from herbs, roots, bark and leaves It contains no mercury, potash or habit-forming drugs.

VETERAN ATHLETE RELIES ON DRECO

Mr. Henry Riley Gets Wonderful Result From One Bottle of Famous Herbal Remedy And Joins the Throng of Peterborough People Who Are Finding Health the Dreco Way.

"My husband in his younger days was quite a football player," says Mrs. Henry Riley of 240 Carlisle street, Peterborough, Ont. "In the course of one of his games, he strained a cord in one of his legs. It seemed to get all better and didn't bother him for years. Then, about two years ago, he had a bad fall which laid him up for some time. After he got around again, rheumatism set in his leg where he had strained it years before and it became so bad that he couldn't get around without the aid of a cane.

"He tried many kinds of medicines, but got very little relief. Finally one day he read of Dreco and decided to give it a trial. Would you believe me when I say that Mr. Riley has only taken one bottle, but is already well on the road to recovery. He is feeling so much better in every way and can get around much easier than for a long time. We are both fully convinced that Dreco is a wonderful medicine and that it will fix him right up."

Rheumatism is defied by a strong healthy system. It, like all other diseases, finds lodging in the weak spots as, in the case of Mr. Riley, an all but forgotten injury which, though perfectly healed, still lacked the full strength and vigour to repel the invader. Dreco, by its natural properties, is giving the added strength needed to fight off this rheumatism. Let it help you by strengthening your entire system in the same way. Dreco is purely herbal and contains no mercury, potash or habit-forming drugs.

HAS IMPLICIT FAITH

Dreco's Corrective Properties Make Wonderful Impression on Peterborough Sufferer, Convincing Him Of Its True Merit as a System Builder. Health and Strength Return Rapidly With Dreco's Help.

Mr. Robert A. Bell of 275 Sherwood street, Peterborough, gives his happy experience with Dreco, the famous herbal health-builder. "My stomach, liver and bowels have given me no end of trouble during the past few years and I couldn't get a thing that gave me any relief. My appetite was poor and my food would lie on my stomach like a lump of lead, making my stomach so sore that I could hardly stoop over. I would get such severe dizzy spells that sometimes I would have to catch hold of something to steady myself. I was also troubled with rheumatism across my shoulders and shoulder blades.

"Although I am only on my second bottle of Dreco, I am much improved already. My appetite picked up from the very start until now I can eat most anything and very rarely do I feel any after-effects. The soreness has also gone from my stomach and those dizzy spells have ceased. The pains in my shoulders don't bother me nearly so much.

"Before taking Dreco, my bowels seemed as though they were locked. I would have to take about four times the usual quantity of ordinary laxatives, but now I am regular every day.

"I am going to keep on with Dreco for a while, as I feel I am now on the right road to complete recovery of my former good health."

Dreco will cleanse your system and strengthen all the vital organs of digestiin. The action of its pure herb, root, bark and leaf juices assure this. Its work is accomplished in a natural, healthy way, because Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit-forming drugs.

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

Dreco Loses No Time in Relieving Disorders That Were Making Life Miserable for Peterborough Lady. Three Bottles of This Grand Remedy Have Restored To Her the Health of Youth.

"For over a year," says Mrs. A. Hunter of Louis street, Peterborough, Ont., "I have been a victim of stomach trouble. The food I ate would ferment and form gas that would press up against my heart and make me miserable. I would have severe pains in the pit of my stomach and suffered great distress from nausea. My appetite was very poor and naturally my whole system became weakened through lack of nourishment.

"My kidneys were out of order and I would get severe pains across my back as a result. I became so badly troubled with constipation that I had to take a laxative every night.

"I tried about everything I heard of in the way of medicine, but got no relief. Finally, I read about Dreco and, impressed by the sincerity of the people who praised it, decided to give it a trial. I have only taken three bottles, but they have completely relieved my troubles.

"I have a splendid appetite and can eat anything without any trouble afterwards. My kidneys are in fine shape, too, and I haven't a pain of any kind. My bowels, too, are regular as a clock. In fact, I feel like a new woman and am glad to recommend Dreco to anyone who suffers as I did."

Rid yourself of symptoms that sap your health and strength. Most of them are directly traceable to faulty digestion. Dreco corrects this fault quickly and pleasantly and the whole body benefits as a result. Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit-forming drugs, being a purely herbal remedy made in scientific, daylight laboratories.

Facts About Dreco

Dreco is a vegetable compound composed of the most beneficial roots and herbs known. It is free from mercury, potash, iron, acids, oil or habit-forming drugs.

Dreco is publicly endorsed through the press by men and women of prominence in their communities.

Ministers of the Gospel take Dreco themselves and recommend it to their parishioners.

Demand for Dreco has broken all records for this length of time.

Absolute merit responsible for this unprecedented success.

LOST WEIGHT RAPIDLY

Mr. Powell, Much Alarmed at His Condition, Tried Dreco and Soon Finds Himself on Highroad to Perfect Health Again.

"For sometime past I had been in a run-down condition," says Mr. G. M. Powell of 10 Lundy's Lane, Peterborough, Ont. "Although I had always taken the best of care of myself, I was rapidly losing weight. I had a tired, worn-out feeling that I couldn't rid myself of and my appetite was poor. What little I did eat caused intense suffering from indigestion and gas formations on my stomach gave me great distress.

"My kidneys were out of order, too, and nothing I took seemed to do either them or my stomach any good. Finally, I heard about Dreco and the splendid work it was doing right here in Peterborough. I have taken two bottles of this great remedy and have improved wonderfully. Have already increased my weight and that tired feeling has disappeared.

"What is more to the point, my food digests without the slightest trouble. My appetite is a joy to me and my kidneys are in much better shape than they have been for a long time."

The human body is the most delicate piece of machinery there is. It takes very little to put it out or order. Often you are at a loss to know the cause. You only know the effect, which is suffering. That is the time to let Dreco, the pure herbal system cleanser and rectifier, help you. Dreco contains no mercury, potash or habit-forming drugs.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. Go there to-day and ask for Mr. Vaughan, the Dreco Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Dreco will benefit you. Dreco is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, in Campbellford by J. E. Birks, and by a good druggist everywhere.

The Teachers' Convention

At the Teachers Convention here on Friday last, President M. H. Park gave the following interesting paper on professional technique.

It is with some hesitation that I attempt to deal with this subject before a group of experienced teachers—a company of professionals. What I have prepared seems to me to savour somewhat of advice to beginners, and I do not wish to waste your time by referring to points which are familiar enough to you. However, there is usually some good in everything, and I hope that you will separate the wheat from the chaff, and find something which may be of use to you.

Professional technique may be summed up as the fine points of the art of teaching and management. It is the basis of successful teaching. It marks the trained teacher from the clumsy beginner. It is not acquired in a few weeks, or in a few months. It comes as the result of many successes, and failures and the good teacher, the earnest enthusiastic teacher always strives to improve in technique.

I wish to group my remarks under two headings—those dealing with actual teaching—and those dealing with management and discipline. Let us look first at the technique of teaching. The foundation of a good day's work is a well-balanced timetable. In this there cannot be much "give and take". Many an otherwise successful day's teaching is partly spoiled by too much enthusiasm in some subjects and too little in others. Rarely is there an excuse for running a lesson over-time at the expense of another subject, and never at the expense of recess periods or time after school hours.

Good technique in teaching means careful preparation of work and much for thought. The smoothness of the lesson, and its success depend on what you do before. There should not be too much anxious thought on details, as this may lead to a stilted lesson which is just as bad as one that is ill-prepared. It also means the ability to handle any contingency that may arise—the unusual questions—the side-channel—the back water into which the main stream of a lesson any lead at a moment's notice, and the art of leading the lesson back skillfully, into the proper channels.

The preparation of materials is most important in the eyes of good technician. A good artist will not work without carefully prepared materials, the skilful carpenter must have the right tools, the skilled worker in any occupation cannot do his best best without proper materials. One who excels in the technique of teaching will not have a lesson interrupted for the purpose of finding something which should have been at hand. One might perhaps say, just here, that we often do not have access to the materials necessary. To a certain extent that may be true, but it might not be out of place to ask whether we always make the best and most complete use of the materials to which we do have excess? I think perhaps we are inclined at times to do without things which may be obtained with very little troubles.

In the technique of the class lesson we come to what is possible the most important point of all—the art of questioning. The skill of the teacher is shown best in the ability to question properly. Inattention and carelessness in a class is more often than not due to indefinite, careless, lifeless "lackadaisical" questioning. There is a whole science in this one part of actual teaching. It is the foundation of the lesson. This is where the experts obtains economy of time and effort combined with the best results. Expert questioning means careful thought on the part of the teacher, and it calls for the same thing on the part of the pupil—while the reverse is true; clumsy, careless questioning means clumsy careless thinking.

It is poor technique to talk too much. They say that talkativeness is a sign of the oncoming of old age. Well, I am afraid some of us are prone to age very quickly if the amount we say in the class room is taken as the judge. As a rule, we all say far too much. Do we get results? Did you ever check up, at once, the results of a first-class "talking" lesson, or a "talking" day? If you haven't try it some time, and perhaps you will be surprised. Often the energy expended would be put to far better advantage in getting the class to talk. Much talking most emphatically does not necessarily mean good teaching.

Tha brings me to another aspect of class work—the study period. What place and importance does a good technician in teaching give to the study period? Perhaps opinions will differ on this. You are all more or less familiar with the modern movement toward independent work on the part of the pupils as illustrated in the Dalton plan. I most sincerely believe that it is a move in the right direction. I think that we are narrowly conscientious to our disadvantage and that of the class in believing that no work is being done unless we are telling or questioning. Just as much can be done, just as good results obtained in the study—period as in the teaching period, and this applies to a one-class room just as well as to the two-class room or the ungraded school, where study periods are a necessity. Good technique in this regard is shown on the teacher's part in the class that knows how to spend a half-hour usefully in intelligent study. Cannot more be done with great advantage along this line? Can your class read two pages of a text book, quietly, persistently, and get anything out of them? Can they summarize? Can they conduct a review for themselves?

Is it necessary to mention the use of good English as a necessary part of the equipment of a good technician in the art of teaching? Perhaps the most common error in this regard consists in paying attention to language in the composition or literature lesson only. But every lesson demands correct English, and ought to get it. No one is perfect in speaking or writing. There is always room for improvement. The use of correct English on the part of the teacher has a wonderful influence on the child's language work.

The assignment of homework is another important point. You might ask, "What has that to do with the technique of teaching?" Well, I, for one, think it has a great deal to do with it. There was a false alarm a little while ago to the effect that homework was about to be abolished. I don't believe any right-thinking teacher, or parent either, for that matter, would advocate the complete abolition of homework in the higher grades of the Public school at least, and certainly not in the Collegiate. A certain amount is necessary, and it requires some skill to estimate just how much to give, and the nature of the assignment. In the first place the amount must be that which the average pupil can do in the time alloted for his particular grade. In the second place, it must be something which you can test thoroughly either orally or in writing. I believe that an indefinite assignment is worse than nothing, worse than useless, because there is a danger that much of the thoroughness of class work will be undone in the carelessness of homework. Unless a pupil has been exceptionally well-trained in habits of independent, intelligent, conscientious study, what is the use of assigning for example so many sections or pages of history or geography, or a selection in literature? It goes without saying that there should always be an insistent demand for complete and thorough homework, and also that it should be checked up, in the most minute manner, by the teacher. There is as much technique in discipline and management as in actual instruction. Technique n this regard includes skill in character reading, diplomacy, tact, and above all the ability to look upon everything that concerns management from a positive rather than a negative standpoint. In what way is good technique shown in regard to this latter point? It is shown in the cultivation of a good class spirit by the use of rewards, contests, honor rolls and the other devices along that line with which you are all familiar.

Perhaps you will not agree with me, but I should like to put the necessity of a good sense of humor as second only in importance to what I have already mentioned. The good technician in school discipline allows continual freeplay to a sense of humor. To use a very slang expression, the art of "kidding" pupils along is a most useful one, provided there is at no time, any tendency to use sarcasm. Many a tense moment, many a dangerous situation has been got safely through by looking at the humorous side of things rather than the serious, for there is a humorous side to nearly everything in the class room. It is a rare thing to find a pupil entirely devoid of a sense of humor, and so it is an unfailing resource in time of trouble. A teacher with no sense of humor is to be pitied. I think his work would be doubly difficult. We can always take things too seriously.

It is good technique to look on school from a business standpoint. The school is not a place of entertainment, nor a playground, and I am afraid we are too prone, in these modern time to view it from the wrong angle. The eternal striving to amuse, to please, to occupy the time of school perpetually with pleasant things in the long run can have nothing more or less than a most damaging effect on the character of boys and girls. We continually harp on that old hackneyed phrase "School is a preparation for life,' and no one has ever yet made a success of life by trying to make it one continual round of entertainment.

It is certainly poor technique, and to a great extent a waste of time and effort to be working continually after hours. Punctuality is just as much a necessity at four o'clock as at nine. As a rule, other places of business don't keep open after hours. Why should the school? Begin on time—close on time. Business in business hours is a very good motto for the school. The question naturally arises—"What are you going to do with the pupil whose work for the day is not done?" Will the fact that he will not be "kept in" after four be an incentive for him to skimp his work? Well, what is wrong with requiring him to have the extra work done before nine o'clock the next morning? If he has to forfeit part of his regular leisure time as well as his time for ordinary homework, he will not be long in seeing the value of paying attention to business in school hours. It is most emphatically no sign of any lack of interest on the part of the teacher that he aims at making his after four periods as few as possible. The same applies to recess periods. Personally, I cannot see anything good in recess detentions for any purpose whatever. Many pupils are quite glad to spend fifteen minutes indoors, while they should be outside getting some recreation. It is, at any rate, a very poor sort of punishment, and the purpose of the recess period is not the making up for time lost in the regular class hours.

The next point I wish to make may be a matter for dispute. I believe (and I think that many others do also) that a rather considerable amount of formality is necessary in the class room. I do not mean that type of formality which sets up and keeps an artificial situation between you and your pupils, but rather that type which keeps you at just a little distance from your class, which keeps a certain amount of reserve on the part of the teacher. It is the easiest thing in the world to "loosen up" with your class, and the hardest thing to recover the necessary formality. Most pupils are waiting to take like lightning the offer of getting on good terms with the teacher. On your part, it is taking a perilous chance, because there is a danger that you may forfeit some of that respect which is the foundation of good discipline.

If respect is the foundation of discipline, what is another most necessary attribute? I think good technique in management requires next a readiness for all eventualities. The teacher's authority may be questioned at an instant's notice, and he must be absolute master of any situation. A business man had this motto over his desk: "Irregular things happen regularly". There is no place where that is more likely to apply than in the class room. A storm will blow up very suddenly sometimes. A class is merciless with the one who hesitates or shows any sign of weakness or indecision. A bold front carries the day usually, no matter what inner feeling or nervousness you may have. We are often told that "preparedness" is one of the essentials of success. Did you ever work out imaginary difficult situations in the line of discipline? Have some unexpected cure for the unexpected situation.

It is good technique to have a number of hard and fast rules? Personally, I don't think so. I believe a few are absolutely necessary, and that they should be understood once and for all at the beginning of the term and no neglect of them should be allowed. They should be as absolute as the laws of the Medes and Persians. For the rest, I think an appeal to a pupil's common sense, and idea of fair play will be quite sufficient. Too many "don'ts" cannot be regarded as good technique. I think you will agree with me that very poor technique (if it can be called technique at all) is shown in the threat, or what is infinitely worse, the repeated threat, and along with that continual nagging. A sullen, careless, lifeless class is the only possible result of such tactics.

It is a good thing to make the most of a punishment when it has to be inflicted. The more impressive it is, the less severe it has to be. It is better to be wary of public reproof. The latter is necessary only when some useful purpose is to be secured, a thing which rarely happens.

There are two more points which I think are concerned equally with teaching and management. They are closely related to each other. One is the avoidance of hurry and the other is the conservation of energy. There is a way of making haste leisurely and without any ostentation, and it is the way which counts most in teaching and discipline. Unnecessary movements, fussiness, continual worrying about the most minute details are especially bad in the class room, because they do use up surplus energy (if we have any) most amazingly. You have no right to tire yourself out every teaching day in the year. It is unselfishness carried to a foolish degree to use up energy in the class room in a prodigal manner. Reserve the process. Get the energy out of the class, not yourself.

The question of surplus energy brings me to my last point. How can we expect to do our best work unless we feel physically fit? I don't believe there is any profession where it is more necessary for one to spend much of his free time out of doors in some sort of useful exercise. I believe we ought to do more in that line. We neglect physical training with regard to ourselves and perhaps with regard to our pupils. We are even content sometimes to teach in overheated stuffy rooms, and wonder why our class is restless, forgetting in the interest of a lesson to pay attention to the simplest rules of health that ought to be followed in the class room.

What is or should be the great incentive to become an artist in the teaching profession, to be a master of its technique? When all is said and done I suppose it is enthusiasm that counts most—enthusiasm and a cheerful spirit. There is no marking time in the teaching profession—we must go forward or back. In these days when there are so many changes in the sphere of education, when old ideas are being challenged, when things are moving so tremendously, when the teaching profession is attaining a rank and an independence never dreamed of in days gone by, surely we should have an inventive to progress in which lies the secret of satisfaction and contentment in our work.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain—How To Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

TORONTO GIRL GOT CONTRACT

The American Sheik Was T the Chairman of Judging Committee.

NEW YORK, November 29. Canadian Press. — A Canadian girl, "Miss Toronto," to-day is the queen of the Ities of the American continent. She as declared the winner in a contest eld in Madison Square Garden, in hich a committee of judges awarded her the crown as the most beautiful of eighty seven entrants from as many cities.

The chairman of the Judging committee was Rudolph Velentino, but he did not cast a vote.

"I am leaving the decision to the judges and the public," he declared.

"Miss Toronto's" real name, according to the announcement made to newspaper men at the Garden, is Norma Niblock, of 105 Westmount Avenue, Toronto, and she is sixteen years old.

She sauntered out on the enormous black circular stage upon which the beauties were displayed in a blue velvet street frock, that was in odd contrast to the other beauties, glittering in evening gowns and heavy marceles.

"Miss New York," who took third prize, caused some sensation. Although entered under the name of Reba Owens, she was recognized by dozens of society friends in the audience as Reba Chisholm, intimate friend of Mrs. Thelma Converse, who is Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt's twin sister.

Miss Chisholm and Miss Niblock were the only entrants of the eighty eight whose cheeks were innocent of rouge.

Last night's affair cast some light on the mystery of the drawing power of New York's girl-and-music shows. Thousands of persons not only each paid $5.50 to see the eighty eight beauties parade around the platform but actually stayed until long after midnight, when Valentino placed the rhinestone crown over "Miss Toronto's" black curls.

In addition to the crown and a large silver cup, Miss Niblock received a movie contract for work abroad said by the gentleman who bestowed information upon the press, to be worth $30,000.

The four arrested on Wednesday night were Caesar Drouillard, 34 years old, Fred Laforet, 30, both of Riverside; Mrs. Chloe Tugger, 36 years old, and Mrs. Bella Lucier, 24, both of Windsor. The women are sisters, and are charged with receiving silks and satins stolen from the railways. The men are held on charges of stealing from the railways and receiving stolen goods.

GAVE LECTURE IN THE LYCEUM

Rev. Leo. O'Reilly Illustrated Address on "Lourdes" With Slides

The illustrated lecture on "Lourdes," given by Rev. Leo O'Reilly, D.D., professor at St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, under the auspices of the Sodality of the Sacred Heart church, in the lecture hall at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum last evening, attracted a fair-sized audience, and proved to be one of the most interesting lectures given in the Lyceum in recent years. Dr. O'Reilly, whose address was illustrated by a quantity of excellent slides, showing the geography and background of the grotto where, in 1858, the apparition of the Blessed Mother of God appeared to little Bernadette Soubrioux and where, since that time, countless hundreds of miracles have been performed, has twice visited the sacred shrine, in 1913 and during the summer of last year, and was himself, in company with thousands of others, the witness of a complete cure of a supposedly dying cripple, whose skeleton form, rising from the stretcher where it lay with face covered, almost in its last agony, to stumble in its swathing bandages, after the Blesed Sacrament which had just been raised above it in benediction, was described in such graphic fashion as to place before his hearers the wonderful spectacle witnessed by the priest and the multitude of men and women who stood around.

Lourdes in 1858.

In the south of France, in the foothills of the Pyrenees, with its 7,000 inhabitants, its 7,000 foot altitude above sea level, its seven valleys meeting in confluence, lay in 1858 the small town of Lourdes, where, against the rugged mountain side, stood the grotto, twelve by sixteen feet in diameter, where little Bernadette, the poor, pious, fourteen-year old shepherdess of the Pyrenees, came daily to recite her rosary, and where she had the vision which revealed to her on eighteen successive days, the apparition of the Blessed Virgin Mary. The eldest of six children, Bernadette was a frail, asthma-stricken child, amiable, modest, meek and humble, of meagre mentality, but possessing outstanding virtue and religious devotion.

Father O'Reilly described the appearance, as related by the child herself, who recorded the Blessed Lady's commands to "pray for sinners" and "to go, drink and wash at the spring." Bernadette scooped out the sand of the grotto with her hand, from which sprung a branch of living water, with a capacity of 1,122 gallons per hour.

Bernadette, who suffered much persecution thereafter from civil, atheistic authorities, persisted in her efforts to interest ecclesiastical forces in followng out the command of the Blessed Lady to erect a chapel in her honor, and, from subscriptions that were received from millions of the faithful, not a chapel, but a magnificent basilica, was finally erected on the top of the rock near the grotto. Bernadette, as Sister Mary Bernard, a member of the Sisterhood of Nevers, died, after a life of physical suffering, at the age of 33, on April 16th, 1879.

Procession of Pilgrims.

In the sixty years since the apparition appeared to the girl, an endless procession of pilgrims has visited Lourdes, among them, as the priest observed, many who came to scoff. "Pickpockets who came to Lourdes to prey on the faithful," he remarked, "may be seen, perhaps a day or so later, making the Way of the Cross by the beautiful Stations which mark its passage, barefoot, with tears of penance streaming down their faces." One man, an English physician from London, Dr. Cook, an atheist who proclaimed himself, with a party of other men, as on the way to "the big show," became a convert, and now passes his life at Lourdes, giving his time and attention free to the examination of cures, which come under a rigid medical scrutiny before they are finally passed as authentic.

In 1908, more than two million pilgrims visited the shrine, and the beautiful trio of churches which surmount the rock in whose vast expanses there are erected nearly two hundred altars. Glimpses of the interiors of these wonderful buildings were shown; the Church of the Holy Rosary, a Byzantine structure, one huge dome in extent, built at a cost of $600,000, where Masses are celebrated from midnight on until the afternoon, by special dispensation; the Crypt, the second magnificent church, and the Basilica itself, a wonderful Gothic structure, where tablets in every language under the sun commemorate the gratitude of cured pilgrims.

The pure white crowned marble statue of the Blessed Mother was shown; the baths where the waters from the sacred spring are available for those who wish to be immersed, and where, in 1908, no less than 131,000 people took advantage of their healing power.

Universal Prayer.

"No shrine in all the world, outside of the Holy Land, holds the human heart like the black rocks of Lourdes," declared the speaker, who went on to describe the religious exercises which take place here daily, in the presence of the vast multitudes of pilgrims who throng from every section of the world, in attendance on every known form of cripple and diseased, making the pilgrimage in hope of cure. When a cure is affected, there is no rush or thronging, according to Father O'Reilly. The thousands who have witnesed it simply stand and sing in unison the strains of the Magnificat, and to all in the vicinity the bursting forth of this magnificent canticle is the sign that once more, a pilgrim to Lourdes has been vindicated in faith and expectation. At the procession of the Blessed Sacrament, also during the afternoon, the countless thousands join with one voice in the uplifted supplications of the sick ones, crying to God from thousands of throats in loud voice for the gift of sight or strength or healing, as the relatives of the sufferers bow in turn before the upraised Host, and audibly invoke the Creator for mercy and help.

A picture of Ernestine Guilloteat was shown, the girl whose cure was termed the "resurrection of 1908," who weighed just fifty and one-half pounds when she was brought unconscious to Lourden, with the companion picture, as a normal woman, two years later, and the pictures of a Frenchman was shown, a complete physical wreck, able to be fed through a tube just once a day, paralyzed from the waist down, and with feet beginning to mortify when his mother brought him to the Shrine. This man, scarcely breathing, with a cloth placed over his mouth, so that the sight of the last agony would not perturb the poor sufferers about him, suddenly rose in his place and stumbled after the Host, cured. Sixty doctors, many unbelievers among them, sat in solemn conclave in considertaion of this cure, which was covered by a special reporter from the London Times. The speaker referred to the rigid investigation carried on by the clinic of doctors at Lourdes, after a cure has been performed. A patient coming to a shrine must bring with him or her a complete diagnosis of his case from every physician who has ever attended the sufferer. A detailed account of this is kept, and if a cure is effected, a council of learned physicians, numbering representatives of every religion, some of them atheists, examine it from every angle. If there is any suggestion of Coueism or psychic-therapy, the case is not considered an authentic cure, nor are nervous disorders admitted as authentic at any time. Only after a year, when the patient is obliged to present himself or herself for re-examination, is the recovery considered as complete and a final cure. More than 4,000 authentic cures, attested by doctors from all over the world, are now registered at the shrine.

Lancashire Pilgrims.

Father O'Reilly spoke of the outstanding devotion of the pilgrims who come to Lourdes, and particularly of the pilgrims from Lancashire, some 1,500 of whom went together last year, led by the Bishop of Liverpool, and whose piety, rivalling that of the French themselves, formed one of the most magnificent spectacles ever seen at the shrine.

A torchlight procession, with two people walking abreast in a line which includes sometimes as many as 30,000 pilgrims, each bearing a torch, closes the day's devotions. After nine o'clock in the evening, absolute silence is enforced at the grotto, but far into the night, pilgrims come to pray and watch alone.

Several exquisite views of the life of the Saviour closed the presentation, which was followed with rapt attention from an enthralled audience. Rev. Father Butler, who acted as chairman, and His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, both expressed appreciation of the eloquent lecture given by Father O'Reilly.

The Sacred Heart orchestra played very pleasingly before the lecture and during the intermissions girls from the Sacred Heart school sang choruses, including two Latin hymns, the diction and enunciation of which were the subject of compliment from the visiting speaker, who took occasion in the course of his remarks to emphasize the main outstanding impression received at Lourdes, in the devotion to the Blessed Sacrament and the Mass which animates the pilgrims, that it "is through Mary to Jesus" that the marvellous cures witnessed there are affected.

EIGHT MEN ARE NOW IN CUSTODY

Believed to Be the Bandits Who Shot Down and Robbed Two Bank Messengers of $42,607 on November 24th.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.— With eight men in custody and the plot unravelled, police to-day believe they are near the complete solution of the double crime on Nov. 24 in which two west end bank messengers were shot down without warning in a Brooklyn subway station and robbed of $43,607. And as the police unfolded, chapter by chapter, one of the most startling murder and robbery plots in the history of the city, they found it interwoven with the stories of other bold crimes, and yesterday they uncovered clues pointing to a "syndicate" of criminals. In the arrests already made the police believe they have opened the way for the solution of numerous murders, hold-ups and auto thefts committed in the past few months.

Three men alleged to have had the most important parts in the double crime are still at large, but the nation wide search for them is said to be narrowing.

ST. JOHN'S BAZAAR

One of the prettiest bazaars of the season opened yesterday afternoon in the annual Christmas sale of St. John's Church, held in the Parish House, under the auspices of the Church Women's Association, with the President, Mrs. D. Mulholland as general convenor. The formal opening by the vicar, Rev. Dr. Blagrave, took place at three o'clock, when the Chimes were rung in honor of the occasion. The bazaar continues until this evening, with afternoon tea and high tea served from six to eight o'clock. Yesterday, hundreds of people availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the bazaar and patronize the different sales, the afternoon tea tables and the supper tables, which were filled for two hours with a jolly crowd, received in hospitable fashion by Mrs. Mulholland, Dr. and Mrs. Blagrave.

The old hall lends itself admirably to decoration, and the ladies have spared no pains in their efforts to make a bright interior, by the lavish use of Christmas greens, silver tinsel and bright red paper. The hall is a bower of gay Christmas tree foliage, with the glowing note of red holly against the cool background. Overhead hang flags and pennants.

A brown teepee, ornamented with black cats, meets the enquiring visitor at the entrance. Here fortunes are told, by the light of a ghostly candle, and Mrs. C. G. Graham, Mrs. R. H Turner and Mrs. F. Rathbon, are the soothsayers At the opposite side of the hall, a green fish pond attracts the juniors Miss Mamie Boucher, assisted by Annie Heiderman has charge here.

Variety of Articles

Gaily-decorated booths, containing an astonishing variety of novel and pretty things, line both walls, with small flower-centered tea-tables occupying the middle aisle of the hall. Every sort of dainty and useful article imaginable is on sale at the attractive individual sections where different ladies, assisted by a corps of assistants, preside.

Aprons and towels in pleasing variety are sold at the booth where Mrs J. Mills has charge; there are dainty and novel things galore at Miss M. English's fancy work counter, and the cooking sale booth, presided over by the Misses Rubidge, has a unique and striking decorative scheme. Bunches of big red haw berries trim the front of the booth and overhead are suspended branches of the bright red little Canadian holly, pale pink everlastings and big whit, garlic pods Jellies and pickles and dried herbs are on view, with cookies and toothsome-looking buns.

At the kitchen booth, with Mrs. J. Comstock in charge, there are flaming red poinsettias and overhead festoons of green and red crepe paper as decorative adjunts to the pretty and useful kitchen accessories, which include black velvet kitten holders, and a Dinah twine-holder, with a brown cocoanut face wreathed by a red handkerchief. Here are dolls also, with 'flapper' looking mop heads, wooden spoon and fork bodies, chaste duster gowns, and voluminous floor-cloth shawls.

The White Elephant

Mrs. G. S. Cameron has the 'white elephant' sale, at a corner counter where numerous left-overs are on view, including a quantity of pretty china odds and ends and a duplicate whist set containing a dozen packs of cards.

There is an artistic section where cut flowers and plants are on sale, arranged in pretty fashion in big vases and cut glass pieces, on a large central mirror foundation. Flowering plants, roses, 'mums and carnations may be purchased here, where Mrs. B. Gardiner and Mrs. Arthur J. McClellan are in charge

A Christmas tree nearby is hung with holiday gifts and tiny toys and there is a large supply of dolls at the table, with its green arch, where Mrs A. H. Stratton and Miss H. Hugel preside. Mrs. Wm. Hall has the woollen and knit goods in pretty soft tones; Mrs. H. Morphet has the candy sale of home-made dainties in little individual holders, flanked by tall red candles, and Mrs. W. D. Tyrer superintends the sale of underwear, at a table where many nice things may be bought.

There is a sale of good second-hand books, in charge of Mrs. T. W. H. Young, and the Women's Auxiliary have a little table for the sale of Missionary literature, presided over by Miss Amy Halliday.

Mrs. C. L Brewer has charge of the afternoon tea tables, and the high tea served in the basement of the hall, is supervised by Mrs. A. E. Coulthard. Mrs J. A. Aylmer and Mrs. R. Denne. The ladies have taken much trouble with their high tea arrangements, and have made a very attractive interior of the large basement rooms, banked with Christmas greens and hung with red and green paper.

Musical Programme

The stage in the hall, where a continuous musical programme is given under direction of Mr. W. McKee Bingham, has been decorated with a festooned trellis work and many hanging Japanese lanterns. Mr. Bingham sang for the first time in Peterboro last night, much to the enjoyment of a pleased and appreciative audience, in duett with Miss Ethel Kennedy, singing "In Old Madrid." The entertainment, which took the form of modified tableaux included a Spanish setting, with the duett by the two singers, Miss Kennedy gowned as a Spanish lady, and Miss Lois Garrette, as a troubadour, playing a Spanish guitar obligato., Miss Kennedy sang also in lovely voice, "Matinata."

Two vocal duetts were given by Mrs. A. L. Amys and Mr. D. C. Melton; "Huntingtower," and "The Keys of Heaven"; Miss Edna Borbridge, in pretty costume of orchid and white sang "Who'll Buy My Lavender" and Mr. H. Flowers gave "The Carnival."

One of the daintiest numbers on the programme was the ever-popular "Floral Dance," sung in her usual charming fashion by Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, who also gave during its rendition a pretty dance with Jean MacDuffee. Other dancers were the Misses Horn, Lawrence, Garrette, Hutchinson'

Mr. Frederick Mann gave a pleasing pianoforte selection. Accompanists during the afternoon and evening were Miss Margaret Flowers and Miss Jean Herbison.

SAYS CIVILIZATION WAS KEPT ALIVE BY IRISH

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 29.— Assertion that much has been contributed to civilization by Ireland was made by Dr. James J. Walsh, of New York City, historian, in an address here.

"The Irish, isolated from Roman influence, and just previously converted to Christianity, were the people who took over the development of civilization, unaffected by the influence of barbarians who overran the rest of Europe."

PRESBYTERIANS AND CHURCH UNION

IN connection with this vital issue, there are some facts which you should know and think about, before you allow your church to be legislated out of existence.

DO YOU KNOW

1. There are 100,000 members of the Presbyterian Church who have never had a chance to vote on this question of Union?
2. There are thousands of our men who were overseas when the last vote was taken—the soldiers?
3. The people—who are the church—have never had a single chance to vote on the proposed Bills?

DO YOU KNOW

1. That it is now eight years since the people had a chance to vote on the question of Union?
2. That during that time:—
   - (A) The great war ended and peace was declared?
   - (B) Colossal changes have taken place in commerce, industry and society?
   - (C) Uncertainty and unrest are distracting the minds of men?
3. That the people have never had a chance to vote on the Proposed Legislation?

Considering these facts:

IT IS RIGHT

1. To force Union on the church now?
2. To ignore the new members and soldiers?
3. To pass these Bills without a vote?
4. To disrupt our ancient and beloved church?

"Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem, They shall prosper that love thee."

COLLEGIATE BEATEN AT VARSITY STADIUM

U. T. S. Ran Up Eighteen Points in the First Ten Minutes Before Peterboro Team Got Going—Bookhout Made Feature Play.

SCORE 35 TO 10.

U. T. S. .....18 6 6 5—35
Peterborough ..... 0 5 0 5—10

The Peterborough Collegiate team were eliminated from the Interscholastic race at Varsity stadium in Toronto yesterday, going down to defeat before Mike Rodden's smart University of Toronto Schools twelve by 35 points to 10. There is no disputing the fact that the better team won, although stage fright on the part of the Petes in the first period enabled the Toronto crew to pile up a bigger margin than they would have obtained under normal conditions. They had three converted touchdowns before the Peterborough gang began to hit anything like their usual stride and after that first ten minutes the going was much more even.

But U.T.S. deserved to win decisively. They were faster afoot than the Petes, tackled better, had a repertoire of smartly executed and cleverly masked plays, well protected by interference, and the fast accurate passing of thir halves was a feature. They took bett r, too, to the greasy going in the middle of the field than the visitors, who lost many a tackle by skidding in the mud. The Petes were particularly powerless in trying to stop Mike Goulding, the sensational running and plunging half who scored all but one of the U.T.S. touchdowns and was responsible for three quarters of the ground gained. Goulding was as good shooting through the line as he was in circling the end or carrying the ball through a broken field and he got away for frequent gains. Smale was also very effective on the half line and Northam, the flying wing, who did the booting for the winners, got height and distance to his punts, while U.T.S. wings were fast down under his kicks. Cook was a smart little quarter-back and on the wing line there was little choice. They all fielded well and their interference was clean cut and effective.

P.C.I. Plays Smothered.

Against the brilliant individual and combined work of the U.T.S. the Peterborough offensive plays did not shine to such an advantage as in earlier games. Particularly was this true of their extension runs and dashes around the end of the line which were for the most part stopped before they got fairly started. The result was that the Petes were forced to depend largely on plays through the line and it was by good plunging by Rye, Martin, Bookout and Young that most of their gains were made. In running back kicks, the U.T.S. crew were vastly superior. Their halves backed each other up and did not hesitate to pass when tackled, making many good gains while the Petes' rear guard let the man who made the catch go through on his own and he was generally dropped in his tracks by the deadly tackling of the U.T.S. crew.

The work of Young and Bookhout particularly featured the Peterborough crew's playing. Both did valiant service on the attack and defensively as well, and Bookhout had the feature play of the day to his credit in the last period when he broke through the U.T.S. line with the Petes in possession at their own twenty-yard line, dodged a couple of tacklers and then ran seventy-five yards. He crossed the field at centre and was not hauled down until Goulding nailed him at Toronto's 15 yard line. It was a beautiful play and Bookhout got a big hand from the crowd. A little later he bucked over for Peterborough's second touchdown and incidentally the last points of the game. Young got the other touchdown in the second period, tearing through the line from five yards out. His catching and tackling were high class. Cole also caught without a fumble all day and did some nice kicking as well. Up in front everybody gave the best they had and all they had, with the plunging of Rye and Martin particularly noticeable.

Had Good Season.

The Peterborough youngsters, after losing the majority of last years' players, have had a great season, thanks to the coaching of Mr. C. S. Brown. They have walloped all their eastern opposition and although once more forced to sup defeat at the hands of a Toronto twelve, they went down with their colours flying and earned tributes for their game stand and good finish after a start that would have utterly discomfited a less courageous crew. After being outscored 18 to 0 in the first ten minutes they held the winners to a 17-10 score for the balance of the game and to a tie in the last period.

Goulding's feat of scoring the first five trys for his team, and Bennett's of converting the first four, were remarkable features of the game.

The Collegiate gang were splendidly entertained by the U. T. S. team and, out of the running themselves, are pulling strongly for their conquerors to go through and win the championship.

The teams:

U.T.S.— Flying wing, Northam; halves, Bennett, Goulding, Smale; quarter, Cook; snap, Loghrin; inside wings, McTavish, Spence; middle wings, Annsley, Stollery; outsides, Lind, Hetherington; subs, McAlpine, Storms, Marsh, Bowen, Sparks.

Peterborough—Flying wing, Cheu; halves, Bookhout, Cole, Stevens; quarter, Young; snap, Copping; inside wings, Craw, Ebbs; middles, Rye, Martin; outsides, Yelland, Outram. Subs, Woods, Thompson, Neale, Henry, Fraser, Killaly, Pogue.

Referee—Dr. Jerry Laflamme.
Umpire—Hal DeGuichy.

Summary of the Game.

U.T.S. had a touchdown in the first period before Peterborough touched the ball; after they had kicked off, Goulding was responsible, getting away for a fifty yard run, then slipping around the end for fifteen more and on the next play going through the line and over for a try which Bennett easily converted. U.T.S. 6, Peterborough 0.

U. T. S. held the Petes for two plays after an exchange of kicks following the next kick-off and when Cole kicked to Smale, the Peterborough wings jostled him before he made the catch and U.T.S. got possession on Peterborough's twenty yard line. They bucked through for another touchdown, Goulding again carrying the ball, and Bennett converted aagin. U.T.S. 12, Peterborough 0.

A third march started after the kick-off, Goulding carrying the ball to centre on an extension run. Peterborough held and forced U.T.S. to kick, but the Petes could not gain and Cole punted to centre. A beautiful passing run let Bennett away for twenty-five yards and he made twenty more on the next play, Young saving a try by a pretty tackle. Goulding bucked over on the next down and Bennett converted from a most difficult angle. U.T.S. 18, Peterborough 0.

Following the kick-off, a Toronto offside gave Peterborough possession at U.T.S.'s 35 yard line. They plunged for eight yards on two downs and then pulled off an onside kick, recovering the ball at U.T.S.'s quarter. They were held for two downs and then lost possession on an inside kick just as the quarter ended.

U.T.S. carried the ball to centre early in the second quarter, but lost possesion for interference, and then the Petes showed their best rugby of the day. An end run by Young gained ten yards. Martin made a nice gain. Rye smashed through for thirty yards and on a fake end run Young crashed through for a touchdown, which he failed to convert. U.T.S. 18, Peterborough 5.

A fumble gave U.T.S. the ball after the kick-off, but the Peterborough line held and Smale tried a drop kick on the third down. It went wide and Cole ran the ball out twenty yards. Peterborough were forced to kick and U.T.S. got the ball thirty-five yards out. A series of smart plays wound up with Goulding going over for his fourth try, Bennett as usual converting. U.T.S. 24, Peterborough 5.

The figures remained that way at half time.

The Second Half.

Early in the third quarter, after securing the ball on a fumble, U.T. S. forced a rouge. U.T.S. 25, Peterborough 5.

Play was in mid-field for some time after. The Peterborough defence had tightened materially and U.T.S. could not get away as easily as in the early stages. Peterborough on the other hand could not work their way into the scoring zone. Finally U.T.S., on a couple of extension runs, carried the ball to Peterborough's ten yard line. Bennett smashed through for five yards and Goulding completed the distance. He lost the ball as he went through, but recovered it for a touchdown. For the first time Bennett failed to convert. U.T.S. 30, Peterborough 5.

There was nothing sensational in the early stages of the last quarter. Peterborough held well for the first ten minutes and then a series of thrusts through the line by Smale took the ball to Peterborough's one yard line and Cook carried it over for U.T.S.'s final points. Bennett failed again. U.T.S. 35, Peterborough 5

It looked as if the figures would remain unchanged until Bookhout's sensational run altered the complexion of affairs. The Petes had the ball close to the touch line and twenty yards out from their own goal mark when Bookhout crashed through and into the open with half the U.T.S. team in pursuit. With only one man left to pass Bookhout veered and crossed the field, outfooting the pursuers until Goulding nailed him from behind, fifteen yards out and on the opposite side of the field from where the dash started. Two plays were thrown back by U.T.S. for a loss and Young attempted a drop kick, which fell short. U.T.S. tried to plunge out of danger but lost for interference and again Peterborough failed to gain. Young's attempt at a field goal missed by inches, the ball striking the cross bar. U. T. S. elected to plunge and once more lost possession ten yards out. This time Peterborough made sure of their points, handing the ball to Bookhout who ploughed through for a touchdown which Young did not convert. U.T.S. 35, Peterborough 10.

Time was called a few seconds after.

Advice That May Cut Golf Scores.

Here are the five fundamentals of golf, in the opinion of Seymour Dunn, Lake Placid, N. Y., professional:

1.—HEAD—Keep it steady to keep the whole swing steady.

2.—LEFT ARM—Keep it stiff to preserve the swing radius.

3.—RIGHT ARM—With it raise the club to a proper height to guide it through a proper slope.

4.—SHOULDERS — Turn them the proper amount each way and at the proper time and at the proper speed to guide the club along the line of play.

5.—HANDS—Work with them to the utmost of their strength at the moment of impact to control the club face so that it will be square to the desired direction of play.

DIRECTION IN CRIME.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—(United Press).—Even crime is divided into "left" and "right" in Germany. A reactionary swindler in the marriage market was termed in the press as "right," while a common pickpocket was listed as "left."

Hopes to Break High Jump Record

By GEORGE BRITT.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 29. — With the coveted national A. A. U. decathlon title emblazoned safe on his record and the virtual assurance of a place on America's Olympic team next year, Harold M. Osborn keeps up his Spartan training.

Track athletes are conceded a rest in the fall and winter, between the last outdoor meets of summer and the first spring indoor meets. But Osborn has the idea he hasn't earned his yet.

Osborn found work in Champaign in order to be near the University of Illinois gymnasium and his old coach, Harry Gill. He is an instructor on the local high school. Just the other day, for practice, he entered an exhibition meet here and smashed a world's record in the high jump. The unofficial record was 6 feet 7 7-16 inches, or an eighth of an inch higher than the official mark of Beeson of California.

As a lad Osborn could outjump all the other boys in the county. When he arrived at the university in 1918 he could just clear 5 feet 7. By grinding, ambitious training he added more than a foot to his lean and made himself one of the greatest all-round athletes who ever laced on a spiked shoe.

Osborn Whole Track Team.

Winning the decathlon event from 11 other stars in the national games in Chicago on Labor Day this year was the peak of Osborn's achievement. His total score in the all-round test was 7,350.11 points, the largest of any winner in A. A. U. history. He wore the tricolor of the Illinois Athletic Club.

To summarize that great day's achievement, he won first in the 400-meter dash, the 1,500-meter, the 110-meter hurdles, the running broad and running high jumps, tied for first in the 100-meter dash, was second in the javelin throw, third in the discus and shot put and tied for fifth in the pole vault. Wouldn't that qualify him as a whole track team by himself?

OSBORN SETS UNOFFICIAL RECORD OF 6 FEET 7 7-16 INS IN HIGH JUMP.

On his poorest relative showing, the pole vault, he made the respectable height of 10 feet. His best record on the broad jump is 23 feet 3½ inches. Harry Gill calls him the greatest athlete he ever trained.

Hard Road to Success.

It was a long and rough road he traveled to that distinction, though. Osborn was born on an Illinois farm, 24 years ago. His brothers were athletes, but not world beaters. In college he earned his own expenses, acting as janitor part of the time. Osborn wears glasses and looks far more like a college professor than star athlete.

When he entered the college of agriculture at the university Coach Gill showed him how to roll over the bar instead of jumping with body upright. They call it the "Osborn roll" at the university now. In his freshman year he climbed to 6 feet, and kept developing.

But the youngster met tough opposition. Two years he entered the all-round event in the university's big annual western relay carnival. Brutus Hamilton of Missouri beat him. The third year Osborn beat Hamilton. It was his most satisfying triumph, he says.

O.H.A. AMENDMENTS FOR MEETING ON SATURDAY

J. P. Bond of Peterboro a Candidate For Re-election to the Executive Committee—Question of Professional Coaches on Agenda.

J. Percy Bond of Peterborough has been nominated for the Executive Committee of the O.H.A., the annual meeting of which takes place in Toronto on Saturday. Eleven candidates have been proposed, from whom four are to be elected. Mr Bond has been a member of the committee for years, and his experience and impartial service should highly recommend him to the delegates for re-election.

Dick Butler of Lindsay has also been nominated.

W. A. Fry of Dunnville has been re-elected by acclamation, together with his assistant officers of last year. The following amendments will be dealt with:

In accordance with a notice given at the last annual convention, Chas. Farquharson, Stratford, a past-president of the O.H.A., has introduced an amendment to prohibit clubs from employing professional coaches in any capacity. This is sure to evoke a warm debate, as there is plenty to be said on both sides of the question.

A number of amendments are proposed to the residence rule so as to make it more workable. One clause suggested by Sheriff Paxton for the sub-committee, if adopted, will effectually put a curb on the hockey tourist, as no player will be allowed to move from one town to another without the consent of his old club.

To Bar Pro. Coaches.

Mr. Farquharson's motion is to amend the present clause, by which any club convicted of having in its membership professionals of any kind shall forfeit its membership in the association, by adding the following: "This refers to officers of the club as well as playing members, and no club shall employ the services of a professional coach in any capacity."

To the Residence Rule.

There are four proposed amendments to the residence rule. They are as follows:

By Sheriff J. F. Paxton—To eliminate the former city rule and substitute the following: "A player who desires to change his club or residence must first secure the written consent of his old club, and if this is not forthcoming the player will have the right to present his case in person to the O.H.A. executive for final decision. The clubs concerned will have the privilege of representation at the hearing.

"In case of a junior player changing club or residence, he must, in addition to the foregoing, secure the written consent of his parent, parents or guardian to make such a change."

By Sheriff J. F. Paxton—"In case of a player residing in a rural district, village or police village, he must play for the O.H.A. club nearest to his residence having a team entered in the series in which he is eligible to play, it being understood that a junior player has the privilege of playing in the nearest place to his residence which has a junior O.H.A. team. The manner of determining the distance is to be computed by the mileage over a well-established highway, and not as the crow flies."

By W. H. Sloan, Guelph—"That bank clerks who have changed their place of residence after August 1 in any year be permitted to play for the city or town club in which they are residing on Jan. 1 of the playing season, upon the production of an affidavit with his application certifying that his transfer to his present place of residence was not brought about by his efforts on behalf of any hockey club, and also upon production of satisfactory evidence from the officials of the bank with which he is connected to the same effect."

By W. A. Edger, Bowmanville—"Players who reside in one town, city or village and work in another town shall play in the town, city or village in which he sleeps, provided there is a team in the series in which he is eligible to play in that town."

Increase for Referees.

A change is proposed in referees' fees so as to make the minimum fee $10 or 13 where the official goes out of town, and in addition: "In all senior games the referee's fee is to be $25 and mileage. This fee is also to apply in semi-final and final matches in the intermediate and junior series."

Sticks and Goalers' Pads.

Amendments are introduced to cover the changes in the playing rules made by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The goalkeeper's territory is to be eliminated, but no change is to be made in the rule adopted last year as to the manner of stopping the puck.

Hockey sticks shall not be more than 3½ inches wide at any part and not more than 54 inches in length to the heel and not more than 15 inches long at the blade.

The minimum width of the goalkeeper's pads while lying flat must not exceed 14 inches.

Definition of Body-check.

The following definition of a body-check is proposed:

"A fair body-check shall be when a player bodies an opponent with the hip or side of the body when standing still or skating at a slow rate of speed. If, however, a player is skating fast or uses his knee or elbow, it will be considered charging and be penalized accordingly. There shall be no body-checking within five feet of the boards."

"Substitute" Penalty.

Chas. E. Higginbottom, of the T. A. H. A., proposes the following addition to the substitute clause:

"If on any occasion it is found that a team is playing too many men, the said team shall forthwith be forced to drop those extra players and be penalized by the further loss of another player for the period of two minutes; and no goal shall be counted as scored by the offending team while the extra player or players are on the ice."

DECIDE TIE IN CLUB SECTION

Belmonts and L.O.L. Are Scheduled For To-Night's Bill at the Armouries.

The Belmont Club and L.O.L. No. 50 will play off their tie for the championship of the club section of the Softball League. The game is called for 8.30 o'clock at the Armouries.

The winner will meet the De Laval team, champions of the mercantile section, at a date to be decided, for the league title.

Tonight's game will be preceded by a match at 7.30 between runners-up in each section, the Quakers of the Mercantile hooking up with the Gunners of the club, who, in view of the tie in this section, cannot be precisely designated as runners-up. Both games should bring out the biggest crowd of the season.

BOWLING

EXAMINER INTERSHOP LEAGUE.

Last evening at the Water Street Bowling Alleys, the Examiner Intershop League was seen in action. Some good games and scores were rolled. H. McCauley's Linos rolled up a high score in their second game against Alan Whyte's Proofers. They rolled 712 in this game, and it is claimed to be a record score for a four man team on the Water Street Alleys. Harry Lacheur's Operators took two out of three from George Cairns' Comps, and Rolly Glover's Directors took two out of three from Max Swanston's Casters. Fred Scates' Inters still proves to be the most consistent team in the League losing another three straight, this time to Gordon Long's Jobbers. The Inters have lost 12 straight games.

Harry Dugan was the high man for the evening rolling a nice score of 536 for three games. He also had the high single of 232. Following are the scores:

KINGSTON TEAMS IN RUGBY FINALS

Teen's and R. M. C. Practice For Saturday Games.

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 29. — (Canadian Press).—The R. M. C. Team and Queen's held their first combined work-out this week at the Military College campus yesterday afternoon, both teams players went through their paces in great style. R.M.C. were minus Vokes, Mather, and Lane who have not yet recovered from injuries received in the game at Montreal, but the rest of the team are in good shape and will be ready for the Montrealers when they come on Saturday.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the game here on Saturday. The R.C.H.A. band will be in attendance, and the scores of the Toronto game will be bulletined as received. The cadets are getting ready for emergencies, and in case of bad weather will wear special spikes. Carrharris has recovered from his injury. The cadets are confident of retaining their lead and should they win, may play the O. R. F. U. winners here.

Queen's were minus Delehay, Mundell and Anglin yesterday, and these players will be out of the game on Saturday in Toronto. There were no injuries in yesterday's practice, great care being taken by both teams.

The dum-dum bullet was named after the place near Calcutta where it was first made.

CITY LEAGUERS OPEN CAMPAIGN

Senior and Junior Clubs Made Early Start in Winter Game.

Preliminary work in the interest of City League hockey was accomplished at a meeting held at the Chamber of Commerce last night. Canadian Generals Raybestos and G.W.V.A. are prepared to enter teams in a senior series

Crescents and Maple Leafs of last season's Junior loop, were represented. There were some inquries as to the formation of a Juvenile section.

Jack Pilling of the C.G.E. club will arrange for an organization meeting for the senior series. A similar meeting will be held to organize the Juniors, and possibly a Juvenil, section.

It was intimated at last night's meeting that Intermediate and Junior O.H.A. players would not take part in City League hockey, but a definite statement was not forthcoming from officers of the O.H.A. teams.

It was stated that hockey enthusiasts at the Lock Works are promoting a hockey club to organize a team to compet, in the winter pastime.

HANG DESPATCH RIDER IN IRISH FREE STATE

DUBLIN, Nov. 29. — (United Press.)— The first civil execution under the Free State took place at Mount Joy prison to-day, when William Downes, a military despatch rider, was hanged for the murder of Detective Fitzgerald. Seven other murderers were awaiting execution.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

Council they are merely representations made by the Board of Police Commissioners as to their requirements. They have no binding effect on the Council, not having received its approval. There is no power in the Police Commission to make a levy or to call for any amount they require.

His Honor Judge Ward: "Has any effort been made by the Council to get into communication with the Board of Police Commissioners?"

Mr. Gordon: "Yes. Conferences took place, but both bodies maintained their positions. Neither body was able to convince the other that its own position was the right one."

No Starved Men.

"The power to appoint a police force is exclusively in the Police Commission," declared Mr. Hall in opening his argument for the plaintiff. "The number is to be determined by the Board, and the Police Department shall not consist of a less number than the Commission approves."

Attacking the economy plea of the defence and the intimation by Mr. Gordon that the City might be policed with fewer men, Mr. Hall said: "You can't have an efficient police force consisting of half-paid skeletons. You can't have an efficient force if the men are walking their beats with the soles out of their boots or with their bare knees sticking out of their trousers. They have to be properly clothed and armed to render efficient service."

Mr. Hall asked His Honor Judge Ward to examine particularly the Chief Constable's report to the Board of Police Commissioners, showing the activities of the Department. It indicated, he said, that the Commission took careful consideration of every detail in naming the number of which the force should be composed and the amount required to maintain it.

Many Cases Cited.

During the course of the hearing there were some forty volumes and scores of cases referred to by counsel, and a mass of literature was entered in evidence. An examination of one of these documents — the original draft of the Police Commission estimates—shows that the requested amount this year was $28,843, against $29,805.50 last year. The amount actually required for salaries is $24,473, which, deducted from the amount which the City Council allowed, leaves a sum of $527 for the payment of contingent expenses. Chief Newhall, it appears from the estimate draft, included $850 for the purpose of obtaining a new automobile for the department. This sum, he said, with the old car, would have purchased a new car of the same make.

The Chief indignantly denied the statement that $835 had been expended in overhauling the police car, producing accounts which were entered in evidence showing that less than $600 was consumed in repairs.

In an interview following yesterday's hearing, Chief Newhall said he is criticized for spending so much on the repair of the old car, whereas his desire was over-ridden in the City's search for economy. "I wanted to trade in the old car and pay $850 for a brand new one, and that was my recommendation to the Police Commission. It was turned down, only one member of the Commission holding out for that as the best policy. Less than $600 was spent on the old car, in any event, instead of the $800 they say."

Six thousanl persons fell in duels during ten years of the reign of Henry IV.

QUEENS PREPARE TO MEET REGINA

They Will Arrive in Toronto on Friday and Will Have Several Workouts Before Saturday Afternoon.

KINGSTON, Nov. 29. -- Queen's Rugby team will leave the city at noon on Friday for Toronto, where they will meet Regina in the Dominion finals on Saturday afternoon.

The team will hold a practice this afternoon at the Stadium with the second squad, signals forming a chief part of the practice.

Queen's will work several new trick plays out on the Regina team on Saturday. These were tried against the Cadets on Wednesday afternoon and worked well.

Coach "Billy" Hughes states that he would start the same team against Regina that he started against the Hamilton Tigers here last Saturday.

"Chick" Mundell will not play in the game nor will Anglin or Delehaye.

Quiet prevails at Queen's and there does not seem to be an extraordinary interest in the contest. Local fans cannot see anything but a win for Queen's and are not excited. The allotment of tickets sent from Toris not going very fast here.

ARRANGE BOUT FOR CUTT HERE

The P.A.A.A. boxing committee will make an effort to arrange a local bout for Williss Cutt, the former Peterborough boxer, now in Rochester, N.Y., where he is having much success in his ring engagemets. Cutt has a host of well-wishers here, who would like to see him in action.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

WESLEY (FRECKLES) BARRY AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

Original Story Specially Written Around Beloved Screen Youngster.

Wesley Barry, one of the most versatile young stars of the screen, is here again in film form to delight and amuse us with his unusual humor and youthful antics in "The Printer's Devil," a classic of the screen, and the Royal Theare announces that this feature will be shown during the balance ..of ..this week commencing to-night.

It is an original story written by Julien Josephson, especially for Wesley Barry, and tells of the trials and tribulations experienced by the publisher, who is also the editor, proof-reader, typesetter and what-not of a typical small town newspaper.

Sidney Fletcher, robed on the outskirts of Briggsville, is forced to stay in town for a day, and upon meeting Vivian Gates, the pretty daughter of the town banker, re decides to stay.

To aid him in the suit for Vivian's hand he buys the local newspaper, and writes a scathing editorial against the light and power company. As Banker Gates is president of the company this puts Sidned back bit in his quest nd it seems as if Alec Sperry, his rival, will win the girl.

One night the bank is robbed and the next morning circumstances fasten suspicions on Sidney, and he is arrested and put in jail, while Sperry looks on but not at all sorry.

But Brick, who has a strong liking for both Sidney and Vivian, has gone out to prove Sidney innocent, and by a succession of humorous scenes, brings the real culprit to justice and reunites his friends.

"Wes" Barry is considered the most popular boy actor on the screen to-day and his productions are always clean and inspiring. The kiddies have a treat in store for them Saturday.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"LONE STAR RANGER" WITH MIX TO-DAY

Tom Mix, beloved king of the saddle, and "Tony," his wonder horse, are coming to the Capitol Theatre starting today in the William Fox screen version of "The Lone Star Ranger," the popular narative from the pen of Zane Grey.

It is the story of the life of the daring Texas Rangers who went out "to get their man" despite hazard and obstacle." It is such a stirring hard-riding part, replete with romance, that has made Tom the favorite film actor he is.

Lambert Hillyer, who directed the photoplay, took his company to the plains of Texas that he might instill into the picture every element of beauty and interest that has become traditional to the Lone Star State.

Such a combination as Tom Mix and Zane Grey in the Fox production promises to present an excellent picture.

AT THE GRAND.

Kingston Whig—"Jiggs" and "Maggie" were never seen to better advantage than in "Bringing Up Father on Broadway", Friday evening at the Grand Opera House. The large and appreciative audience went home satisfied that it was the best laugh they had had in many a day. As usual, Maggie, (Emma Weston), gets the better of the argument, but our friends Jiggs, (J. K Wesley), keeps her going all the time Dinty Moore, (Ed Morris), who is in the moving picture business, as usual keeps up his end of the fun Poor Jiggs gets a great scare when he thinks he has killed Dinty, when after a heated argument he strikes him on the head with a bottle. However, Jiggs meets him after a few days on the deck of the Nancy Lee bound for Hawaii.

"Kitty," (Bessie Leonard), daughter of Jiggs and Maggie, who has a very pleasing personality, takes her part to perfection. She has a splendid singing voice, and her numbers are very entertaining. "Rastus," (Frank Kirk), made the hit of the evening when he gave a specialty at the close of the first act. He plays on nearly every known instrument, and a few that are not known, but gets music from them all. His interpretation of the circus steam organ brought down the house. The singing speciality given by "Maggie" in the second act was exceptionally good. "Valeska," (Evelyn Butler), a movie vampire of fame, has a wonderful voice and her singing was much appreciated. The chorus is above the ordinary, the costumes are very pretty and the melodies all tuneful.

This show will be presented at the Grand Opera House, Peterboro on Friday and Saturday of this week.

AT THE REGENT.

"IN THE SHADOWS OF WHITE-CHAPEL."

The Best of the Season

Who amongst us that did not sit in gallery and enjoy the thrills of the melo-dramatic successes of other years? How we hissed the villian, cheered the hero and loved the heroine, how we laughed and roared at the antics of the comedian, the realistic fires, train wrecks, horse races and stirring rescues. Shall we ever forget them? Impossible. The old traditions of entertainment must be kept intact and with this end in view and with the facilities for visualizing the big punch scenes on their actual locations in a rea and true manner, Hepworth Films, of London, have produced "In the Shadows of White-Chapel." Conceded to be the biggest of England's big melodramas, London and the provinces have taken it to their hearts and practically overnight this sensational motion picture production has attained a smashing success. The English press, without a dissenting voice have endorsed and actually labelled this the biggest of England's big melodramas. The musical settings are a joy to hear. Old familiar music hall melodies made famous by the headliners of the varieties of the Old Country are heard again for the first time in many years. A vivid picture of the slums with their joys and sorrows, love and laughter, their quaint mannerisms and quainter "lingo," which is presented in a true story of life in London. "In the Shadows of White-chapel" now showing at the Regent.

A WORD OF COMFORT.

We magnify our pain and grief, they are acutely real. We minimize our joys and blessings; we take them all for granted. As you look back through life and remember finding a friend in days of hardship and despair, you would nto choose to miss the ache which brought your friend so close.

God's touch is just like that. He was near you every hour and yet you knew Him not. When sorrow broke your heart, you felt His hand in yours and knew ou were not alone. You will never lose Him now. You know Him as your friend.

Ball Player Acquitted of Alleged Flogging.

MARIETTA, Ga., Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press). — All indictments against Keller Hasty, pitcher for the Philadelphia Americans, and five others, in connection with the alleged flogging of Mrs. Bertha Holcumb, a widow, and S. H. Morton, the night of November 16, were dismissed here by Judge Blair, on motion of Solicitor-General John S. Wood, after the acquittal of Parks G. Cook on one of these charges.

CANADIAN METHODS OF MAKING PEAT USED IN EUROPE

OTTAWA, Nov. 29—More peat than ever is being used in Europe to day, states Dr. Charles Camsell, Deputy Minister of Mines, who has just returned from a trip through the mining districts of France and Germany. Especially in Germany peat fuel is being utilized more and more because of the seizure by the French of the Ruhr coal fields. Machines using the same principle as that applied at Alfred by the Peat Committee are the only ones being used all over Northern Europe.

"It is enlightening to know," says Dr. Camsell, "that the only principle adopted in extracting water from raw peat in any country is that which was used at the Government Experimental Peat Plant, at Alfred, Ontario, namely, the air-drying method. Nowhere in Europe is peat fuel being manufactured by driving off moisture with heat or mechanical pressure, and the concensus of opinion is that these methods are impractical, the amount of heat and energy necessary to drive off the water being greater than that contained in the resulting product. It is also the opinion of the British Fuel Research Board that the method used at Alfred are in advance of anything used in Europe."

International "Pro." Hockey Rumor Heard.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29—(Canadian Press).—If rumors are to be trusted, things appear to be moving fast toward the realization of the international professional hockey dream, says the Montreal Star. Developments in the situation were made known here yesterday.

First of all, it was stated that the interests of Eddie Livingstone and Percy Quinn, represented here by J. W. O'Connor and T. O. Kirby, have obtained a ten-day option on the Drummond Street property now occupied by the Victoria Rink.

Secondly, the Star is informed that Leo Dandurand, managing director of the Canadiens of the National Hockey League, which is directly opposed to the Livingstone - Quinn syndicate, left here Tuesday night for Boston on "hockey business."

Ainsmith Claims $4,000 From St. Louis Nationals.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Eddie Ainsmith, former catcher with the local Nationals who, following his unconditional release the latter part of last season, signed up with the New York Giants, has filed an application with Commissioner Landis to order the Cardinal Club to pay him approximately $4,000 he alleges is due him under his 1923 contract. The contract, it was said, contained a "good behaviour" clause, under which the greater part of Ainsmith's pay was to be held until the end of the year. Last September Ainsmith was a day late in returning from Chicago, and his release followed. His application to Mr. Landis is merely to establish his right to the money, it was explained.

ALL INTERESTS MUST OPPOSE POWER SCHEME

Hon. G. P. Graham, Home From Europe, Says the St. Lawrence River Is Under Control of the Federal Government.

MATTER OF POLICY.

OTTAWA, November 30 (Canadian Press). — "No great power development could be undertaken without the concurrence of all concerned. In this case this would mean the two Federal Governments and the Government of the Province."

This statement was made by Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, last evening when his attention was called to Premier Ferguson's statement earlier in the month that Ontario was prepared to go ahead with water power development on the St. Lawrence if the Dominion did not propose immediate action.

"This, however," added the Minister, "is a matter of Government policy which I could not discuss. It would come under the Department of Public Works rather than that of Railways and Canals. The Federal authorities are in charge of navigable waters, of which development of power is a subsidiary matter."

Mr. Graham, who reached the Capital on Thursday after three months' absence at Geneva and London in connection with the League of Nations and the Imperial Conference, received a group of newspapermen, and discussed a number of problems with which he had been dealing.

Improve News Service.

"In official circles in London, as well as among representatives of the other British Dominions, the lack of a full news service between Great Britain and the other parts of the Empire was very much deplored," said Mr. Graham, "and earnest efforts were under way to remedy the situation. The Imperial Conference," he said, "received a delegation of the British Empire Press Association headed by Lord Burnham to urge this matter. It was then decided by the Conference that the British Post Office authorities and the Marconi Wireless Company be asked to get together and settle their differences in order that a feasible scheme might be arranged for adequate wireless communication throughout the Empire."

Mr. Graham also referred to the claim of the Grand Trunk common and preferred stock holders, and said that Premier King had told the deputation which waited upon the Canadian Ministers in London that if they consider that they had a claim, there would be no objection to granting them a fiat to try their case in the Canadian Courts.

Mr. Graham, however, expressed the opinion that none of them were likely to take any such action. He did not believe any of them felt they had a legal claim.

Would Claim Interest.

The holders of the Grand Trunk Pacific fours, he thought, had had their position strengthened by the change to Government ownership. This was so in view of the fact that if the Grand Trunk ever earned sufficient, their interest as junior security holders would have to be paid. These debenture holders, said the Minister, based their claim for immediate consideration, as far as he could understand their standpoint, on their interpretation of a speech made by Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, a statement made by Hon. J. D. Reid, former Minister of Railways, a telegram from Sir Robert Borden, and an interview they had with the members of the Government.

Their contention was, said Mr. Graham, that they believed that when the Grand Trunk agreement was allowed to go through, their securities were being protected, or in other words, they would get their interest right along.

Mr. Graham added that the hope of these debenture holders lay in the success of the Grand Trunk.

ELECTION ADDRESSES BY THOUSANDS STORM THE BRITISH ELECTORS

Lloyd George Delivers Fifteen Rounds of Verbal Shrapnel Daily in His Tour—Birkenhead Aims Jibes at the League of Nations and Labor Is Attacked From Two Sides

CHURCHILL HECKLED

LONDON, Nov. 30.—With election day only a bare week ahead, the political campaign is growing in intensity. The chief candidates for parliamentary seats are making daily an astounding number of speeches to their constituents, with David Lloyd George easily the leader among them with a record of some fifteen addresses daily in his whirlwind tour.

Mr. Lloyd George, together with Lord Birkenhead, and Winston Spencer Churchill, easily is the most provocative of election orators and accordingly is being favored with the greatest amount of opposition from hecklers. The meetings of Lord Birkenhead and Mr. Churchill also always prove most lively, and sometimes rather noisy and even disorderly.

Attacks War Policy.

Mr. Churchill constantly has been in hot water with his opponents because of his connection with the famous operations on the Gallipoli Peninsula and in the Dardanelles during the Great War, being called on by his hecklers to defend his position. These attacks are considered in some quarters as due largely to the fact that only recently the former First Lord of the Admirality published his book on the war. Mr. Churchill has been fierce in his attacks on the Labor Party and the proposed capital levy, although these questions belong to the opposing party, while Lord Birkenhead persists in his jibes at the League of Nations.

Thursday at Ashton-under-Lyne, Lord Birkenhead asked during a meeting the question: "Does anyone believe the whole of human nature will be altered and that all controversies will be settled by the League of Nations?" and answered the question himself with the statement: "If you lend yourselves to that folly you will be in the same position as the Liberal leaders in 1914, when their blindness and folly nearly destroyed their country and Empire."

On Great Britain's European policy Lord Birkenhead insisted on the necessity of accepting the French policy for some time to come if Great Britain wished to avoid a quarrel with France. He predicted there would be no improvement in the European situation for four or five years to come.

Thousands of Speeches.

Mr. Lloyd George, Lord Birkenhead, and Mr. Churchill are taking good care that Labor shall have no chance of keeping the unpopular capital levy in the background. In fact, almost all the speakers from both the Conservative and the Liberal platforms apparently are doing their utmost to fan the public fears of an inroad upon capital interests. Besides the addresses of the leaders of the three parties, thousands of speeches are being delivered daily up and down the country, with a full use of the radio loud speakers in order that the largest possible audiences may be reached.

Premier Baldwin in addressing big meetings daily. He is making a less showy campaign than his opponents, but according to the general opinion expressed by his adherents he is making good headway in his campaign. The Premier confines himself chiefly to solid arguments on the main question in his platform—unemployment and his proposed remedy of protective duties. The same may be said of J. Austen Chamberlain.

Stormy in Lancashire.

Perhaps the fiercest campaign centers in Lancashire, because the cotton trade does not want a tariff. It is in Lancashire that the free traders are most hopeful of detaching Conservative votes from the Government. As an indication of the intensity of the campaign in Lancashire, Sir Charles Macara, one of the most prominent men in the cotton trade for the past twenty years, but who never has spoken from a public platform, has been induced to broadcast by wireless a speech outlining Lancashire's tremendous accomplishments in the last century under the system of free trade.

4,000 SPEECHES A DAY.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press Cable.)— It is computed that 4,000 speeches are being delivered daily in behalf of the free trade candidates. The tariff reformers are scarcely less busy. The labor candidates are making a feature of 20-minute meetings outside of big manufacturing establishments during the dinner hour. Thus there is a formidable display of oratory in the contest. Taking it altogether something like 20,000 speakers are getting off their sentiments every 24 hours in Great Britain.

Lloyd George will speak in Camberwell on Wednesday night next, the eve of polling day. Already there are 8,000 applications for tickets of admission to the hall, which holds only 2,000 amplifiers will enable the people in the adjoining streets to hear his speech. The streets will be kept clear especially for the listeners outside of the hall.

Labor and Its Levy.

Continuing his tour in the southeast of Lancashire, Lloyd George to-day devoted himself entirely to the capital levy proposal of the labor party and in this connection he declared that the labor leaders had been captured by the socialists. He had not the least doubt, he said, that if the advocates of capital levy were badly defeated in this election, the labor party would promptly drop the idea and it would be a very good thing for their party, he added.

Capital levy was an impossible proposition ,Lloyd George said, and the most level-headed members of the labor party were against it.

Recommends Churchill.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The Daily Express, "in view of Winston Churchill's great record in the war and the hopelessness of getting a Conservative in for West Leicester, and in view of the necessity of keeping out a violent socialist intellectual like Pethwick Lawrence, "advised the electors to vote for Churchill.

EXTEND VOTING PERIOD.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The polling hours in an election usually are from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. but under the new rules application can be made for an extension of the hours so as to allow of voting from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. This will be taken advantage of in many industrial constituencies.

The votes in the cities will be counted on election night, but outside of the cities the ballots usually are not counted until the day after the election.

The ballots cast in the various divisions in Glasgow will be counted on Friday.

Limit Franchise To Italy's Women

ROME, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press)—Votes for women seems to be a practical certainty at this session of the Chamber of Deputies, but it will be limited to the according of the vote to women of 25 years or more who have received medals, who are widows of war veterans, or who pay taxes of 40 lire or more annually.

The commission of the Chamber under the presidency of former Premier Giolitti met yesterday and began the preparation of the bill, already being in agreement on the major points. The Socialist members of the commission urged the extension of the suffrage to women on equal terms with men, but this motion was voted down.

The introduction of a suffrage bill at this session is in fulfillment of the promise made by Premier Mussolini to the woman's suffrage convention here in June.

Lady Astor Hopes to Hold Seat in Plymouth Until Son is Eligible

PLYMOUTH, England, Nov. 30.—Lady Astor is carrying on a very lively campaign for re-election to Parliament and her meetings are so crowded she often has to struggle to reach the platform, upon which she is usually subjected to brisk heckling, to which her quick and sharp answers afford much amusement and keep her hearers in good temper. At a meeting Thursday, in which she sought to show the impracticability of the proposed levy on capital championed by the Labor Party, Lady Astor said:

"They say tax the rich. Well, the rich are being taxed, alive and dead, and it's quite right. One reason why death duties are better than a capital levy is that all the millionaires don't die at once.

The speeches Lady Astor is making are centering largely on social reforms, especially those on behalf of women, and children. To-day one heckler asked: "What will you do when you die?" Amid laughter and cheers Lady Astor retorted: "I am going to send you my son."

This was a reference to her speech when she was first elected to Parliament, when she declared she would hold her seat until her son was old enough to be a candidate.

COMPLETE PLAN TO AID HUNGARY

Loan of Two Hundred and Fifty Million Gold Crowns Proposed By League of Nations Committee.

LONDON, Nov. 30.— Details of the proposed loan to Hungary, intended as part of the reconstruction measures for that country, which the League of Nations has under way, have been worked out by the committees of the League, which has been meeting here and which, it was announced Wednesday, had agreed upon a scheme to be submitted to the League Council next month.

This international loan, an important feature of the comprehensive scheme for balancing the Hungarian budget and stabilizing the national currency, will under the committee's plan, be directed by a Commissioner General responsible to the League and having functions similar to those of Dr. Alfred Zimmermann, the League's representative in Vienna in the Austrian reconstruction work.

Temporary Help.

The sum required to put Hungary on her feet will be much less than was necessary in the case of Austria. It is expected by means of decreased expenditure and a system of control that the budget can be balanced in two and one half years with the assistance of a loan of about two hundred and fifty million gold crowns, after which Hungary, by means of her own natural resources and her self-sufficiency in food, will be able to maintain herself as a self-supporting state.

Unlike the loan for Austria, no guarantee from foreign governments will be required for the proposed Hungarian loan. The revenues from the customs, tobacco and salt monopolies and the sugar tax may be made available with the additional security of further assigned revenues if they are required.

War Reparations.

The committee considers that the success of any scheme for Hungarian reconstruction depends upon satisfactory arrangements being made regarding Hungary's liabilities for war reparations and other debts and the establishment of good political arrangements with Hungary's neighbors.

Dr. De Kallay, Hungarian Minister of Finance, and other members of the Hungarian delegation who have been supplying the financial committee with information, will leave for Budapest to-morrow. The financial committee's plan will be discussed by the Council of the League of Nations during the meeting beginning December 10. If the plan is approved it will be considered and finally passed upon by the Inter-Allied Reparation Commission

Death Preceded Automobile Race

Two Killed and One Injured By Car That Was "Tuning Up."

BEVERLEY HILLS, Calif., Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).— Two men were killed and a third was injured when struck by a racing car driven by Harry Hartz as the driver was warming up his car shortly before the start of the 250-mile Thanksgiving Day race here yesterday.

Russell Hughes, a photographer, was killed instantly, and George L. Wade, of Kansas, City, Mo., wealthy owner of the car driven by Harlan Fengler, died half an hour later on the operating table at a hospital.

The injured man was Jimmy Lee, a mechanic. He suffered a broken leg.

RUNAWAY HORSE STRIKES WOMEN

One Dead, Sister Injured, Result of Automobile Mishap.

ST. JOHN, N.B., November 30 (Canadian Press). — Miss Emma Hennigar died here early last night, and Miss Julia Hennigar, her sister, is painfully injured as a result of being knocked down by a horse yesterday afternoon.

The horse, to which a waggon was attached, was standing in Leinster Street, when a car driven by F. H. Deering struck the end of the waggon.

The horse became frightened and ran up on the sidewalk, knocking both elderly ladies down as they were about to enter the door of their boarding house.

Miss Emma Hennigar was taken to the General Public Hospital, where she died about two hours after the accident.

EXTEND GRADING DAIRY PRODUCTS

Consensus at Dominion Dairy Conference in Favor of Proposal.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.— (Canadian Press.)—Discussion at the Dominion Dairy Conference yesterday afternoon centred upon the advisability or otherwise of extending federal grading of dairy products to include butter and cheese for domestic consumption and in that way bring about a uniform standard which does not now exist.

Concensus of opinion expressed by those who addressed the conference favored federal grading for all butter and cheese whether designed for export or otherwise but it was also felt that it would be a good idea to continue provincial grading for educational purposes.

At the present tme only butter and cheese which is to be exported from Canada is graded by federal officials.

Replying to a question as to the advantages which Canadian butter and cheese would attain on the foreign market as a result of grading J. A. Ruddick, federal Dairy Commissioner declared that it had taken New Zealand a considerable time to educate foreign buyers in that regard and that Canada must expect the same experience.

As time passed Mr. Ruddick explained, buyers come to look upon the Government grading of New Zealand butter and cheese as a guarantee of quality. Canada had been grading its dairy produce for a comparatively short time and he was sure that in time foreign buyers would be as ready to accept the mark of Canadian graders as they now were in the case of New Zealand.

ALDERMAN SAYS GRAVEL PIT IS PAYING PROFIT

Interesting Report to Board of Works—Property, Fire, Light and Water and Parks Committees Also Met.

GARBAGE CONTRACT

That the gravel pit operated by the City has saved $1,935, in actual cash over the investment was the most interesting report made to the City Council's Board of Works last night, the letting of a contract for the collection of garbage was the outstanding feature of the Property committee; the placing of several lights at badly illuminated points was the principal business of the Fire, Water and Light Committee; and the Parks Committee discussed ways of reducing the drowning hazard on the Peterboro waterfront.

There were present Mayor W. H. Taylor; Alderman Walter Stocker, Chairman of the Board of Works; Alderman M. McIntyre, Chairman of the Property Committee; Alderman J. Crowe, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee; Alderman Turner, Chairman of the Parks Committee and Aldermen Meyers, Holloway, Maher, Fife and Phelan.

Gravel Pit Pays

Regarding the city-operated gravel pit in use this year, Alderman Stocker reported that the site has been paid for and a saving over last year of $1,935 effected besides. In addition to this, the pit should last another four years and may be used indefinitely by sinking the available forty feet, lowering the crusher and extending the carrier. The report was received with general satisfaction the pit having in the opinion of

STEEL HOLDERS LOSE EVERYTHING

News Will Be Broken to Shareholders at Meeting Next Week.

TORONTO, Nov. 30—(Canadian Press).—L' R. Steel stockholders in this city are to be told at a meeting next Thursday night that their stock certificates are worthless. They will get the news from their own secretary, C. H. Mackenzie, who is just back from Buffalo after battling in their interests. Mr. Mackenzie was called to Buffalo for consideration of an offer made by a group of capitalists in New York known as the Mc Kinnon syndicate, who have bid $1,600,000 for all assets of steel enterprises in Canada and the United States. This sum is just enough to meet the claims of all the creditors, which means there will be nothing left for stockholders who put $23,000,000 in the enterprise. The United States receivers will meet on January 15 to give final consideration to the McKinnon offer.

Canadian creditors meet here on December 17th.

Pending the meeting of the stock holders next Thursday, Mr. Mackenzie yesterday declined to give any information regarding the L. R. Steel affairs.

TO HOLD INQUEST LONERGAN DEATH

How Accident Happened Will Not Be Known Until Evidence is in.

OSHAWA, Nov. 30.— A. McIntyre of Cannington, is said to be the name of the man who was travelling with Nicholas Lonergan, of Toronto, when the latter was killed in an automobile accident yesterday, is still in a critical condition.

How the accident happened will not be known until the evidence at the inquest, which has been ordered by County Crown Attorney through Dr. D. S. Hoig, coroner, is held. There is a sharp turn in the road at this point and whether the driver misjudged the turn or whether he was going at high speed and skidded into the ditch is what the local police are concerned in, but they will give nothing out except that they are working on the case. It was learned that Port Perry doctors received a 'phone call from another party of autoists that two men were injured and they rushed to the scene and at once had the injured taken to the local General Hospital here. The jury empannelled viewed the remains at the local hospital, after which they adjourned. Later it was stated that his companion was a Mr. McIntyre, of Cannington. He is in a critical condition.

The Police Force Now Without Wages

On November 15 only Chief Newhall was without salary for the preceding two weeks' service, but to-day none of the members of the force received a pay cheque. It is understood that arrangements had been made to pay them, but fell through.

Alderman Nagel Phelan, chairman of the Finance committee of the City Council, told the Examiner the only reason the men are not being paid is the lack of funds. There are only a few dollars remaining in the treasury to the credit of the Police Commission.

The policemen are on duty as usual.

STATUE OF TUT IN PROCESSION

Ebony Effigy of Egyptian King Stood Guard 3,270 Years at Door of Tomb.

LUXOR, Egypt, Nov. 30.—From the mortuary chapel in which it had rested 3,270 years, a life-sized statue of Tutenkhamen was transferred today to the tomb of King Seti, his ancient predecessor. The statue, which is one of two striking life-size effigies of the Pharaoh, has kept guard at the door of his tomb through these more than 3,000 years, supposedly keeping out the evil spirits and assuring the soul of the royal occupant of the tomb everlasting tranquility.

The wooden figure was laid upon a bier-like stretcher and conveyed to King Seti's tomb, where Howard Carter, in charge of the exploration operations, has established a workshop, with as much ceremony and solemnity as might have attended the funeral of the ancient sovereign himself. Archaeologists assisting Mr. Carter, promptly wrapped the inanimate king in cotton batting and linen bandages, as if embalming a real mummy ,and dispatched it to Cairo, where it will join the other images of royalties in wood and stone in the Egyptian Government's museum.

A GAS ATTACK RESULT FOUND

VERDUN, Nov. 30.—(Special).—Bodies of more than 100 German soldiers, postured in lifelike attitudes, were found to-day in a tunnel between Dead Man's Hill and Bethincourt.

They had been caught in a surprise gas attack during the battle of Verdun.

The Germans were bottling mineral water when stricken. The gas must have acted instantaneously, for there they stood to-day, against the walls of the tunnel; gruesome toilers at one of the less heroic tasks of the world war.

SAFETY LEAGUE SUGGEST NEEDS OF WATERFRONT

Detailed Report Follows Inspection of Danger Points — Twenty-Nine Pieces Equipment Recommended—Check Up Boat Liveries.

WOULD COST $600

Recommendations received from Austin P. Saunders, Provincial Organizer of the Ontario Safety League regarding the removal of drowning hazard along the Peterboro waterfront were read at last night's meeting of the Parks Committee by Chairman E. M. Turner.

The detailed report recommends:

1. The placing of modern Life Saving Appliances at dangerous points along the waterfront.
2. The installation of Protected Bathing Areas at Inverlea Park, and at Little Lake, near the foot of Lake street. The employment of supervisors or lifeguards and the encouragement of bathing at these points to the exclusion of all dangerous localities.
3. The placing of a small lifeboat, modern drags, and first aid equipment, etc., in the hands of the Fire Department, for use in cases of drowning accidents.
4. The inspection of boat equipment used by public boat liveries.
5. The placing of Danger Signs along the waterfront showing dangerous conditions such as deep water, thin ice and sewer outlets.

Life Saving Appliances

Life Saving Appliances consisting of Stand, Pike Pole, Ladder, Life Buoy and Drag, should be placed at dangerous points along the water front. Ladders are necessary only at docks and such places where it would be difficult to lift the victim of an accident from the water. To illustrate my point: A life saving appliance on the Government Dock at George Street would not be complete without a ladder, and it would be entirely unnecessary to place a ladder on a life saving appliance at the foot of Lake Street, where the shore slopes gradually to the water's edge.

I would recommend therefore that life saving equipment should be placed along the waterfront as per the following list:

Lake St. Bathing Beach—1 stand, 1 lifebuoy, 1 pikepole, 1 drag.
Government Dock—1 stand, 1 lifebuoy, 1 pikepole, 1 ladder.
C. P. R. Foot Bridge—1 lifebuoy.
Sherbrooke St. (Foot)—1 stand, 1 lifebuoy, 1 pikepole.
Dublin St. (Foot)—1 stand, 1 lifebuoy, 1 pikepole, 1 drag.
Inverlea Park—1 stand, 1 lifebuoy, 1 pikepole, 1 drag.
Waterworks—1 stand, 1 lifebuoy, 1 pikepole, 1 ladder, 1 drag.
Mark St. (Foot)—1 stand, 1 lifebuoy, 1 pikepole, 1 drag.
Estimated Cost, each—Stand, $2.00 Lifebuoy, $6.00; Pikepole, $6.00; Ladder, $6.00; Drag, $5.00.

Life Saving appliances are of little use unless someone is at hand to make use of them in the rescue of a person in distress. At the same time if equipment of this kind is not available in an emergency,

DOUBTS IF THERE IS ROOM FOR EXTRA HELP

Plan of Provincial Government to Bring Out 10,000 Laborers and Domestics Questioned.

TORONTO, Nov. 30—(Canadian Press).—Is there room for 10,000 farm laborers and domestics in Ontario under present conditions? This is the question asked in Labor circles yesterday, in view of the statement of Hon. J. S. Martin, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, that such is the case, and announcement of the sending of a deputation to the British Isles whose mission will be to secure farm laborers and domestics for Ontario.

That the needs of Ontario's farmers and citizens who employ domestics should be well known before any effort is made to induce farm laborers and domestics to come to Ontario, was the opinion freely expressed. It was pointed out that many of the British Harvesters, who were brought to Canada to assist in reaping the Western Crop are unemployed and walking the streets of industrial centres in search of employment. They had not gone to work on the farms.

According to the annual report for the employment service of Canada, Toronto office, the shortage of farm labor did not exceed 1000 men during the year and at present it would be difficult to place fifty men on farms.

"No one should be brought here on speculation and assumption that there will be work for him when he comes," said James Simpson. "If it is a question of opening up land that is another matter."

Wm. Varley, business agent, of the Building Trades Council, said it is doubtful if 500 men out of 10,000 would remain on farms. The remainder would come to the cities to aggravate conditions prevalent during several months of the year, except under abnormal conditions.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Barton

MRS. HEN MAKES A GOOD GUESS

"How do you do, children?" said the Riddle Lady kindly.

"Make way! Make way!" cried Dick Red Cap. "Here comes the Riddle Lady. She has another riddle for everybody to guess."

Just then there was a clattering of hoofs and a large coach drew up, drawn by six black horses.

Humpty Dumpty opened the door and Nick bowed low while Nancy made her best courtesy.

"How do you do, children," said the Riddle Lady kindly. "How do you do, everybody! I'm very late today because I was at a teaparty and the ice cream didn't come and we waited and waited. And finally when it did come it was so cold we couldn't eat it in a hurry, so there you are, you have the whole story."

"We hope you had a nice time," spoke up a tall gentleman in a yellow velvet suit and black satin spats.

"Splendid, thank you! But speaking of time reminds me of my riddle, I'll begin at once. I wrote it and then learned it by heart." So she began:

"A diller a dollar a twelve o'clock scholar,
With face as round as the moon,
You count and count from noon till night,
And then from night till noon.

"You never rest the year around,
To labor you must like,
Yet though you work so faithfully,
You're always on a strike.

"You mutter, mutter as you work,
You're never dumb a minute,
Yet when you stop, your voice stops too,
We wait till you begin it.

"Sometimes you've two legs, sometimes four,
And sometimes none at all,
You stand on mantel, shelf or floor,
Or hang upon the wall.

"No matter where you make your home,
(You live in many lands)
You never use your feet at all
But run with both your hands.

"You tell folk when to go to church,
Or when to start a war,
Or boil an egg, or run a race,
For that's what —— are for."

"My, my, my! That's a hard one!" said the tall gentleman in the yellow suit, wagging his head till his ears flapped.

"A very hard one!" agreed all the Riddle Landers solemnly.

At that very minute a speckled hen began to tell the world that she had laid an egg. "Clock, clock, clock, clock, clock!" she cackled loudly.

Nancy called out, "That's it! The hen guessed it. It's a clock, isn't it?"

"That's right! It is," nodded the Riddle Lady. "Humpty Dumpty, please give her a handful of corn for being so smart. Nancy and Nick, you may drive home with me and help me make up tomorrow's riddle."

Turkeys Are Selling at a Lower Price This Year.

The British Elections

(By WICKHAM STEED)

(By Wickham Steed, Former Editor of The London Times, Editor Review of Reviews, Registered in Accordance with the Copyright Act, 1923).

LONDON, Nov. 30. — "If I am beaten I am not going to complain," said Premier Baldwin at Bradford last night. "I am not going to write long articles for the Hearst press in the United States, I shall stop at home and do my best to mend the broken crockery." Baldwin is a psychological problem in the elections, for a party leader in the middle of a stiff fight to discuss the contingency of his being beaten, even as a foil for a sly dig at Lloyd George would seem to show that he half expects a beating, this is scarcely the way to stimulate enthusiasm among his followers, but, argue Baldwin's supporters, "such savings are typical of the Baldwin blunt honesty, while admitting the possibility of defeat, he is putting his whole strength into the fight and appealing to common-sense electors without claptrap, humbug or pretence." This day week the solution of the Baldwin question will be known. Briefly defined, the question is whether Baldwin hides reserves of political wisdom, statesmanship and idealism beyond a modest frontage, or whether the frontage represents the whole man? When he succeeded the late Bonar Law last April, most people believed that Baldwin possessed the hidden strength of vision of his predecessor. When he plunged into the election the tendency to give him the benefit of the doubt revivet amoog the rank ant file of the Conservative party, especially among the women, but the course of the campaign hitherto has failed to show whether the believers of the sceptics are justified. Among the Liberals the contrary process is observable. Wild enthusiasm is not felt either for Asquith or Lloyd George. Both are known quantities —too well-known in some respects— but the re-union of the two sections of the party, the relief that Lloyd George has been compelled to dissociate himself from Lord Birkenhead and return to the Liberal fold, have inspired the Liberal organization with faith and confidence and have made Liberals everywhere put their backs into the contest, even though they will not get a majority in Parliament or fail to oust Labor from the second place, Liberals feel certain of doing better than in any election since 1910. Moreover, there have been no defections in their ranks, except of a few extreme Radicals to the Labor party, whereas several prominent Conservatives have frankly joined the partisans of Free Trade. This morning brings another interesting personal factor into the fight, two chief apostles of the League of Nations, in England, Lord Grey of Falloden and Lord Robert Cecil; the latter holds office in Baldwin's Government as a Conservative, the former leads the Liberal Opposition in the House of Lords. Cecil recently wrote a letter urging that the only way to secure the League of Nations' policy is to support Baldwin. Lord Grey now replies that he cannot accept Cecil's conclusion and asks him three questions: First, Whether the chief critics of the League are not the Tories; second, whether Birkenhead, who denounced idealism in his speech as Rector of Glasgow University and discountenanced the League policy, was not thereafter invited to join Baldwin's Government, and, third, whether that Government did not accept the unjust decision of the Paris Conference of Ambassadors in the Corfu question, thereby discrediting the League? Grey adds that his experience shows that all the Liberals favor the League of Nations' policy so strongly that any Liberal Government would be compelled to make the League the keystone of its diplomatic relations.

The importance of Grey's letter lies in the fact that the League of Nations' Union, whereof Grey is president, numbers more than 300,000 members and has many thousands of active branches.

These branches are now likelier to follow Grey's lead than Cecil's. Several prominent business houses are declaring emphatically in favor of Free Trade. Others have issued circulars to their customers, warning them that any increase in price due to the tariff must be borne by the consumers. The leading city bankers also expressly reaffirm the circular letter that they issued in 1922 against Protection. Among them are Sir Charles Addis, Governor of the Hong-Kong and Shanghai Bank; Henry Bell, general manager of Lloyd's Bank; Reginald MacKenna, chairman of the Midland Bank, and former Chancellor of the Exchequer; Hon. Robert Brand, vice-president of Lazard Brothers; Lord Inchcape, chairman of the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Line and Bank, supports them.

Mothers Should Not NEGLECT BRONCHITIS In The Babies

Mrs. E. Langdon, Kingston, Ont., writes:—"My baby boy had bronchitis when he was two weeks old, he recovered from the attack but took it again, several months later, and on account of the severity I was almost panic-stricken to know what to do for him. My mother advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, as she had used it for several years with splendid results.

I got a bottle, and after I had used it I could see a decided improvement in him; after several bottles he was completely relieved.

My boy is now two years old, and he has never had an attack of bronchitis since.

As a mother, raising a family, I am very grateful to know that I have found a real remedy for bad colds and bronchitis, as it lifts care and anxiety from an anxious mother's shoulders."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 35c. a bottle; the large family size 60c.; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

West Needs Trees To Inspire Poets

WINNIPEG, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press)—Manitoba will develop no poets until the country is dotted with plantations of trees, Dr. John MacLean, of Wesley College told members of the Lions' Club here yesterday, in dealing with the history of art and letters in Manitoba.

"You must have trees and hills to provide a poetic environment," said Dr. MacLean. "We cannot have the hills, but we can plant trees."

QUEBEC GAINS NEW CITIZENS

Exodus Checked and Tide Has Swung Back From United States.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—That the exodus of French Canadians to the United States has stopped and that the pendulum is now swinging in Canada's favor was an important declaration made by Mr. J. R. Laforce, Colonization and Immigration representative of the Canadian National Railways in Boston. Mr .Laforce was in Montreal on business to-day. He returns to Boston to-morrow.

The trend of French-American opinion is gradually turning towards Canada in the opinion of Mr. Laforce who pointed out that from April to November no less than 1,100 French citizens of the U.S. came to Canada by the Canadian National Railways and are now settled in various parts of the dominion. While the majority are situated in Quebec, the western provinces and northern Ontario have received their share. In addition to the number five hundred Franco-Americans have been brought in for lumbering purposes and have been located in sections of the country close to settlements and it is expected that in the spring many of those will throw in their lot with the new communities and settle on the land which is being opened up rapidly, particularly in the Abitibi district.

ACQUIT FARMER OF BOYS' DEATH

Not Criminally Liable, Says Judge in Saskatchewan Case — Taken From Jury.

MOOSOMIN, Sask., November 30 (Canadian Press). — "I am dismissing you because by law it has not been shown that you were criminally liable," declared Mr. Justice MacLean, in King's Bench Court here yesterday when he dismissed the charge of manslaughter against George M. Ford, Broadview farmer, in connection with the death of John R. Boyne, 19-year-old English lad, who died last March of pneumonia in a bed in his employer's cellar.

It was alleged that Ford had failed to provide medical attendance.

In withdrawing the case from the jury, and giving the accused his freedom, Mr. Justice MacLean administered a scathing indictment of Ford's treatment of the youth.

"The dismissal does not come as a result of your merits or your treatment of the boy," he said.

Evidence yesterday showed that Boyne had been treated harshly by that the lad had been struck and knocked down several times.

A committee of boys, Morgan Rowland, Floyd Parsons, Russell Williamson and Arthur Williamson was appointed to meet at the home of Mrs. Overholt on Saturday where they will make aprons, caps, and candy-baskets for their booth. The watch-tower which is proving of great interest to the Juvenile workers was taken as follows:

Japan —Floyd Parsons.
Italia —Daisie McAughey.
India—Vera Fisher
Australia— Lenore Jamieson.

During the meeting Mrs. Rowland read a most interesting story. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Ben Benediction.

A Brief Meeting on the Liquor Smuggling To-Day

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press.)—Although the conference between representatives of Canada and the United States on liquor smuggling did not conclude yesterday, the final meeting to-morrow morning will be but brief. Judge Moss, Chairman of the United States 'delegation, stated last evening that his party would probably leave for Washington early this afternoon. Last night, Hon. Jacques Bureau, Minister of Customs and Excise, entertained the visitors to an American Thanksgiving dinner.

The official statement which was issued at the conclusion of yesterdays' deliberations indicates no more than did that of Wednesday just what transpired at the meeting.

Bricklayers Only Get $15 a Day They Admit.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—(United Press).—Representatives of the Plasterers and Bricklayers' Union appeared before the Board of Education to defend the honor of their craft against contractors. Indignantly they denied they received $18 a day on school jobs. They admitted they received $15 a day and sometimes earned $19.25 a day for working overtime. The plasterers and bricklayers refused to accept responsibility for delay in the building of schools and passed the "buck" to inpecunious sub-contractors, who reduce the number of workmen to meet their payroll.

There is no better way of insuring the regular, gentle functioning of the organs of the body than by the daily use of natural bran. THE ANTI-DIPHTHERIA CAMPAIGN.

Judging by the letters the Examiner has been receiving there is a mistaken impression abroad in Peterborough as to the nature of the anti-diphtheria campaign among local school children.

Many people seem to have the idea that there is an attempt to make the use of toxin anti-toxin as a safeguard against diphtheria compulsory.

There is, of course, no foundation for that idea. The employment of toxin anti-toxin for the immunization of such children as are found to be susceptible to diphtheria is strongly recommended by the health authorities and by the Peterborough Medical Association.

It is planned to provide protection for such children, but only in cases where the parents are willing that this course should be adopted.

If the parents refuse to give the necessary permission toxin anti-toxin will not be given.

That is all there is to the campaign, and there is no need of starting controversies over compulsory measures when there is no intention of any attempt to employ such measures.

Naturally, of course, it is desired to have as many children as possible avail themselves of this opportunity, but compulsion is not being thought of in connection with the campaign.

MUNICIPAL QUESTIONS.

There are many questions that ratepayers should be thinking over as the municipal elections loom up on the horizon, and upon these points they have the right to expect as definite answers as possible from the members of the different civic bodies, and more especially those members who will stand for re-election.

Such candidates should be prepared to give an account of their stewardship and to give their views on questions in regard to civic finances and civic government generally.

Is it possible to reduce the tax rate and still enable the different departments to function smoothly?

Are we paying too much for police protection?

Or fire protection?

Or enough for our health services?

Are we getting value for the money expended on our streets and roads?

Have we too many officials?

Is the overhead too great in our civic machine?

What measures of economy can be suggested that will not interfere with efficiency in civic government or in any of the departments?

Have we as a city done enough to provide our people with facilities for healthful recreation?

These are only a few of scores of similar questions that citizens think about at this stage of the year, and it would be interesting to have the men who have sat in office discuss these points frankly with the people, preferably from the public platform.

THE MAN WHO BLOCKS THE ROAD.

Motorists who have a habit of occupying too great share of the road—and their name is legion—should find something to think over in the case heard in the Welland Police Court last week when the driver of an automobile was fined $5.00 and costs for not pulling to the right side of the road to allow another car travelling in the same direction at a greater rate of speed, to pass.

A Provincial officer laid the charge and the magistrate who heard the case declared that there was far too much "road-hogging" and that he was determined to do what he could to put an end to such conditions.

The decision should not be regarded as an encouragement to speeders nor does it interfere at all with the right of the motorist who wants to drive slowly. It does, however, contain a warning for the driver who likes crawling along in the middle of the road and refuses to pull to one side to permit other vehicles to pass him.

There are plenty of such motorists, some of whom even hog the road when a car approaches them from the opposite direction; a practice that makes the offender a menace to the public safety.

A few cases of this kind in the public court will result in more comfortable travelling conditions and in fewer accidents along the highway.

TWO-YEAR TERMS OR ONE?

Down in Kingston the principal argument in the municipal election campaign seems to be over the question as to whether the present chief magistrate should get a second term or not, his candidature being opposed by another aspirant.

In the discussion that has already taken place the fact has been adduced that only nine times has a Kingston Mayor held office for two years.

The majority of the men who occupied the position have apparently felt it their duty to step out at the end of one year and give somebody else a chance.

In Peterborough, on the other hand, the practice has almost invariably been to permit each Mayor to occupy the chair for two terms.

Neither the Kingston nor the Peterborough custom in this respect is logical.

There is no more reason why a good Mayor should by adherence to precedent be lost to municipal life at the end of one year than that an inefficient Mayor should be given a second term simply because that has been the custom.

A private business conducted on such lines would have difficulty in keeping out of the hands of a receiver.

But then a private business would hang on to an efficient executive as long as his services could be retained, or would speedily get rid of an incapable executive, just as the case might be.

Unfortunately, business principles do not always occupy a very prominent place in municipal politics.

If they did it is possible that Kingston would have a longer list of two-term Mayors, while Peterborough would be likely to show fewer men as having occupied the chief magistrate's chair for twenty-four months.

TAXES.

Newspaper paragraphs linking up death and taxes, with such variations as the ingenuity of the writer suggests, may have had something to do with the resentment so many persons feel toward paying their share for the support of the national and other Governments under which they live, says the Kingston Whig. Be that as it may, it is certain that many individuals have an idea that they are being imposed upon when they are assessed taxes for the purpose of meeting their own obligations—the expenses of operating the system under which they enjoy the numerous advantages that go to make up the sum total of human civilization.

It will be readily conceded that taxes are always just a little higher than the value of the benefits which accrue from them, but that is a matter which should receive attention before and not after the fact. Whenever a people chooses to engage in dancing it is inevitable that the fiddler must be paid.

The nation is heavily taxed on account of the World War. It is all too true that large sums of money were spent needlessly during the conflict. Taxes are higher in this country because we did our full part in the war. Advancing costs everywhere have added to domestic taxes, provincial, county and municipal. It is costing more to operate the public schools, and the administration of county and city governments has almost become a luxury. They are governments of the people, however, and the people should not complain if they are asked to pay for them.

After all, there is no nation in the world that gives better returns for the investment than Canada. Costs are a bit high at present, but the advantages in guaranteed freedom and personal privileges are good returns for the money paid in taxes.

TAX REDUCTION.

In any comparison of taxes in the United States and Canada, regard must be had for the fact that the public finances in that country are in much better shape than they are in Canada. Though the United States may now be able to afford tax reduction, Canada can scarcely do so, and so far as the income tax is concerned, most of the attack being centred on it, this has become too great and certain a means of raising money to be given up or to any important extent reduced.

The United States proposals as outlined by A. W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, are for downward revision of all the income taxes, with sweeping cuts in surtaxes. "The benefits of the reduction," he says, "will be distributed among all classes of taxpayers and the revision generally will help to free business and industry of vexatious interferences and encourage in all lines of industry a more healthy development of productive enterprise." Mr. Mellon suggests a 25 per cent. reduction in the tax on earned income. Where the normal tax is 4 per cent. he would reduce to 3 per cent., and where the tax is 8 per cent. he would make it 6 per cent. He would begin the application of surtaxes to incomes of $10,000 instead of $6,000, and would scale the surtaxes progressively upward to 25 per cent. on $100,000.

He also contends that the fairness of taxing more lightly income from wages, salaries and professional services than the income from a business or from investment is beyond question. In the first case the income is uncertain and limited in duration. Sickness or death destroys it and old age diminishes it. In the other the source of the income continues, it may be disposed of during life or may descend to heirs. It is declared that "for a short period the surtaxes yielded much revenue, but their productivity has been constantly decreasing and experience shows that the high rates now in effect are progressively becoming less productive."

Mr. Mellon further argues that the high rates put pressure on taxpayers to reduce their taxable income, tend to destroy individual initiative and enterprise and seriously impede the development of productive business. Taxpayers subject to the higher rates cannot afford to invest in railways or industries or embark upon new enterprises in the face of taxes that will take 50 per cent. or more of any return that may be realized. In the United States, therefore, these taxpayers are withdrawing their capital from productive business and investing in tax-exempt securities or adopting other lawful methods of avoiding the realization of taxable income. The result, Mr. Mellon insists, is to stop business transactions that would normally go through and to discourage men of wealth from taking the risks which are incidental to the development of new business." Ways, he says, will always be found to avoid taxes so destructive in their nature and "the only way to save the situation is to put the taxes on a reasonable basis that will permit business to go on and industry to develop." Mr. Mellon believes that the changes he recommends will not only produce larger revenues, but will at the same time establish industry and trade on a healthier basis throughout the country. "The alternative is a gradual breakdown in the system and the perversion of industry that stifle, our progress as a nation."—Monetary Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

A Belleville candidate for Mayor has announced a real platform with a half dozen definite planks. He deserves election if only for the novelty of the thing.

The British campaign is at least providing the electors with some picturesque phrases, Lloyd George leading the way in that respect.

Lloyd George seems to be the triple threat man in the British election campaign.

If Queen's manage to defeat Regina tomorrow Toronto will at last be forced to admit that even if the Kingston students are not a good team they are the best we have in Canada this year.

We break into December tomorrow. How has that Christmas shopping been getting along?

The increasing goodness of most children these days is convincing proof that Christmas is drawing steadily nearer.

Weather sharps are unable to agree as to whether or not Canada is to have an open winter. So far at least those taking the affirmative seem to have a decided edge, but, unfortunately, there is plenty of time for the other fellows to win the argument.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Goats are nice animals. They get in bad by not bathing, but you never hear goats kick on the food.

Goat will eat tin cans, dynamite, bride's biscuits or what have you? Then eat a shoe for dessert.

A goat in Aurora, Ill., ate two sticks of dynamite and may become the Aurora Borealis soon.

Why not take this Illinois goat who eats dynamite and let him butt a nice fat bootlegger.

What could be nicer than feeding a bill collector on dynamite and then throwing rocks at him?

Goats will eat dynamite. Why not start feeding the stuff to people who are always butting in?

Wouldn't it be too awful if somebody fed football players dynamite?

Eating dynamite will ruin a goat's health. It will make him very thin and several miles wide.

What will happen to a goat who eats dynamite? Why, he will butt once and nothing else butt.

What's left of a goat that eats dynamite is the goat's goatee.

Biggest example of a goat that has been eating dynamite is Germany.

France has Germany's goat. She feeds it on dynamite. And kicks it about. Look out, France!

They milk goats in France, but Germany's goat has gone dry.

France even wants Italy's goat. But she can't get that goat. Italy's goat belongs to Mussolini.

When our own government gets the taxpayer's goat she always returns it just before election.

Bootleggers have the people's goat. But they don't feed it dynamite. Sell the people dynamite instead.

Sometimes a man gets his wife's goat. Sometimes he can't get his wife's goat because he is it.

Quickest way to get your wife's goat is by hanging around the fire until your supper gets cold.

Another way to get your wife's goat is to laugh when she starts crying.

Nicest way to get a husband's goat is by wanting him to have his hair cut like some movie actor.

HAPPIER, HEALHIER WOMEN

by thousands are known to exist in this country because they have been relieved from pain and suffering by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Science in surgery and electricity have advanced greatly during the past fifty year, but treatment of disease by old-fashioned root and herb medicines has never been improved upon. The leader of them all is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which after fifty years of success is today recognized as the standard remedy for female ills and sold everywhere for that purpose. Replies to a questionnaire recently sent out of 50,000 women by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Cobourg, Ont. proved that it benefits 98 out of every 100 women who try it. Isn't this a marvelous record for any medicine to hold?

COLIN O. CAMERON FACES CHARGE OF STEALING $500,000

From the Thornton-Davidson Stock Broking Firm of Which He Was a Partner.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—Evidence was continued here yesterday in the trial of Colin O. Cameron, charged with stealing $500,000 from the stock broking firm of Thornton-Davidson & Co. insolvent, of which he was a partner. The proceedings were again confined to further cross-examination of the authorized trustee of the firm with regard to transactions in which the accused is said to have participated. Chequett for varying amounts including one for $71,000 were filed by the prosecution and it was claimed that Cameron had benefitted by them. Nothing of a sensational nature was disclosed at yesterday's hearing of the case. It is expected that cross-examination of the trustee will take up much of the court's time.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, November 30. — Yesterday morning's receipts at the Union Stock Yards were only 140 cattle, 87 calves, 613 hogs, and 51 sheep and lambs. The receipts for the week were 7,651 cattle, and with Wednesday's sales of 1,518, the total sold for the week was 7,244 head.

With the carry-over from last week this left about 400 still for disposal yesterday. These were scattered through the yards yesterday morning, and consisted of the poorest of thin butchers, stockers, and some springers and milchers.

The Western cattle sold fairly well on Wednesday, and one load of butchers' steers brought 5 3-4 cents a pound. Yesterday's best butchers did not bring over $6.00 a cwt., and medium to good sold from $5.00 up. Any butchers' cows, canners, and bulls were readily disposed of, and there is a present good demand for these. The market closed in good condition for heavier deliveries next week, when a fair supply of the better stall-fed butchers and exporters are expected.

Calves closed the week a little easier, and only the very choicest of vealers will bring over 10 cents a pound.

Lambs were also weaker and this and the easier feeling in calves is attributed to growing consumption of pork owing to the drop that has taken place in hogs. Over 500 lambs were carried over on Wednesday, and some of these in the heavy classes were offering at 9 1-2 cents a pound for the ewes and wethers.

Lighter lambs, around 80 to 85 pounds each sold at 10 cents, and only very choice lambs will bring as high as 10 1-2 cents.

Packers are still agitating for the lower hog prices, but this week closes with only a 25-cent cut, and the price stands at $7.50 a cwt. f.o.b., and $8.00 fed and watered. Packers say their bid for Saturday's loading will be down to $7.25 a cwt.

TOURISTS' THREE-ROOM PALACE

Three rooms and bath on wheels was one of the striking novelties of the Paris Motor Salon this year. The automobile bungalow has a wheel-base of 30 feet. There are bed rooms for three people beside the bathroom kitchen and other conveniences. The driver sits in an armchair in the front room and controls a 60-horse-power engine. The vehicle sells for $13,500.

"NO PARKING" IN SWITZERLAN

Switzerland is one of the few countries in which automobiles are not favored. In the Canton of Grisons, where cars were prohibited entering the precinct, they are now allowed to enter provided they leave as quickly as possible. Motorists are not permitted to depart from the highway which conducts them in the straightest line possible to the Julian Pass and the Italian frontier.

SUPERMAN NEW SCIENCE HOPE SAYS AUSTRIAN

Not the Mailed Fist Kind, But One of Immense Culture, Says Dr. Kammerer.

TELLS EXPERIMENTS

NEW YORK, November 30. — Hopes of supermen, bred of science, instead of the mailed fist, are held out to humanity by professor Paul Kammerer, the noted biologist of the University of Vienna, who arrived in this country on the Resolute of the United States lines.

Professor Kammerer's star broke upon the scientific world last June, when he lectured for the first time at Cambridge University, England.

A starving Austrian scientist going without meals to buy animals with which to experiment, he was brought to Cambrige by the savants there. They were anxious to disprove his theory that acquired characteristics could be transmitted through heredity.

Before he left, Professor G. F. Nuttall, professor of biology at Cambridge University, said of him:

"He has made perhaps the greatest biological discovery of the century."

Ended Only Blindness.

Chief among his successful experiments were those by which he made blind newts see and their children have eyes.

If these are accepted they will prove the theories of Darwin and Mendel that the habits acquired in life are transmited to descendants. It would revolutionize many of the conceptions now held.

Professor Kammerer spoke at the Alamac Hotel of his latest results:

"I have experimented with a toad who lives in the water. In this species the father toad fastens the eggs to his leg, and gives them three weeks to hatch under water.

"When I put this toad on dry land his eggs did not grow at first because they could no longer absorb nutriment from the water. But in a few generations I found that they laid bigger eggs which did not have to grow further to hatch. Thus they had inherited what was purely an acquired characteristic.

Human Marvel Next.

"Human beings? Yes, I think the same principle could be used on human beings. Then we could produce a real superman. Not a being like that of Nietsche, the German. That was born of the fist of mail.

"Using acquired characteristics we could make a man inherit any traits we want. He could be broad in culture.

"But first my theory must be widely accepted. Even then it would be difficult to experiment with human beings."

Professor Kammerer, a collaborator of Dr. Eugene Steinach, of Vienna, discovered new methods of rejuvenation, will lecture on "Heredity and Rejuvenation."

He hopes to convince American scientists of the validity of his discoveries.

LEADER OF CLERICAL PARTY IS CHANCELLOR OF GERMAN COALITION

Dr. Wilhelm Marx Directs New Cabinet Composed of Clerical, Democratic and German People's Parties—Fend Off Elections.

ENDS CRISIS OF WEEK

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—The seven-day parliamentary crisis, which was chiefly devoted to inter-play bickerings and barterings and an abortive attempt definitely to do away with socialistic influence in national politics through the creation of a bourgeois bloc, terminated last night in a three-party compromise, by virtue of which a minority coalition, comprising members of the Clerical the German People's and the Democratic Parties, will succeed the deposed Stresemann Government, which was constituted with the same component parts.

Dr. Wilhelm Marx, the Clerical leader, will head the new cabinet as chancellor, while the other portfolios will be held by men who were in the last government.

As at present constituted the government will be:

Chancellor Dr. Wilhelm Marx.

Minister of the Interior—Dr. Jarres.

Minister of Defence — Dr. Otto Gessler.

Minister of Food — Dr. Hans Luther.

Minister of Posts — Dr. Anton Hoefle.

Minister without portfolio—Rudolph Oeser.

Dr. Stresemann is reported to have accepted the post of Foreign Minister.

Not Closely Knit

Aside from being a pronounced minority cabinet, the present revamped coalition is anything but a firmly co-ordinated three-party bloc within its own ranks, and it also will be called upon to assimilate much of the animosity and partisan acerbities which it inherits from the seven-day crisis, both with respect to the antagonism awaiting it from the German Nationalists, as well as the yet wholly problematical attitude of the United Socialists.

Although Dr. Marx announced that he would select his cabinet members irrespective of their party allegiance, he nevertheless heads an outspoken partisan ministry which seemingly once again is wholly dependent upon the charity of the Social Democrats. To this extent the present crisis ran true to traditional form, although previous parliamentary ructions rarely consumed an entire week in the process of their liquidation. President Ebert used up four chancellor candidates in his efforts to construct a party line-up which would constitute a workable coalition, and the situation only reached a state of clarification last evening after Dr. Marx was sent out as a bellwether.

Avoiding Dissolution

President Ebert preferred to risk another experment in the nature of a minority government as an alternative to dissolving the Reichstag, the latter expedient being viewed in all government circles as a doubtful venture, in the face of the uncertain attitude of the occupying powers towards national elections in the occupied areas, and also because of the visible growth of a popular movement toward the Right.

While the forced disappearance of the Reichstag probably would have met with general popular favor, the problem of new elections within the period prescribed by the constitution suggested numerous complications of a grave character, especially in connection with the future status of the Rhineland and the occupied Ruhr sector, and that President Ebert preferred a resort to dissolution of the Legislative body as an ultimate extremity. An added factor which influenced the Executive against a pre-emptory dissolution of Parliament was furnished in the growing shift toward "nationalism," which he believed would wholly preclude the possibility of conducting an orderly election in view of the existing economic and social distress.

Between Two Fires

The advent of Dr. Marx's minority cabinet merely emphasizes the continuance of the paliamentary impasse growing out of the absence of a strong majority government and to this extent the new ministry is also a purely political eleemosynary body wedged in between the traditional hostility of the German Nationalists and the precarious neutrality of the Socialists. The Nationalists will greet it with derision because of the rebuke administered to them by the bourgeoise parties in response to their attempt to barter their way into the Prussian Government in return for their entering the Reichstag coalition.

The Socialists also will occupy the mockers' seat in Parliament, in view, of the failure of the middle parties to create an all-round straight bourgeoisie coalition.

Dr. Marx, Germany's seventeenth chancellor, comes from Cologne. He is a jurist by profession and long has been active in Clerical Party politics. He has served in the Prussian diet and has been a member of the Reichstag for twelve years. He was born January 15, 1863, and is national head of the Catholic school organization in Germany.

SEVERE WEATHER SHIVERS FRANCE.

Several Deaths From Exposure As Winter Sweeps the Land.

PARIS, November 29. Canadian Press Cable via Reuters. — Except in the south, where the thermometer is well above the freezing point, wintry weather prevails in France. In the region of Belfort and also the district of St. Etienne heavy falls of snow broke down the telegraph wires and the trees.

Several deaths from exposure are reported as a result of the storms and the severe weather. These include that of a postman who died on his rounds in the country in the district of the Marne.

Rivers everywhere in France are rising. The Seine has not yet given any cause for anxiety but at Chalong the Saone has burst its banks and has risen over three feet in 24 hours. The Ain River has risen to such an extent that the factories along its sides are floded and work in them has stopped.

B. E. STEEL MINERS GIVEN A HOLIDAY.

Operations Are Suspended Until After New Year.

ST. JOHN'S, N.F., November 30 (Canadian Press). — H. B. Gillis, superintendent of the British Empire Steel Corporation at Belle Island, announced yesterday that operations at the mines there will cease to-day. Only sufficient help will be kept on to keep the mines pumped and the power house in readiness for the resumption of operations, which, it is hoped, will be about the middle of January.

About 1,000 men will be laid off.

The reason given by Mr. Gillis for the curtailment is that the company over-produced during the past year, and expectations of placing orders in Europe were not fully realised.

The Ruhr situation was largely responsible for this, Mr. Gillis said.

RUHR AFFECTS FAR ARIZONA

Copper Industry Struck By Want of Buying Power in Germany.

TUSCON, Ariz., Nov. 30.—(Associated Press)—Events in the Ruhr are reflected more profoundly in the commercial situation in Arizona than in that of any other state, according to P. G. Spilsbury, president of the Arizona Industrial Congress. He said this was because "copper is the backbone of Arizona's prosperity."

In a recent address Mr. Spilsbury stated: "On an average, Germany bought 333,000,000 pounds of copper a year before the war. Her maximum purchases in one year reached about 400,000,000 pounds, or almost as great as Arizona's annual output. Now France is not permitting Germany to export her manufactured products, with the result that Germany's purchases have ceased.

ASK FEDERAL HELP TO BUILD HIGHWAYS

Say They Are For the Benefit of Thirteen Million Motorists.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 30.—(Associated Press)—Increased Federal appropriations for highway aid will be advocated at the convention of the American Association of State Highway officials at New Orleans, December 3-6, "for the mutual profit of more than 13,000,000 American motorists and all the states," according to Charles M. Babcock, Minnesota commissioner of highways and former president of the organization. This feature of the meeting will be the particular business of Mr. Babcock.

Discussions of good roads plans, policies and progress by the association will make up the major part of the program. Delegations from nearly all states in this country and from several Canadian provinces and European countries are expected to be in attendance.

"The tax on automobiles now takes 5 cents on every dollar paid for new automobiles, tires and accessories and 3 cents of the new truck purchase dollar," said Mr. Babcock. "This revenue since 1917 has totalled $589,012,021, against $264,782,216 of Federal Highway aid appropriations during the same period. The Government is therefore using less than half the amount collected directly as taxes from highway users in the manner to give them the most direct benefits.

"Besides these Federal taxes, auto owners are paying county, township and city taxes, wheelage taxes, gasoline taxes and other levies in their cars.

"The most constructive policy demands increase in Federal highway aid appropriations, and certainly in sums closely matching Federal income from the automotive source. Any other puts our Government in the position of retarding highway development, standing in the way of the car and truck owner who would advance the good roads program along the most sound economic lines."

Famous Relic Will Be Visible Day and Night.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—(Associated Press)—The Liberty Bell, treasured American relic, will be made visible to the public, day and night, summer and winter, under plans being formulated by Wilfred Jordan, curator of Independence Hall, where the bell rests.

Heretofore thousands of visitors have failed to see the famous old bell because the building is closed to the public during certain hours. Under the new plans it is proposed to place at the rear portals of Independence Hall a Georgian grill of wrought iron work, so open in character that the bell may be clearly seen at all times. All night it will be illuminated with floodlights.

Chinese Girls Make Kimonas For Sufferers.

TIENTSIN, Nov. 30.—(Associated Press)—Chinese girl students of eight schools in Tientsin have made 1,000 kimonos for Japaneses earthquake sufferers. The workers put in all their spare time after lessons under the supervision of American missionaries.

The garments when finished were turned over to the Chinese Red Cross and by that organization to the Japaneses consul.

QUAKER CITY IS SAVING MORALS.

Police Censor All Shows in Philadelphia — Performances Confined to Stage.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27 (United Press).—The bald heads in the first rows in Philadelphia theatres have passed into oblivion and the tired business man no longer demands an aisle seat, as police are censoring all shows here.

Theatres here can not "corrupt the morals of the community," Mayor Moore has ordered and instructions have been issued to arrest proprietors of theatres presenting "indecent" shows.

"It is unlawful for any person to give or participate in exhibitions of obscene, indecent, sacreligious, seditious or immoral nature or such as might tend to corrupt morals," Mayor Moore said.

The following rules were given to the bureau of police as what may be regarded as immoral or indecent:

"The appearance on the stage of any theatre of a female performer in nude or semi-nude condition, with the body or lower limbs naked. This applies to one-piece suits, without drapery over the hips and thighs.

"The exhibition of any picture of a female performer, outside or inside of any part of a theatre or elsewhere for advertising purposes, showing the performer in indecent or suggestive pose, or costumed in any manner not permitted on the stage.

"The portrayal of a dope fiend, whether in the act of taking hypodermic injection, inhaling or taking dope, or the use in any manner of the dope intended to show the effects of the drug on a human being.

"Using on the stage of obscene, profane or immoral language, gesture, song or story.

"Dancing or other physical motions which contain suggestive contortions of the body.

"No performance may be given in the aisles or on runways. All performances must be confined entirely to the stage."

SQUEAL ONLY LOST IN PACKING PLANT TODAY UNDER MODERN SYSTEM

Unique and Interesting Uses Are Found For Slaughtered Animals — By-Product Industry Grows in Importance.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

WASHINGTON, Nov 30.—(Associated Press).—"A use for everything but the squeal," is still the motto of the meat packing industry, and truer than ever before, but there is more than that to it, says the Institute of American Meat Packers. Not only are many unique and interesting uses found for every part of the slaughtered animal, but the by products industry, as a financial proposition, rapidly is growing in importance.

The hides and bones long have furnished important returns in the shape of leathers and fertilizers, but the bones now have an important use also for medical purposes. Blood is one of the first important by-products, and serum, for use in research work as a culture for growing bacteria, is obtained by separating the corpuscles from the blood. In dry forms the serum is also used to clear the composition used in coating photographic papers.

Blood albumen is used in the manufacture of waterproof glue for veneer work, aeroplane wings and other special uses. Blood from which the fibrin has been removed is employed to set colors in gingham and other cotton goods. Leucocytic extract is made from the white corpuscles and is injected in human veins to stimulate production of these corpuscles. Blood cooked, pressed, dried and ground to powder is a specific for "scours" to which calves fed on skimmed milk are subject. Tanners use it as a surface filler for some kinds of leather, and it is used in plaster as an agent to prevent setting or hardening too quickly.

Sheep skin finds its way into the market as "chamois skin," and is also used for belts, hat bands, upholstery and other fancy uses. Hog hair is especially sought for cushion stuffing by automobile and furniture manufacturers. The fine hairs from the interior of the ears of cattle are a satisfactory high grade substitute for the camels' hair used in artists' brushes.

Wool recovered from the washed pelts of slaughtered sheep is bought by manufacturers of shoddy to be worked in with wool recovered from old woollen rags to give it life. The grease recovered in the washing when purified and prepared, is used extensively as a base for ointments and cold creams because it does not irritate the skin.

The best horns and hoofs are softened in steam, split and pressed into sheets from which are cut combs, buttons, boxes, handles and many other articles. The sawdust from cuttings finally becomes a fertilizer known as hoof meal. The inner portion of the hoof gives up the substance from which are made glue and neat's foot oil. From shin and other bones of fine texture, handles for cutlery, pipe stems, dice, chess men, electrical bushings, artificial teeth, crotchet needles bone rings for nursing bottles, and other small articles are produced. Some are carved and dyed to resemble stag horn.

Red bone-marrow is a preparation given by physicians for anemia; to make it palatable it is combined with chocolate or held in solution in alcoholic liquids. Bone charcoal is used in sugar refining and in manufacture of black pigment for paints and shoe-blacking. Some bones are prepared into what is known as case-hardening bone, used by manufacturers for hardening ball bearings and other steel products and for blueing rifle and revolver barrels.

Head bones, ears, and the interior of horns and hoofs become glue, but glue made from hides is the better, having greater strength and adhesive qualities. Bone glue, too, is used in the preparation of gummed paper and as a filler or size for glazed paper, in making matches, calcimine, fly paper, etc.

Gelatine, in the better grades, is obtained from the cleaned pates of calves, and is used for fancy desert dishes, as a stabilizer for ice cream, and in the manufacture of sensitized photographic plates.

The thyroid, parathyroid, adrenal, and other ductless glands furnish preparations widely used now in medicine. Adrenalin, or epinephrin is a powerful astringent and heart stimulant and is highly valued, costing now about $400 an ounce; but more than 130,000 sheep are required to furnish a pound of adrenalin.

Pepsin, prepared as a digestant, is obtained from the linings of hogs' stomachs. "Catgut" comes not from cats, but is obtained from the first 24 feet of the sheep's intestine, and is used for surgical sutures, drum snares, tennis racket strings, and musical instrument strings.

Glycerine is a by-product of the soap industry, and becomes nitroglycerine, dynamite and other explosives. It is used also as a vehicle for medicines, and is the manufacture of parchment paper and printers' rollers.

All waste matter that cannot be converted into some other good purpose, is finally cooked together and reduced to fertilizers rich in nitrogen, possibly to grow food crops that will be used to fatten other cattle that will be slaughtered for food and other fertilizer, and so on in an endless chain.

A novel style feature of a black velvet frock is a sleeve with a tiny puff at the shoulder, breaking the otherwise ordinary expanse of a long, tight sleeve.

HONEYMOON MUST WAIT TILL HUBBY GETS OUT OF PEN.

Frances Miller Smith and Her Husband, Harry Smith, Have Just Entered On One of the Most Tragic Honeymoons on Record.

DETROIT, Nov. 30.—The greatest test ever made of a woman's love loyalty and devotion is being imposed here on the youthful shoulders of Frances Miller Smith, girl bride of 17.

Frances and her newly wed husband, Harry B. Smith, 21, have just entered upon the initial stage of one of the most tragic honeymoons on record.

The young husband must spend the first years of his married life behind the bars of Ionia (Mich.) reformatory, where he must serve from two and one-half to seven years in expiation of a burglary of which he has been convicted.

The wife can see her husband on visitors' days only. Then she will be permitted only to murmur a few words of love and promise of loyalty through steel bars while an armed guard listens.

Wed in Cell

In the intervals between her visits the bride will work and earn the money which will provide a nest-egg for the young couple when the state permits them to begin their actual married life together.

She will allow herself no pleasures—not even an occasional motion picture show, because she must save every cent against the future and because, she says, she could not enjoy any amusement while her husband is confined.

The young couple were married in a cell in the Wayne county jail here immediately after the bridegroom's conviction. Circuit Judge Aldrich Baxter pronounced the words that made them one, while Henry Wagner, jail turnkey, and Mrs. Celia Mullin, sister-in-law of the bride, acted as best man and matron of honor.

Barely had the ceremony ended and the husband kissed his newly made bride than Smith, under an armed escort, was placed in a patrol wagon and whisked to a railway station whence a train bore him to Ionia.

School Day Romance

The bride was taken to her sister's home where the meager meal of a poor family served as her wedding supper. The next morning she started to work.

"Harry and I went to school together five years ago in Canada," the bride says.

"It was there our romance started. Even at that tender age I knew he had been made for me and I for him.

"Later my family moved to Niagara Falls and then to Detroit. Harry came here, too. We were happy going about together—he was the only 'beau' I ever had or wanted.

"Six weeks ago he took me home from a theater and left for his lodging. On the way he encountered some friends who gave him some drinks. Harry says—and I believe him—that he remembered nothing more until an officer took him into custody."

At Smith's trial it was proved that he had entered and looted a store.

"But I believe him innocent," says Frances. "And I shall patiently await his release."

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

To make an attractive sewing box take two boxes, one about seven inches square and the other five or six, so that the smaller one will fit inside the other and leave a comfortable margin

Remove the top and bottom of each box and discard the top and bottom of the smaller one Cover all surfaces inside and out, with ribbon applied with a thin spread of glue Attach the inner box to the bottom of the larger one, as shown in the sketch Add little racks of grosgrain ribbon for the necessary tools and appurtenances of sewing and then attach the top and sides

Finish all the edges with a binding of plain ribbon, and decorate the lid with a chenille tassel

FINE PROGRAMME AT MILLBROOK

Supper and Concert in the Presbyterian Church Was Largely Attended.

MILLBROOK, Nov. 28.—The fowl supper held in Grace Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening was decidedly successful from every standpoint. In spite of rather unfavorable roads and weather the attendance was large, filling the church to capacity when the programme began shortly after 8 o'clock. The tables were laid in the basement and made most attractive with floral decorations and an abundant supply of jellies, salads, homemade bread and golden butter, pies of every variety, cakes, etc., while a generous serving of fowl was placed upon every plate. Arrangements for waiting upon the guests were systematically carried out, the helpers apparently including everyone in the church who could serve in that capacity, and there was no delay in attending to the wants of all comers immediately they were seated at the tables.

Rev. G. S. Gervan filled the chair capably, explaining the general regret felt that a brother pastor, Rev. S. T. Tucker, was prevented by illness from being present. Also that one of the church managers, Mr. H. W. Johnston, who was to have assisted with the musical part of the programme, was through sickness unable to be in attendance. The accompanists for the evening were: Mrs. Jas. Hutchison, Cavan; Miss Warner, Cobourg, and Miss Ella Elson, Millbrook.

The programme was as follows, every number being heartily encored:
Instrumental duet, piano and pipe-organ, Mrs. Hayden and Miss Warner, Cobourg.
Solo, "The Valley of Laughter," by Miss Daisy Murray, Fairmount.
Reading, "Waiting for the Train," Miss Ida Payne, Pontypool.
Solo, "Bird of Happiness," by Mr. E. C. Hansman, Port Hope.
Address, Mr. F. W. Bowen, N.M.P.
Reading, "Miss Witch Hazel and Mr. Thistle Pod," by Miss Ida Payne.
Instrumental Duet, Mrs. Hayden and Miss Warner.
Address, Rev. A. H. McConnachie, Centreville.
Piano Duet, Mrs. Haydon and Miss Warner.
Vocal Duet, "The Marry May," by Misses Daisy Murray and Marie McBain
Address, A. J. Fallis, M.P.P.
Duet, "One Fleeting Hour," by Mrs. H. W. Johnston and Mrs. G. S. Gervan.
Solo, "The Rosary," Miss D. Murray (by request).
Reading, "Stumping Papa," Miss I. Payne.
Solo, "When We're Together," Mr. E. C. Hansman.
[illegible] My Gift," Miss Marie McBain.

At the conclusion of the programme an auction sale of chickens, pies, and cakes was held in the basement when the large quantity of eatables left from the supper was fully disposed of. The total receipts were nearly $240.00. This was the first time Grace church had undertaken to serve a fowl supper but its success will doubtless lead to its being made an annual affair. Practically everything was donated, the managers assuming the responsibility of providing the fowl and the ladies the baking for the occasion.

COOPERATION STRONG IN

In 1914 they did seven percent. These unions are purely economic, and have no interest in politics.

BASKET SOCIAL AT LAKEFIELD

Bliss Carman Guest at the Grove School With Mr and Mrs. A. O. Lampman-Bazaar Announced

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 28.—Monday evening was gentlemen's night at the A.Y.P.A. and the committee arranged a basket social and card party which was much enjoyed by all present. The latter part of the evening was spent in playing progressive euchre at which prizes were won by Miss Hampton and Robert Summers and Miss M. Burtchall and William Robinson (the latter being consolation prizes). After prizes for cards had been awarded, Mr. Stenner auctioned the baskets amid a good deal of merriment as in many cases the competition was very keen. The proceeds amounted to $22.30, which was a welcome addition to the treasury. The evening was very pleasant and closed with the ever popular "Sing-Song."

A PRESENTATION HELD AT WARSAW

Residents Are Moving to Peterboro — Wells Are Dry.

WARSAW, Nov. 29.—Last Wednesday evening a large number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wasson gathered in the basement of the Methodist church for a farewell social to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wasson, who are moving to Peterboro this week. Mr. Wasson was not present. Rev. F. G. Weir was chairman and conducted games and other events in his usual happy manner. Music chair and singing contests were carried on and about 10 p.m. supper provided by the ladies.

Mrs. Wasson was presented with a pretty doily by her Sunday School class, the little ones who were present, stood in a semicircle and Mrs. J. Hawthorne read the following address:

TO MRS. WASSON:—

Dear Teacher and Friend:—Your pupils of the Primary Class of the Warsaw Sabbath School, of which you are the esteemed teacher, take this opportunity afforded them by your intended removal from Warsaw, to express our appreciation of your services so cheerfully, so faithfully and so efficiently rendered.

The good example set us by your everyday walk and conversation has been an inspiration to us to follow in your footsteps, and by so doing to be found ever following after the Christ.

With all sincerity we wish you may be able to continue in your new surroundings the deep interest you have so long manifested in our Sabbath School work.

We ask you to accept this little gift to remind you of our love and respect for you.

Signed on behalf of the class,
IRWIN HAWTHORNE.
CORA CROWE.
ALEX. BOWEN.
RUSSEL GREYSTOCK.

Mrs. Wasson thanked the Class and said a few kindly words to them.

Ruth Wasson was presented with a beautiful star pin by the other members of her Sunday School class —the Star Class, and with a comb and brush by the Mission band, of which she is a member.

Mr. Robert Somers, representing the congregation, Mrs. Geo. Taylor, the choir, Mrs. R. Moore, the W.M.S. and Mrs. R. Batten, the Woman's Institute, appeared and Mr. Gordon Payne read the following address:

MR AND MRS. WM. WASSON:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Wasson,—We, the congregation, choir and Women's Missionary society of the Warsaw Methodist church, also the Warsaw Women's Institute, on hearing of your intended departure from our community, have gathered here tonight to express in a very small way our regret to sever our connection with you.

We feel that it is hard to express just what you have meant to every department of our church, and, indeed, we realize that there will be a vacancy which cannot be filled just in the way you have filled it. As a Sunday School worker, Mrs. Wasson, as a member of the choir, as a pillar of the church in every way, we feel that your part has been a great part —one that words are as poor weapons to express what we feel.

We realize the prayers of your heart that have ever ascended in behalf of your Master's work in the Warsaw Methodist circuit, and we are loath to have you remove from us.

Your ever-ready hand to help, your encouraging words of inspiration, your devotedness to anything for good in the community, makes the very thought of the loss keenly felt.

Therefore, as an appreciation of all we feel the members of the choir ask you to accept this casserole as a remembrance of the good times we have spent together.

As a little token of love, with best wishes and earnest prayers for your future, from the Woman's Missionary Society, will you please accept this Life Membership pin.

Also the Woman's Institute, in remembrance of your connection with them, would ask you to accept this contribution. (A purse).

And the congregation wish to present you and Mr. Wasson this purse, with all good wishes for your future.

Signed on behalf of the above-mentioned organizations.
MRS. GEORGE TAYLOR.
MRS. ROBERT MOORE.
MRS. TOM COOPER.
MR. ROBERT MOORE.

Mrs. Wasson thanked her friends, and said there were many reasons why she found it hard to leave Warsaw. Her aim had been to help on the Master's work, and she was glad, if in any way she had helped lead others to the Saviour. Her work would lie in new surroundings, but she was not going to far away but that she could see Warsaw and the people sometimes.

Mr. Weir made a few fitting remarks and after a solo by Mrs. Jas. Hawthorne, Mr Weir offered prayer and shortly the gathering broke up.

Gave a Ball

The ball given by U.F.W.O. Friday evening was very successful, notwithstanding the bad weather. There was a good crowd, splendid music by Warsaw orchestra. The U.F.W.O. provided the refreshments and the "Piano Fund" was materially increased.

Mrs. Wm. Payne visited friends in Warsaw last week.

Mrs. Thos. Crowe and Mr. Gerald Crowe spent a few days in Toronto last week.

Miss Alice Wasson was in the village last Wednesday.

Beginning next Sunday the Presbyterians will worship with the Methodists in the evening, and the Methodist people are invited to worship with the Presbyterians in the morning.

The rain on Monday was very welcome for there is still a great shortage of water. Friday's storm made people who still have cattle on summer pastures, hurry them home.

Heckler Calls L. George a "Humbug"

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press Cable) — Lloyd George addressed several meetings and north Wales yesterday. He told a great crowd at Rochdale that the government was asking the country to shoot the Niagara rapids. When he declared that the speech of Neville Chamberlain in London Wednesday meant taxation of food including meat an interrupter shouted: "That is a Liberal lie and you know it. Your are a humbug. Go back to Wales."

In another speech Lloyd George described the socialist group as an alligator—all tail and mouth.

All the Conveniences In Omemee Farm House

OMEMEE, Nov 29.—Mr. Ira Re hill moved into his new house on Wednesday. This house is probably the only one of ts kind, in this vicinity, being a large frame structure with a six inch concrete veneer exterior and shingled with asbestos shingles. It is a real modern farm dwelling having an electric light system, running water and bath, hard wood floors, etc., and when completely finished, will be a credit to the owner who has done much of the building himself.

Its Quality Proclaims It Thoroughbred

IN choosing your Christmas gift your search for unusual quality in silverplate will lead you to purchase Holmes & Edwards. It combines all the merits that make a perfect gift—beauty, utility and lasting satisfaction.

Holmes & Edwards is protected at those points where wear comes most, by solid blocks of sterling silver, fused in before plating (SILVER INLAID) or by a heavy extra coating of pure silver (SUPER PLATE). Naturally this superior quality means a higher priced silverplate, but it is well worth it—for the years that are to come.

Any good jeweler will gladly explain these two processes to you. Make it a point to ask about them.

ONTARIO ENTERED OVERSEAS MARKET

Province Will Tap the Labor Resources of the Old Country — Several Appointments Made.

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press.) — Plans to extend Ontario's representation overseas, which have been maturing for the past several months, were given formal effect yesterday when the Ferguson Cabinet passed orders in council establishing an Ontario office in Glasgow and appointing three officials to undertake the field work in Great Britain in connection with the province's immigration policy.

The motive which underlies this important enlargement of the Province's British service is the Ferguson Government's intention to carry on a campaign for an immigration of the most desirable type, both of farm and of domestic workers, and the determination, also, to make the functions of the Agent General more generally important than heretofore, looking to him to handle not only matters of concern to agriculture, but also specific inquiries affecting Ontario industry. The Government's immigration policy, as formulated by Hon. J. S. Martin, after a careful survey both here and in Great Britain is the moving factor in directing the government to adopt the plans which it ratified yesterday.

With a view to paying particular attention to Scotch immigration as well as to English, an office is being opened in Glasgow and being placed in charge of J. P. Jafferay, a former editor of the Galt Reporter, and at present the President of the Ontario Horticultural Society.

Operating also in both England and Scotland, Captain Frank Stewart, a farmer resident of Muskoka, is appointed to work in co-operation with the booking agents, his duties being to lecture to the intending emigrants who have booked their passages and to urge upon them the opportunities which Ontario offers to the agricultural settler.

The remaining two appointments made yesterday were of women, and are the result of the earnest effort which Hon. Mr. Martin intends to make to secure domestic workers for the farm wives of the province. Mrs. Horace Parsons, widely known in connection with the work of the National Council of Women and Miss Constance Boulton were appointed to undertake lecturing tours of six months' duration in the British Isles, their duties being to impress upon prospective women emigrants the fact that Ontario offers assured employment to thousands of domestic workers.

BRITISH TO HELP AMERICA TRAP ALL THE RUM-RUNNERS

LONDON, Nov. 29.—(United Press)—Nov 29—It is stated authoritatively that the new coastal limit for search and seizure of rum runners which is under discussion between Great Britain and the United States is likely to be considerably more than twelve miles.

As previously reported, the treaty merely specifies, a limit of an hour's steaming distance from the American coast leaving the question of the actual limit to be fixed by private negotiations between Britain and America. The British, it is indicated intend to interpret the treaty in the most liberal terms, doing their best to co-operate in eliminating smuggling off the American coast.

FORMER BANK MANAGER CHARGED WITH THEFT

STRATFORD, Nov. 29.—(Canadian Press)—Everett E. Lewthwaite, former manager of the Merchants' Bank of Canada, and recently manager of the Bank of Montreal in Mitchell, who confessed that he had taken some $14,000 belonging to the Merchants' Bank, and who is waiting to be sentenced on a theft conviction, was engaged with the bank officials to-day going over the various accounts to point out where false entries had been made. It is expected, with Lewthwaite's assistance, the investigation will be expedited. Lewthwaite was in charge of Provincial Officer Kirby.

A BARRYMORE PREMIERE

(By ALICE ROHE)

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (United Press).—We have long since discovered that a first night doesn't make a play any more than the traditional swallow makes the Spring. It is, however, an infallible sign of the popularity of a star. That is why interest in an Ethel Barrymore premiere has just a bit more well, affectionate enthusiasm, than that of any other American star. "Everyone" is present and "everyone" is eager to see if the new play is worthy of Ethel.

This time Zoe Atkin's comedy was put to the test before a brilliant audience, with opposite stage boxes emitting applause from Mme. Tchekova and Max Reinhardt on one side and "Uncle" John Drew on the other.

"A Royal Fandango" is a light and whimsical comedy concerning a somewhat flighty and spoiled princess, mother of three children, who meanders through life amusing herself with one love affair after another. This time the caprice is for a pure young matador, who has been guarded against the world by a stern mother.

The New York critics, almost without exception, while proclaiming Miss Barrymore's superlative charm, bewailed the fact that the play started out promising emotional love romance and didn't emote, but fooled away in satirical laughter at emotions. With all due respect to the New York critics it seems to me the whole point and delight of Zoe Atkin's comedy is that she didn't emote.

The plot wobbles and is inconsequential, to be sure, and there are a few tiresomely talking characters, like the cousin of the matador—but the lines that fall to Ethel Barrymore are priceless in their fine humor, and the satire is subtle and authentic. To be sure, the play was obviously made to order for Miss Barrymore—but be glad about it. Seldom has she sparkled with such delightful comedy and never has she looked more beautiful. The play, presented by Arthur Hopkins, at the Plymouth, has the novelty of a new Argentine leading man—good looking and a good actor—Jose Alessandro.

The old platitudes that Art imitates Nature and that life offers more dramas than the stage have been verified again. Two situations—not due to playwrights—have changed first performance audiences into seas of hysterical emotion. One was the first appearance upon a New York stage of a young girl of 17, who, before the show was over, had her name blazing in electric lights beneath that of her famous father at the Globe Theatre. The father's name is, of course, Fred Stone, and the daughter's name is Dorothy—the dancing delight who is acclaimed the greatest "discovery" in recent stage history.

The other bit of drama was no less sensational. It was the return of an older woman. Cecelia (Cissie) Loftus, after an absence of ten years due to a series of operations, terminating in a pathetic addition to drugs—"came back." Restored in health and spirit, a bit plumper, with even more charm. Her inimitable art of mimicry was perfect as ever. The overpowering welcome given her at the Palace by a distinguished audience was one of those rare happenings which make history on Broadway.

HIGH LIVING COST STAGGERS GERMANY

At $1 a Pound For Meat, All Germany Goes Hungry--Different Kinds of Money.

(By CARL D. GROAT)

BERLIN, Nov 30 (United Press). — Germany is staggering beneath a high-cost-of-living problem complicated by paltry wages, unemployment, food shortage and currency confusion.

Prices for necessities are in many cases double and treble those of America or England. Meats lately have been running from 50 cents to $1 or more per pound. That means no meat for workers or middle class folk, especially as workers, most of them on short time, have earned of late not above $1 a week.

At the moment there is a serious effort to stabilize the workers' wages and to give them a somewhere near decent amount in a currency that does not devaluate from hour to hour.

Tragedy to Laborer

The tragedy of the laborer in the past few months, even years, for that matter, has been that on payday his stipend sufficed only for a few loaves of bread and some potatoes, while if he held it a couple of days the mark slid and the prices elevated so that his pay was literally nothing in buying power.

Now Germany has a series of different kinds of money-paper marks, "gold loan currency," so-called dollar bills (that is, obligations backed by dollars assembled by the Government) and the new rentenmark.

The "Goldanleihe," or gold loan, has been accepted with "Dollarschatzanweisungen," the dollar bills above mentioned, as stable money.

The rentenmark, issued in mid-November, is based upon the hypothecation of industrial and agrarian values, but everything points to the likelihood that it will slump just like its predecessor, the paper mark. The backers of this money demand a slice of many millions as a loan, which they intend to pay back after the devaluation has set int.

German industry is so used to trading on this basis—that it is hard to get away from it. But labor and the masses in general insist upon an end to this sort of economy.

Won't Sell for Paper

Add to the above mentioned problems the problem of food shortage and it is easy to understand the sporadic rioting and the political upheaval which have been upsetting Germany for some months. The food shortage is artificial. There is a bumper harvest, but the growers have held back their crops because they wanted no paper marks. Also they foresaw that the time would come when they could later release their supplies for political purposes—namely, for popularizing the new reactionary regime.

Bread and potatoes are Germany's staples. They cost more than in America, while the worker's earning capacity is not more than one twenty-fifth to one-fiftieth of that of the American laborer. Gas for cooking runs four to eight times as much as in America. Meat eating is becoming a rarity even in wealthier families. Beer, the national beverage, is likewise becoming a luxury, as are coffee and wine.

The public feeding stations, the bread lines, the "goulasch cannons" are increasing. And with their growth grows the despair of a once proud people.

PREMIER MASSEY OF NEW ZEALAND IS IN BELFAST

BELFAST, November 29. Premier Massey of New Zealand, speaking here to-day, declared the day of universal peace, would be brought a great deal nearer if Great Britain and the United States could be induced to stand together for one purpose, and one purpose only. This was for them to say to those nations inclined to draw the sword that disputes between the nations must be referred to and settled by an international arbitration court.

Until that time had come, however, he declared that Great Britain should provide sufficient naval defence against a case of need.

Famous Chemist & ZAM-BUK

A pure herbal emollient of great healing power in skin diseases and injuries—this is shown in a report on Zam-Buk by that eminent Doctor of Science, Mr. Wentworth Lascelles-Scott.

Zam-Buk has won world-wide repute for its reliability in troubles like eczema, poisoned wounds, ringworm, bad legs, etc., now comes Dr. Scott's evidence.

Scientific Excellence.

"My exhaustive analysis proves that Zam-Buk is possessed of antiseptic and bacteriacidal power which promptly alleviates skin disorders due to parasites and pathogenic organisms. Moreover its astringent and balsamic constituents render Zam-Buk an emollient of rare healing power.

"Zam-Buk's constituents are exclusively of herbal origin, it contains none of the irritating mineral drugs and animal fats commonly found in ordinary ointments.

"In my opinion Zam-Buk, is well adapted for treatment of superficial injuries and prevalent skin disorders."

LESS PRESSURE IN NEW CUSHION TIRE.

This Way the Tire Is Found to Be Not So Taut, Hard and Drum Like.

The principle of the balloon or air-cushion tire, according to James E. Hale, one of its designers, lies in the combination of low air pressure and contact area of tire and ground.

"In a general way," Hale's explanation goes, "the contact area of the tread with the road expressed in square inches, multiplied by the internal air pressure, will give a figure which approximates the load carried by the tire."

For instance, a tire showing 20 square inches of contact with the road requires 50 pounds of pressure to carry a 1,000-pound load. If the pressure could be reduced—which would require increase of road contact—greater cushioning effect would result for the same 1,000-pound load.

But reduced air pressure and greater road contact bring another element to which the tire engineers have had to pay serious attention. That is what they call the deflection of the tire, or the amount a tire bends or drops under its weight.

This degree of deflection, is exceeded, would result in harm to the tire.

Pliability Increased

According to Hale's figures, a 33 by 5 thick wall, pneumatic tire, under a 1,700-pound load and 80 pounds pressure, would bend, or show an actual deflection of .95 inch. Under the same load, and 35 pounds pressure—which would be the amount required in proportion to contact area—a 7.50-inch air-cushion tire would drop 1.68 inch.

That is not too much of a deflection in the new form of tire, according to Hale. This conclusion he reached after experiment and study of two causes for tire failure due to deflection. There were tread and ply separation, and too much sidewall flexing, resulting in fabric failure on the inside plies.

The thin walled air-cushion tire, however, permits of much greater sidewall flexing than the thick-wall tire. With lower air pressure, the bursting stresses on the carcass are low enough to make less plies necessary. The result is that a greater degree of deflection is made possible.

From this thin-wall and less-ply construction of the balloon tire comes the question of its druability as compared with the older pneumatic. There is little cause to be concerned about that, says Hale.

No Mileage Loss

"We have run a total of 850,000 tire miles under test observations," he says in his report, "and evidence points to average mileage at least as high as those enjoyed with regular pneumatic tires. The character of the failures will unquestionably be somewhat different.

"For instance, ply separation and tread separation will be minimized in air-cushion tires, and with these eliminated the most prominent troubles will be fabric breaks in the carcass; also punctures and rapid tread wear on the front wheels when they are not aligned properly.

"Many people have questioned whether with such a thin tire, punctures will not be sufficiently numerous to be of considerable annoyance. There are no grounds for concern on this score. In 50,000 car miles of operation on our test fleet, there were seven punctures, and in 100,000 miles of operation in taxi cab service, there was an average of one puncture for each 3,700 miles.

"The explanation is found in the fact that the tire, being not so taut and hard and drum-like, yields rather than be pierced by the puncturing object."

"He was replete and comfortable and almost happy. The occasional silences were now merely agreeable."

XVIII (Continued)

"What were they?" growled Clayring. He remembered with dismay that he hadn't even sent her the usual tribute of flowers. There had been no place in his mind for the small amenities.

"A verboten romance called 'Jurgen.' Why verboten? Because it is too good for the American public? 'Main Street.' For me, it might as well have been written in Greek. 'The Domesday Book.' A great story. 'Seed of the Sun,' to enlighten me on the 'Japanese Question.' 'Cytherea.' Wonderful English. Why is it not also verboten?"

"Even censors must sleep. Is that all he sent you?"

"I am waiting for the chocolates—but possibly those are sent only by the very young men to the very young girls."

He glowered at his plate. "Do you like chocolates? I'll send some tomorrow. I've been very remiss, I'm afraid, but I've lost the habit."

"I detest chocolates."

Squabs and green peas displaced the entree. The burgundy was admirable.

Once more he was permitted to gaze at her eyelashes. He plunged desperately. "The name Marie does not suit you. If ever I know you well enough I shall call you Mary. It suits your vast repose. That is why ordinary Marys are nickuamed 'Mamie' or 'Mame.'

"I was christened Mary." She raised her eyes. They were no longer wise and unfathomable. They looked as young as his own. Probably younger, he reflected. She looked appealing and girlish. Once more he longed to protect her.

"Do you want to call me Mary?" he asked, smiling.

"I hardly know whether I do or not. . . . There's something else I should tell you. I swore I'd never ask you any more questions—but I—well, Diuwiddie kept on the scent until he was laid up. One of the Thornhills verified your story in so far as he remembered that a cousin had settled in Virginia and then moved on to Paris. There his information stopped. . . . But . . . Dinwiddie met a Countess Loyos at dinner."

"Countess Loyos?"

"Yes—know her?"

"Mathilde Loyos? She is one of my oldest friends."

"No doubt you'd like to see her, I can ger her address for you."

"There is nothing I want less than to see her. Nor any one else from Austria—at present."

"I think this could not have been your friend. She emphatically said—I am afraid of being horribly rude——"

"Ah!" For the first time since he had known her the color flooded her face; then it receded, leaving her more pale than white. "I understand."

"Of course, it may be another Countess Loyos. Like the Zattiantys, it may be a large family."

"As it happens there is no other."

Silence. He swore to himself. He had no desire to skate within a mile of her confounded mysteries, and now like a fool he had precipitated himself into their midst again. But if she wouldn't talk. . . .

"Suppose we talk of something else," he said hurriedly. "I assure you that I have deliberately suppressed all curiosity. I am only too thankful to know you on any terms."

"But you think I am in danger again?"

"Yes, I do. That is, if you wish to keep your identity a secret—for your own good reasons. Of course, no harm can come to you. I assume that you are not a political refugee—in danger of assassination!"

"I am not. What is Mr. Dinwiddie's inference?" She was looking at him eagerly.

"That you really are a friend of Countess Zattiany, but for some motive or other you are using her name instead of your own. That—that—you had your own reasons for escaping from Austria——"

"Escaping?"

"One was that you might have got into some political mess—restoration of Charles, or something—"

She laughed outright.

"The other was—well—that you are hiding from your husband."

"My husband is dead," she said emphatically.

He had never known that clouds, unless charged with thunder, were noisy. But he heard a black and ominous cloud gather itself and roll off his brain. Had that, after all, been . . . Nevertheless, he was annoyed to feel that he was smiling boyishly and that he probably looked as saturnine as he felt.

"Whatever your little comedy, it is quite within your rights to play it in your own way."

"It is not a comedy," she said grimly.

"Oh! Not tragedy?" he cried in alarm.

"No—not yet. Not yet! . . . I am beginning to wish that I had never come to America."

"Now I shall ask you why."

"And I shall not tell you. I have read your Miss Dwight's novel, by the way, and think it quite hideous."

"So do I. But that is the reason of its success." And the conversation meandered along the safe bypaths of Ameri an fiction through the ices and coffee.

RED MAN WORSHIPS IN RED MAN'S WAY.

The Vision of the Flashing Eyed Indian Priest Has

RESERVE, Wis., Nov. 29.—Up and down the Chippewa Reservation, on the shores of beautiful little Lac Court Oreilles, echo the bells of St. Mary's.

They are calling the red man to worship, in the red man's way, before the red man's own altar.

The vision of a flashing-eyed Indian priest has been fulfilled.

The "splendid" church he dreamed about morning after morning at the altar of the humble chapel wherein he formerly ministered to his people, has become, at last, a reality.

Like Medicine Lodge

But to Rev. Philip Gordon, himself a full-blooded Chippewa, "splendid" did not mean a many-towered edifice like the cathedral of Cologne, nor one with gilded dome like St. Peter's of Rome.

To him it meant a building of field stones, without, and within dark like a medicine lodge.

When there was sufficient money to begin construction, Father Gordon took his problem to Alexander C. Eschweiler, Milwaukee architect.

Over and over he repeated the injunction: "Remember this is to be an Indian's place of worship, not a white man's church."

Built by Parishioners

Today the building nears completion. Services already are being held in it.

Almost all the work has been done by the Indian parishioners. Split granite stones, which had lain for ages nearby, form the walls. The deep roof, covered now with building paper, is to be broken by rough cedar shingles, called "shakes."

Into the windows, George W. Meuller of Milwaukee has worked symbolic designs that speak to the red man in familiar terms. There are the many arrows, crossed calumets, the rising sun, the pipes of peace, the war-time arrows, and the Christian cross.

The hand-hewn rafters will be stained in brilliant reds, blues and orange after the fashion in which the red man adorns his long hickory bows. Deerskins will hang upon the church's walls.

And the Chippewa women are weaving the altar cloths, incorporating into them images of things accounted powerful in the medicine lodge.

Seven Bells

The tower still lacks many feet of completion. It has been temporarily roofed over. Yet it meets the requirements. It is large enough to contain the seven bells supplying the last touch in Father Gordon's dream picture.

And it is these bells that call dark-eyed Chippewa braves and squaws and papooses to worship their God, in the red man's church, in the red man's way.

The largest cactus known has a limb spread of 40 feet.

LINDSAY MAN FOUND HEALTH IN SUNSHINE, EXERCISE AND SIMPLE, INEXPENSIVE DIET

Under the caption "What is the Secret of Long Life?" The Toronto Star Weekly, of Nov. 24th, published the following sketch of the career of a well known Lindsayite in the person of Mr. W. A. Goodwin:

William A. Goodwin of Lindsay, has also been good enough to write in the following bright way about a career which began in Lincolnshire, England, on June 11th, 1840, three years after Queen Victoria ascended the throne. "With a brother and our parents, I emigrated to America in 1847, settled in the state of New York and attended school at Rochester. When I was ten, my father at the call of the late Art Massey moved us to Canada. We lived two years at Newcastle, moving later to Cobourg where my father bought a lot and built us a home.

"I attended school for two years and was then apprenticed to the painting and decorating business, working on the town hall to make ready for the reception of the young Prince of Wales on the occasion of his visit to Canada. I well remember a ride on the same train with the Prince across Rice Lake to the town of Peterboro. After that I spent some weeks in Hamilton decorating for his coming visit there.

"When attending school in Cobourg I fell deeply in love with the charms of the fair Emma C. After some years we were married and moved to the county of Victoria, where by industry and attention to business, we built our home on Cambridge street and raised a good family of children.

"At about the age of thirty-one while decorating a farm house with Paris green, I contracted a severe complaint lasting over six months. The following spring I found it advisable to take treatment for my trouble at the growing water-cure establishment at Battle Creek, Mich.

Threw Stuff Away

"After a very enjoyable month there, while on my way home I was induced to consult a prominent doctor in Hamilton who, after a thorough examination, said that unless I used some special medicines which he would prescribe he did not expect me to live more than three or four months. Symptoms were certainly serious. However, after getting home again I threw away the doctor's drug store remedies and decided to stick to the hygienic system. I quit the painting, took up canoe and boat building and eventually found Battle Creek treatment successful. It was, in a few words: Not to worry—live in the sunshine as much as possible—bath treatment every second day—rise early—breakfast at 8—an hour's rest at noon—dinner at 1.10—a health lesson at 3 p.m.—a walk or play the balance of the day and to bed at 8 p.m.—simple, natural and inexpensive. On this system I was well in less than two months.

"Lindsay at that time was noted for its fishing and hunting facilities. My mother, myself and friends invariably took a two or three weeks holiday in the woods and over the beautiful back lakes of Ontario. I am free to admit that those excursions added years to vitality to those who enjoyed them. A daily run in a canoe of 30 or 40 miles with the usual portages appeared better than an apple a day to keep the doctor away."

"You inquire if I have been a total abstainer and a non-smoker. You bet, as the boy said. At the age of 14 I was treated to a cigar and at 15 to a cup of whiskey, after which when in contact with a bit of our Canadian winter, nature convinced me that all such treatments are delusions and destructive to health and permanent happiness.

"Nor do I indulge in tea or coffee. My experience at Battle Creek eradicated that pernicious habit.

Practicing at 84

"About exercise—I take a reasonable share of Sanford Bennett's surprising experience that is well worth reading about. After a hand rub and a bath, tepid or cool, according to temperature, a glass of distilled water before a half hour's walk makes you ready for a suitable breakfast. As far as games are concerned, I was always fond of skating, old-fashioned dancing, snow-shoeing and croquet. I have always been careful about diet though having first class digestion. I prefer fruit, porridge or potatoes to meat, stews or denatured flour combinations."

DELIGHTFUL NEWS

As the parting instructions were being given, the fresh young salesman picked up his grip and started on his initial trip. "Good luck to you," said his chief, "wire us important news."

The following day this message was received: "Reached here safely, good room with bath, feeling fine."

The manager wired back: "So glad, love and kisses, goodby."—Forbes

Opening of TOYLAND
TO-MORROW (Saturday) MORNING at Nine O'clock.

This is the radio message sent to us by Santa Claus last night:

Iceland, November 30, 1923.

To Richard Hall & Son, Ltd.,
Peterboro, Ont., Canada.

Dear Sirs,—Having heard that you are opening your Toyland tomorrow, I decided that I would visit Peterboro myself just to see all the boys and girls of that city. As there is a scarcity of snow in the country I will come as far as Toronto by aeroplane, where I will have to leave my machine for repairs. I will take the train from there for Peterboro, arriving at the G.T.R. Station at 10 o'clock.

Could you have a car at the station to meet me? I would like to drive around for an hour to see your city, then I would come to your Toy Department at 11 o'clock.

Be sure to tell all the boys and girls that I am coming, and tell them to have their letters ready for me Saturday morning.

Good-bye until I see you Saturday morning in the Big Toy Department of your store,

SANTA CLAUS.

We invite every girl and boy to meet Santa Claus at the Station at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, and then to greet him at the Store at eleven o'clock.

Be sure to have your letters ready!

BANK EMPLOYEES TIP OFF BANDITS

Hold-up Men Name Murderers of Bank Messengers—Twenty Cities Being Combed.

NEW YORK, November 30. Canadian Press. — With a score of detectives combing twenty United States and Canadian cities the police to-day expected the early apprehension of the slayers of the west end bank messengers two weeks ago.

Two detectives were sent to Toronto yesterday, while others followed trails to other cities.

The desire for revenge prompted alleged accomplices, Barlow and Joseph Diamond, Anthony Pantano and Nicholas Lucciano, all indicated in the crime, to name the actual murderers, who are known to the detectives through their records.

The men under arrest claim they were "double crossed" by the other three. The confession of Pantano yesterday revealed a new branch of crimality, in which tips from bank employees have resulted in the hold-up of messengers delivering large payrolls. Pantano faces a charge of murder in the first degree.

According to the police one of the slayers boasted to his confederates that he had "fifteen notches in his gun."

THE WEATHER.

The heavy rain of last night and to-day will relieve to some extent the anxiety that was being felt regarding the water supply for power purposes. The total up to noon was almost an inch (.91) and more has since fallen. Farmers have told me that numerous wells have been dry this fall, and in some cases they have had to haul water long distances While the rain will have its effect on the small streams, it will not benefit the wells at least immediately, for those who have made a study of the subject state that it takes nine months to a year for the rainfall to reach the lower level of the ordinary well.—W.P.

Canada recently received an order from Rumania for a $9,000,000 deal in woolen textiles.

GAVE PRESENTATION TO MISS BEATRICE BUCKLEY

The members of the choir of St. Joseph's church, Douro, gathered at home of Miss Beatrice Buckley, whose marriage took place on Tuesday of this week, presented her with a handsome piece of silverware, accompanied by an address read by Mrs. John Sheehan, as follows:

"Dear Friends: We are assembled here to extend our good wishes to one of our members, in the person of Mrs. Charles A. Perdue. We wish to thank you most heartily, Mrs. Perdue, for your unfailing and prompt response in the choir work, in the number of years during which you have been one of its members; also for your kindness to the members, and for your zeal and cheerfulness in the work, no matter how hard it was.

"We wish to extend to you an invitation to resume in future your old place in the choir. We wish to congratulate Mr. Perdue on his splendid choice of you for his partner, and hope that your married life may be a long and happy one, or as you heard this morning in the marriage ceremony, a deeper and wider life. We will now conclude by wishing you and your devoted husband every earthly happiness and prosperity in the new life you have entered, and may the praises of Him you have so often sung shower down abundance of graces and blessings on you and your husband.

"We ask you to accept this little gift as a token of remembrance from your old choir friends.

"Signed on behalf of St. Joseph's choir, Douro, by Mabel Allen (organist), Kathleen Towns, Seraphine O'Brien, Hazel Heffernan, Clara Condon, Florence Allen, Cyril Lee, Mary Whibbs, Mary Quinlan and John Sheehan.

The bride replied gracefully in a brief, appropriate acknowledgment.

LEADER OF ROBBERS GOT LONG SENTENCE

Russell Perrin, Said to Have Been Implicated in Peterboro' Hold-up, Sent to Penitentiary.

ORILLIA, Nov. 30.—Russell Perrin, the last of the principals in the Oro Creamery, Manning Hardware and other robberies, was sentenced yesterday afternoon to five years and six months in the penitentiary.

Perrin was brought here from Toronto by Provincial Police and was tried before Magistrates Clark of Orillia, Gover of Coldwater and Heuson of Penetanguishene. He pleaded guilty to complicity in the robbery of Manning's hardware at Coldwater, but not guilty to robbing the Oro Creamery or the hold-up of Lorne Draper in Flos township.

William Anderson and Owen Emith, two of his accomplices in these robberies, gave evidence against Perrin. In his own defence Perrin said that he went to Draper's to steal some whiskey, but had nothing to do with the hold-up. The evidence was very convincing and showed Perrin to be the ringleader in all the robberies. Perrin lost a leg overseas.

Second Largest Grain Shipment This Season.

FORT WILLIAM, Nov. 30—Although not quite the record day for clearances this Fall yesterday is a good second, with 5,202,000 bushels of grain sent down the lakes, about 200,000 less than the biggest day of the season. This quantity was carred on twenty boats, an average of over 250,000 each the United States steamer H. G. Dalton taking 420,000 bushels, the largest cargo of wheat to Buffalo, while the Canadian boat, J. H.G. Hagarty, took 360,000 bushels to Port Colborne.

GERMAN GOVT. PLANNED SINKING OF LUSITANIA

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).—Special to Times from Washington states that proof that the German Government deliberately planned and ordered the sinking of the Lusitania is contained in the secret archives of the United States government and has been submitted to the mixed claims commissions in support of the demand for full payment of all losses of life and property sustained by United States citizens.

The contention of German Government is that only persons entitled to claim as a result of the sinking of Lusitania, if any, would be dependents or legal representatives of descendants. Robert Bonynge, representing United States Government who is attempting to controvert the German contention says exhibits show Germans turned over in their minds sinking of some big British liner manifestly with purpose of terrifying British shipping.

Society

Mrs. Michael O'Brien of Toronto, is visiting relatives in the city.

Guests from out of town, who attended the wedding of Miss Beatrice Buckley and Mr. Charles A. Perdue in Douro on Tuesday last, included Mr. and Mrs. John Perdue of Windsor and Miss Clara Young, of Young's Point. Mr. and Mrs. D. McCarthy, 449 Rogers street, also attended the wedding.

The Rt. Rev. Felix Couturier, D.D., Bishop of Alexandria, who will preach in St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday evening, is a member of the Dominican Order, and before coming to Ontario was a prominent member of the Order in England. During the Great War he was Chaplain to the British forces, and wears two decorations from the King, the Order of the British Empire and the Military Cross.

Mr. Duncan Walker was called to Chatham, yesterday on account of the illness of his brother.

HOLDING BAZAAR

A trio of ladies' societies of St. James' Methodist church is holding a sale of work and cooking to-day and to-morrow in the store on Charlotte street, formerly occupied by Mr. J. John. Three Bible classes of the church have united; the Cheerful Workers, with Mrs. E. Davis as president and taught by Mrs. J. N. Welbourn, the King's Own class, president, Mrs. E. Lee, taught by Mrs. Jas. Richardson, and Mrs. J. Fairbrother's class of young girls.

The ladies are selling some excellent home-made cooking and serving light lunches and afternoon tea in the rear room Their supply of Christmas gifts includes quantities of pretty aprons and many of the factory cotton samples of unbleached material which is so popular just now, with applied designs of pale linens.

There are several very dainty tables at this small sale. The new vanity sets for buffet or dresser are exceptionally pretty; small, triangular-ended pieces of pure linen worked in solid embroidery, and the luncheon sets of pale cream factory cotton, worked in colored silks, are novel and very attractive.

Natural linen runners have filet ends and one is done in slipper cotton in chenille effect, with raised flowers.

There are filmy boudoir caps and babies' wear in light, soft wools and pale hues, along with many useful articles in underwear and table and bedroom linen.

CARD PARTY AND DANCE WAS HELD

Under the Auspices of the St. Peter's Holy Name Society Was a Very Successful Affair.

The invitation dance and card party held last evening at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum under the auspices of St. Peter's Holy Name Society, was a very successful and enjoyable affair. Visitors were present from Cobourg and Lindsay thirty-one tables of cards were played, and nearly a hundred more took advantage of the excellent dancing floor in the assembly hall and the tuneful music provided by Follis' four-piece orchestra.

Prizes for cards were donated by Messrs. C. H. Pennefather, J. T. O'Connel, Lee Young and Lowes Brothers, New Centre Meat Market. Mrs. F. Fontaine, Sr., and W. S. Merrell captured a turkey apiece, as first prize, and the pair of chickens and side of bacon, which constituted second prizes, went to Mrs. J. R. Corkery and W. Y. Scollard.

Ladies forming the committee on reception and refreshment arrangements included Mesdames J. P. Finn, Jas. J. Doris, J. W. Fitzgerald, J. E Sullivan, M Henry, H. Owen.

Members of the men's committee in charge were: Messrs. N. Tobin, G. Tedford, P. R. J. MacPherson, Wm. Bennett, Ray Bennett, E. Cronin, J. Hanrahan.

THREE CARS COAL WERE DISPOSED OF

City Will Still Be Short of Enough to Satisfy Judgment.

The three cars of coal, alleged property of Miss Sophie Kohen, which were seized some weeks ago to satisfy a judgment in favor of the city, have been sold by public auction.

The seizure was made by Deputy Sheriff F. J. Hall on a writ issued to the sheriff, and although difficulty was encountered in obtaining a release from customs of two cars billed in bond, this was overcome by a special permit obtained from Ottawa.

One of the cars was obtained by the city at $10.75 a ton, and will be used in the City Buildings. The remaining two cars were taken by A. Thompson at $10.60 a ton.

It is believed that when accounts are totalled the city will be $200 or $300 short of satisfying the judgment in its favour, there being over $500 demurrage and freight charges against the shipment.

ONLY ONE OUT OF FIVE WILL SAY THAT HE WILL COME OUT

With Characteristic Modesty Retiring Aldermen Decline to Unfold Secret—Mayor Taylor Will Run if Ratepayers Want Him.

Alderman Nagel Phelan is the only one of the five aldermen whose terms end this year who has definitely stated that he will enter the lists on January 1 for re-election. When asked by the Examiner whether he would be a candidate he replied, "Sure—for something."

Mayor W. H. Taylor would make no statement at present. "It is not for me to say," he declared. "It is for the people."

Alderman Stocker, when asked for a statement said: "Nothing doing." Alderman E. M. Turner would not say whether or not he would return to do battle at the coming polls, and Alderman M. McIntyre had nothing to say.

Alderman W. T. Holloway said his position is still indefinite, but from other reliable authority it was learned that it is more than probable that this member will be in the running for election to some civic position.

Among the possibilities in the Mayoralty field are now mentioned Alderman Nagel Phelan and J. J. Turner. Mr. Turner is not at present in the city, but authoritative circles mention him as the logical business candidate.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS IMPRESS WAR DEFEAT ON GERMAN PEOPLE

Middle Class Has Been Reduced to Penury — Factories Are Either Closed or Working Part Time — Food Riots An Everyday Occurrence.

BITTERNESS SHOWN.

BERLIN, Nov. 30—Even the bitterest enemies of Germany, the enemies who have been most insistent in their declarations that Germany does not realize she has lost the war, would probably feel that Germans very generally realize their defeat if they could see the average German family struggling for sufficient food in the midst of unemployment, currency collapse and indisposition of producers to exchange products of the land for paper marks which may be obtained by the billion in exchange for a single dollar.

When former Chancellor Cuno told American newspapers that Germans realize they lost the war, he voiced no untruth. There may have been millions of Germans who had not come to that realization before the mark declined to a point where a dollar brought one million marks, but when the mark fell below the value of the Russian paper ruble, German pride had such a fall that even the most recalcitrant followers of the ex-kaiser were humbled.

Middle Class Suffers

Industrialists may have profited by the drop in the mark, as is generally charged abroad; bankers may have reaped a big harvest (they have made extensive improvements in their buildings and expended fabulous sums in paper marks for betterments), but the distress of the average middle-class family cannot be questioned by a foreign observer who makes a study of the conditions in Germany, especially in the cities.

The middle class has been reduced to penury. With the unemployment following the closing down of so many factories because of the lack of fuel and raw materials and the upset condition of transportation, the laborers and their families are rapidly getting into the same distress that has hitherto been confined largely to white-collar folks.

Most factories which have not closed are working only part time, and the wages have not kept pace with the decline in the mark and the increase in the price of fuel and food stuffs. The unemployment doles are insufficient to supply even bread to the average family. Food riots are an everyday occurrence in most populous centres.

The average German mother realizes as she never realized before that Germany lost the war. The despair written on the faces of women in the markets when they inquire the prices of meat and potatoes and find their billions of marks will not buy a single meal for their children is a tragic demonstration of that realization.

Rural Districts Better

Rural Germany fares better than the cities and larger towns. The peasants have good crops, and they have little sympathy with the food-rioting in the cities. That spells Bolshevism to them. If they go to cities with their produce they fear they will be attacked by the food rioters and robbed of their produce.

Milk and butter and meat are still obtainable in the smaller towns and country, and the gentry is relatively not badly situated for the moment. But their time is coming when gold taxes must be levied and collected, as they must be to meet Germany's obligations. When all realty begins to bear the burden to pay Germany's obligations rents must be advanced to a point which will drive home the sting of defeat.

Foreigners who come to Germany with the impression that Germans are having a comparatively easy time and are escaping the consequences of the war soon realize that the average man's lot in Germany is pretty hard. And the average woman's lot is harder. Keeping a family fed and clothed is a maddening problem in these days of shrunken incomes and fantastic prices.

Shabbiness and want are in such general evidence that the few tourists who invade Germany do not stay long. It is a poor place for a pleasure seeker.

There can be little doubt that the great majority of Germans of all classes now realize they lost the war. They realize it with great bitterness; for the most part, perhaps. This bitterness directs itself chiefly against the French. The United States and Italy is seldom mentioned. England is excused in a measure. British criticism of the French occupation of the Ruhr has softened the attitude toward England.

MARK TWAIN AT EIGHTY-EIGHT GREAT HUMORIST STILL LIVES IN MANY LITERARY CREATIONS

Albert Bigelow Paine, Official Biographer and Literary Executor of Mark Twain, Says Creator of Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn Is As Well Loved in Europe As In America.

WAS UPRIGHT MAN.

CHINON, France.—Had Mark Twain lived until the 30th of November he would have been eighty-eight years old. He died in the spring of 1910, in his seventy-fifth year.

The event seems remote; the World War that set everything back into the infinite at ages has occurred since then, and five years have passed since it ended. Mark Twain belonged to that period "before the war," the Golden Age—how far away it seems!

Yet in the minds and hearts of the people Mark Twain is alive today, as alive as on any day that one of his new books was coming fresh from the printer. His sayings, his wisdom, his views on public questions are remembered and quoted, not as those of some long-buried and half-forgotten philosopher, but as a living presence. "As Mark Twain said" or, quite as often, "as Mark Twain says" is in daily use; his books, as fresh and alive as ever, have shown no falling off, but rather a gain in popularity; his birthday, which has meant so much to the cheer and comfort of a tired world may properly be remembered, and observed.

Mark Twain took no great interest in his own birthdays, but his friends did, and enjoyed celebrating them. Some of us are still alive who are fortunate in having a personal memory of that great night when a full three hundred of his guild assembled at Delmonicos to welcome to "Pier 70" their honored and beloved chief. What a night that was! Mark Twain at seventy was in the "flower of his youth"—his figure as straight, his step as light, his eyes as keen and his color as rich as of a man of thirty. Age was only in his crown of snowy hair, and this somehow gave accent and glory to the rest.

Recalls "70th Birthday Speech"

Nor had his thought ever been more vigorous, nor his words more surely chosen: his "70th Birthday Speech" ranks as his high-water mark of public utterances, as alive and as moving today as it was in that great moment when the words were spoken. You may go over it a dozen times, and even then you cannot read it aloud without choking a little.

> . . . wishing you well in all affection, and that when you in your turn shall arrive at Pier 70 you may step aboard your waiting ship with a reconciled spirit, and lay your course toward the sinking sun with a contented heart.

We saw him through a blur, and a moment of silence followed that perfect close; then the applause, like the in-rush of a might tide. What a night it was, indeed! Howells was there, and Gilder of the Century, and Alden of Harpers, and Kendrick Bangs and Kate Douglas Wiggin—all gone, now, with so many more of those happy guests. I have an album of photographs, with a picture of each table. As I look through it now I find it has become a pictorial necrology.

I was with Mark Twain on his next birthday. There was no celebration, but only innumerable games of billiards. In fact, I was the only guest on that anniversary, and all day long and into the night his favorite diversion went on. He was not an even tempered player and sometimes when the balls did not behave well he moved them from the table with his cue; but all that day and evening he was in perfect humor. He had invented a new game for the occasion—one which kept me sweating and struggling, even to make a fair showing, which amused him mightily. Flowers, telegrams, congratulations arrived, and there were many callers, but he saw nobody except some intimate friends in the late afternoon. He would not interrupt the games—they gave him an enjoyment that nothing else seemed to provide. I do not know at what hour that night we stopped playing, but I remember that he said:

"I have never had a pleasanter day at this game," and I answered: "I hope ten years from now we shall still be playing it."

"Yes," he said, "still playing the best game on earth."

His 73rd Birthday

He was in his new home, Stormfield, at Redding, Connecticut, when his seventy-third birthday came around, and on that day he received a present from the Hawaiian Islands of a beautiful carved mantel, for the new billiard room. It pleased him that he had been thus remembered by those far islands; but there was no place in the two hemispheres without affection for him.

We were in Bermuda on his last birthday, and though the malady which was to take him from us, angina, had manifested itself, he was a lively, as youthful in appearance, as ever. He was staying with some friends, the Allens, and there was a birthday cake, cigars and talk, a quiet fireside evening. Once, in the midst of a sentence, he forgot a word, and denounced his poor memory. He said quaintly:

"I'll forget the Lord's middle name, sometime, right in the midst of a storm, when I need all the help I can get!"

Such are a few of my birthday memories of Mark Twain, and now that it is once more the anniversary month I like to recall them, and to think that perhaps others in the world are remembering the birthday of a man whose books have become so much a part of their lives.

During the past two years I have been for the most part in Europe. I do not know whether Mark Twain's birthday is celebrated anywhere over here, or not. But I do know that it would be, if he had been a native of one of these countries, for they have universally adopted him as their own.

Mark Twain Equally Popular In Europe

His name among these old nations is as live and well known today as it was when he visited among them; as, for instance, in 1872, when during an entire winter throngs filled the largest lecture-room in London to hear him, a record engagement in the history of lecturing, or, as when in Vienna, in 1898, the police would hold up the traffic at any time to let him pass. He lived two winters in Vienna and his apartment was so thronged with celebrities and dignitaries that it acquired the name of the "second embassy." At the royal palace he was received by the emperor and his family, as an honored friend. The Queen of Roumania, Carmen Sylvia, wrote him affectionately of the happiest and comfort his work had given her. She closed her letter:

> "God bless you for every beautiful thought you poured into my tired heart, and for every smile on a weary way."

It was the same in Italy, the same in Germany, the same in Sweden. Whatever people he visited he belonged to them, to the great and the humble alike. A lecturer tour he made around the world, through Australia, New Zealand and India was nothing less than a royal progress. Again in London, in 1907, this time to take a degree at Oxford, the streets everywhere thronged to see him pass and his name ran ahead of him like a cry of fire. The stevedores had welcomed him at the dock and writing of it later he said:

> Who began it? The very people of all people in the world whom I should have chosen: a hundred men of my own class—grimy sons of labor, the real hundred men of my own class—builders of empires and civilizations, the stevedores! They stood in a body on the dock and charged their masculine lungs, and gave me a welcome which went to the very marrow of me.

On leaving the Sheldonain theatre where the degree was conferred, the people in the streets of Oxford singled out Mark Twain, formed a vast and cheering body-guard around him and escorted him to the college gates. He was entertained by the clubs of London, he was given a dinner by Punch in the historic dining room where Thackeray had sat, and Douglas Jerrold, Mark Twain being the first foreign visitor ever so honored.

He has never lost his popularity in Europe. An English woman recently said to me:

"You know we appreciated Mark Twain before you Americans did, and we read him as much as you do, now."

That she appreciated him I am certain, for I lent her a Mark Twain book and had the greatest difficulty in getting it away from her. A waiter, a young man in the inn here, in this crumbling little French city of the Middle France.

What was it that gave, and still gives, Mark Twain a warm place in every heart of every people? Ages. Chinon, seeing Mark Twain's picture on my wall became at once excited; much more so, I am certain, than any American waiter would over a picture of, let us say, Victor Hugo, or Anatole. It was not his humor, I think—not that alone—but rather his great humanity. A young Russian not long ago assured me that he had read Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn. I asked is he had read them in English.

"Oh, no," he said, "but we have all his books in Russian; we read them in our schools."

He was of the day before the Great War. What the schools are like there now I do not know. Probably there is no important language on the globe into which Mark Twain's works have not been translated, and if one may judge from the surface indications I should say that their sales have not fallen away, but, as in our own country, have increased during the years that have passed since he died. Whether his birthday is observed in the schools of any European country I do not know. Probably Europe has already too many birthdays of her own to honor in this way.

I do not even know if Mark Twain's birthday is generally observed in the schools of America. If not, we could hardly do better than to inaugurate that observance. It would be a delicate and proper tribute to the memory of one who in his work has done so much to entertain and encourage young men and women, whose presence is still a living thing among them, and who, quite apart from his work, ranks next to Abraham Lincoln as the representative American, a clean, fearless, true-hearted, upright man.

TRANSFERRED TO THETFORD MINES.

Rev. C. Grant King of Lakefield Had Identified Himself With Community Affairs.

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 28.—Rev. C. Grant King, who for the past eighteen months has been rector of St. John's church, Lakefield, leaves this week to take up the parish of Thetford Mines, in the diocese of Quebec, where he has been appointed rector by the Bishop of Quebec. As Thetford Mines is one of the most important parishes in the Diocese, it is a decided promotion for Mr. King. Thetford Mines is a town of something more than 7000 and is the centre of the asbestos industry which is one of the most important in the province of Quebec.

During his stay in Lakefield Mr. King has made many warm friends who, though regretting his departure, are very much pleased at his promotion which is richly deserved. Mr. King took an especial interest in children's work and arranged a series of picture entertainments, not only for the children of the Sunday School, but also for any other children who wished to avail themselves of the opportunity. These entertainments were very popular and drew large crowds of children who enjoyed the well told story illustrated by pictures. Aside from his parochial duties, which he performed faithfully and efficiently, Mr. King took an active interest in village affairs and pastimes. He was a member of the professional Men's hockey team, which was a prominent feature of last year's winter sports. Mr. King is the recipient of many good wishes for his welfare and the success of his work in his new parish.

A meeting of the local committee of the Travellers' Aid was held on Monday afternoon at "Invercauld," the home of Mrs. W. M. Graham, the local superintendent. The ladies were unanimous in their opinion as to the wonderful value of this work and the need there was for it, and immediate steps will be taken to co-ordinate the work in this vicinity. Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald was appointed convener of the committee, and Miss M. Kennedy the secretary-treasurer. Those present were Mrs. (Rev.) T. L. White, Mrs. S. Hunter and Mrs. Harvey of the Baptist church; Mrs. A. D. Payne and Mrs. D. H. McMillan of the Methodist church; Mrs. Chas. Thomson of the Presbyterian church; Mrs. A. G. Lawless and Miss M. Kennedy of St. Paul's church, and Mrs. (Rev.) A. W. Mackenzie and Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald of St. John's church.

The fact that the village of Lakefield had been elevated to a High School section has meant the appointment of three trustees by the County and at the recent session of the County Council J. W. Ridpath Dr. S. J. Gibson and Mrs. W. M. Graham were appointed.

A number of local people have been in Peterboro this week to hear the Dumbell's new revue "Cheerio."

PREPARING FOR COLD WEATHER.

Before any anti-freeze solution is placed in the radiator, the circulating system should be inspected for leaks, and repairs made, if necessary. It is usually a good plan to replace the hose connections at this time of the year. Do not use anti-freeze compounds containing calcium chloride or other similar salts, as they corrode the inside of the radiator. The only satisfactory liquid is alcohol and water. During the winter, the fan belt can be loosened. This will reduce the flow of air through the radiator and will allow the motor to run warmer than it otherwise would.

Never use the spare tire on the rear for a bumper.

BELLS TO WARN MOTORISTS

To call attention to a safety campaign conducted by the Police Department, of New York, whistles and bells were sounded throughout the city at 2.59 p.m. The signal was a warning to motorists that more than a million school children were about to be turned loose in the streets.

THE WORLD'S FAMOUS HIGHWAYS

It is of interest to motorists to know that the highest thoroughfare in the world is Main street, Denver; the widest is Market street, Philadelphia; the narrowest street is the Via Sol, Havana, Cuba, which has a width of 47 inches; the shortest is the Rue Blu, in Paris. The dirtiest is that of Tchangsti, Nankin, China; the cleanest is the Via Castile, in Seville, Spain; the richest is Fifth avenue, New York City; the most aristocratic is Grosvenor place, in London; the most beautiful is the Avenue des Champ Elysees, Paris; and the oldest is the Appian Way, built by Julius Cæsar in the days of the Romans, and still in use and good repair.

REAL SENSATION IN OLD COUNTRY

Waking Up to Something That the World Has Known for Months.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press.)—A sensation which threatens to develop into a national scandal, has been caused by publication of an article sent to British newspapers by a news agency stating that the Government is concerned over military preparations in Germany. The article said rapid military training of large numbers of men has been progressing and that the government is cognizant of the facts. As the agency is often credited with being semi-official, the familiar declaration about Germany's misdeeds was taken seriously and has caused genuine alarm.

The Foreign Office disclaimed official authority for the statement, but the fat was in the fire.

The papers controlled by Lord Rothermere to-day evinced the greatest concern over the report. Others point out it was nothing but a repitition of claims often made by Premier Poincare of France.

The Daily Express declares the statement "possesses the elements of propaganda" and adds: "The British government is entitled to demand that the agency disclose the source of its information.

The Manchester Guardian declared the Agency statement to be at variance with official opinion regarding Germany and says: "Whoever inspired that statement was palpably bent on mischief."

The Times, which does not publish the Agency despatch, heads a lengthy leading article on the subject "Spurious Sensation."

The Times editorial laments the effect the statement is likely to have in the United States and says it probably originated with some retired member of one of the disbanded British missions to the continent.

Cobourg and District

COBOURG, Nov. 29.—The first great church union rally to be held in Cobourg took place in the Methodist church here and was largely attended by people of town and district, for it was a gathering for town and county as well. The meeting was presided over by Mr. John T. Field, of Cobourg, who has been for a number of years a member and worker on the church union committee. In opening, Mr. Field said that he had selected the hymns the night before at the big mass meeting in Massey Hall, Toronto. "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," and "The Son of God Goes Forth to War" were used in opening, and then Rev. R. F. Stillman led in prayer. Mr. Field introduced Rev. Dr. Pringle, of Sidney, N. S., as an ex-Moderator of the Presbyterian Assembly, and a man famed for his work in the Yukon. There are few men, perhaps, who have a better understanding of the work and needs of church activities in Canada than Dr. Pringle. He is a man who has courageously taken up big tasks in which he met and studied all types and conditions of men. In his address he told of his work in the Red Deer district and other parts of the West, of going to Minnesota and of the call that came to him there from Dr. Robertson to take up work in the Yukon. There he labored for years driving his dog-team and living in a cabin on the hillside, and there his first enthusiasm for this great imovement, that has swept over Canada with such gigantic momentum the past few years, was excited.

In 1903 Dr. Pringle said, he received a paper in which the church union movement was suggested. And I said emphatically, he continued, "Not for me."

But God ordained that this decision should not be final, and to use the speaker's words, "He kept me awake that night in my cabin on the hillside until he converted me. I said, here am I ministering to people of all denominations. They worship together and seemingly have not a thought as to whether they are Methodists, Presbyterian or Congregational. Can I get up and say that I will not come into fellowship with such men as these. And so conviction came."

Dr. Pringle referred to the West having taken the bit in its teeth in the matter of church union, but said it was needed as much in the East as in the West. There are hundreds of churches in villages of a few hundred people, he said, struggling along, half starving their ministers for books and clothing and the necessities of life. He cited instances of this kind. Places where the church were supplementing the meagre salaries paid by Missionary funds. He told of congregations of 19, 21, 23, 25 people and said the conviction had come to some of the leaders in the church that the only remedy for this constant overlapping was union.

In closing, Dr. Pringle said: "I am a unionist because it is Scriptural," and quoted the prayer of Jesus "That they all may be one" and "There shall be one flock and one shepherd," also St. Paul's words, "Is Christ divided?" I believe in union because it is natural, said Dr. Pringle. Union is a rational thing for these three churches to enter into and go forth for the spiritual conquest of Canada in the name of Christ and on to service in the wider world into which God calls his ministry.

Rev. Dr. James Pedley

Rev. Dr. James Pedley, a member of the Church Union committee for many years and one of its most ardent promoters, gave a characteristically practical and virile address, marked by occasional flashes of humor. His references to the union of the Methodist bodies in Canada, and to the fact that four such denominations previously existed in Cobourg, the Methodist Episcopal church, the Wesleyan Methodist, the Primitive Methodist and the Bible Christian called up reminiscences of those days and of the objections of some of the congregations uniting. We Congregationalists thought we were going to get a lot of them, said Dr. Pedley, and a few did come over, but they did not stay. The time for argument was gone, Dr. Pedley said. The question was settled. We did not come here to debate and argue, he said, but we are here to emphasize the wisdom, beauty, feasibility and commonsense of men and women who are practically agreed in all essentials, coming together in order that they may the better carry on a common task. That was the vision of the task. It was strange the churches had been so long coming to it. It was not a new thing. The matter of church union had been a vital question in Canada for more than a century. We cannot find anything in ecclesiastical history more significant than this movement, said Dr. Pedley. Every church represented has glorified itself, justified its existence. This movement is intended to gather up the fruitage of each that the united church may inherit it and go on to larger service.

Rev. Chancellor Bowles

Rev. Chancellor Bowles of Victoria University, gave an address of outstanding significance and virile strength, and although the hour was growing late, he was listened to with absorbed interest. He said there was not a single reason why the churches should not go forward in this matter. The battle for freedom for every church or people to worship God according to the dictates of conscience had been fought and won, and it was in the light of this great freedom that has been achieved, that we are called to consider this question. No man will decide your policy as a church who has not your franchise, said Chancellor Bowles. I welcome the great church that understands the genius of freedom. If there was ever a movement, he said, that belongs to its day and place it is this movement in Canada. He referred to rural depopulation. The public schools, with 70 or 80 in attendance were not uncommon forty or fifty years ago. Now they had dwindled down less than half. The conditions of our land have fixed upon us the need of some such action. The churches must face it. It was tragic to divide these rural communities. Conditions have become such that it is difficult to get a certain type of men for the ministry, men of virile leadership. The fence between the denominations is down said Chancellor Bowles. We are uniting our forces to put into action a practical thought and idea born of the day we live in.

COBOURG, Nov. 28.—Mr. F. J. Dodson, missionary teacher at the Alderville Reserve, gave a very interesting and instructive lecture in the Methodist Sunday School Hall here Tuesday evening under auspices of the Missionary Department of the Young People's League. His address was illustrated by a large number of excellent slides showing Indian life on the American continent in almost all of its phases and going back to the prehistoric ages. Mr. Dodson included in his list of views a number from Rice Lake, showing the rice beds, a primitive Indian tepee where the rice used to be stored, the Alderville school, the Alderville band, houses at Alderville, the Serpent Mound at Rice Lake, the historic Indian burial place and the scene of the final terrible encounter between the two great ruling tribes of this part of Ontario, when it was inhabited by the Redman. He showed a photo of John Sunday, one of the first Indian missionary converts, a native of Alderville, who was converted under the ministry of Elder Case, and coming to Victoria University was educated for the work of a missionary.

Commencing with the prehistoric age in America, Mr. Dodson gave a number of theories of the peopling of the American continent by the Indians. One being that they crossed from Europe by means of a former submerged continent that united the two hemispheres. Another that they came from India, also that the North American Indian formerly dwelt in Japan and in China. He showed also that in the walls of the homes of the cliff dwellers, who were a peaceable people, were to be found arrow heads showing attack by an enemy.

Mr. Dodson showed views of some stones, of the homes of the mound builders, of earthenware and other utensils and of missiles used in war by these early inhabitants of our land. Coming down to later days he showed the view of an idol found among our North American Indians; of their pipes, which sometimes took the form of an animal or bird; of effigies in stone and carvings and effigies that adorned their burial places. He showed other pictures depicting odd burial customs and pictures of their dances in their savage state and of the customs in vogue to try the mettle of the young brave and prove if he were applicable for this position. He showed views of other great tribal gatherings and called attention to the fact that the Christian people of Canada have not been doing their entire duty to the Indian race, else there would not be in our land today quite a number of pagan Indians.

James Evans, a faithful missionary worker, invented the Cree syllabic characters, made his inks from dyes made by steeping the roots of trees or berries, his types from tinfoil from the inside of tea boxes, etc., and used his door-step as a part of his rude printing press. But his labors and that of others who translated parts of the Bible and our hymns into the Cree language, have done a great deal for this people.

Mr. Dodson in referring to the things the Indian race has handed down to posterity, referred to Canadas national game, lacrosse, first played on this continent by the Indians. The Indians he said, also gave us the pumpkin and the squash, seeds of which had been found in the homes of the early cliff dwellers. They raised Indian corn and maize before the whites came to America. They were supposed to have been engaged in agriculture before its discovery by Columbus. They made maple syrup and maple sugar, wove baskets, made mocassins and engaged in other useful crafts.

Mr. Dodson came to Cobourg under auspices of the Young People's League of the Methodist Church, but the meeting was attended also by quite a large number from the congregation. He was accompanied by Mrs. Dodson and by two or three residents of Alderville. Miss Scarfe presided over the meeting and a vote of thanks was moved by Mr. James Thompson, seconded by Rev. R. F. Stillman and was enthusiastically ratified by the audience.

The party from Alderville were entertained by the Executive of the Young People's League at the close of the meeting.

GREAT WORK DONE BY HOSPITAL FOR THE SICK BABIES

This Hospital Achieves Success Through Hard Work and Study and Is Now Famous the World Over.

Dear Mr. Editor—

Recent discoveries in medical science have called attention to the great service rendered by an up-to-date hospital through facilities provided for research. Probably few laymen appreciate the amount of this work conducted under the auspices of the Hospital for Sick Children. Yet it is only by intensive study of the causes of children's diseases that the hospital staff has been able to establish a world-famous record for cures. Statistics show that the rate of infant mortality in this Province has been steadily decreasing, until it is now among the lowest in the world. What that means is that hundreds of Ontario parents owe their children's lives to the research work in the laboratories of the Hospital for Sick Children.

Although the doctors give their services freely, the bil ls for equipment add up annually to a good many thousands of dollars. But in view of the results attained, I feel that not one of your readers will cavil at the money so spent, and I confidently venture the hope that many of them at this Christmas season will wish to enrol themselves in the Hospital's campaign on behalf of Ontario's childhood.

To carry on this research work there is not one cent except what comes in from voluntary subscriptions. For the care of the children occupying hospital cots there are certain statutory grants, but these represent scarcely more than half what the Hospital needs. Last year, for instance, the Hospital doctors looked after an average of 253 in-patients and 192 out-patients daily. Quite a colony of ailing youngsters! And the expenditure—although whittled down to the minimum commensurate with efficiency—was $318,917. The income to the extent of at least $100,000 depends upon the regard which the people on Ontario have for the Hospital's work and the generosity with which they express that regard.

May I ask you, Mr. Editor, to point out to your readers that since the establishment of the Hospital for Sick Children, at least four more Ontario youngsters in every hundred have survived the trials of childhood? For with that simple statement of fact brought to their attention I feel sure that many of them will bestow their benediction upon the work of the Hospital for Sick Children by sending some Christmas gift, according to their means, in care of the Secretary-Treasurer, at 67 College Street, Toronto.

Faithfully yours,
IRVING E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman o Appeal Committee.

Since the Hospital opened its doors in 1875, 65,231 in-patients treated—603,055 attendances of out-patients.

ALDERMAN SAYS

the Council, proven a paying proposition.

On a question by Alderman Crowe, the chairman said it was expected that the storm drains under construction would have been completed to-night but the decision to put in an extra man hole had delayed the work.

Mention of the manhole recalled to Alderman Crowe's mind the first snow of winter and the succeeding slush and he declared no attempt was made to clear the manholes on some of the main streets on Saturday last when people were compelled, he said, to pick their way through four inches of slush.

Alderman Stocker said there were men on the street, but Alderman Crowe and others declared they did not see any.

"Every year it's the same," said Alderman Crowe.

Alderman McIntyre suggested putting more men to work if necessary and the Chairman promised to take the matter up with Street Commissioner Harry Evans. Alderman Crowe followed with a complaint about the slush on sidewalks not removed by the snow ploughs, but Chairman Stocker explained the snow plough men were working elsewhere and were caught unawares by the first of the snow.

The question of the erection of coal sheds on Bethune street proposed by J. E. A. Fitzgerald was briefly referred to but was left in abeyance pending the production of plans by Mr. Fitzgerald.

Alderman Maher, who was supported by others, remarked that many residents in the neighborhood are objecting. "It is not a fit place for a coal yard," he said.

Alderman Stocker assured the Board that the proposed building will be of pleasing design with good offices and concrete coal bins.

Property Committee

Under Alderman McIntyre, the Property Commttee discussed the granting of ashes to citizens for filling-in purposes. Thomas J. Moore was applicant last night and his request was granted on motion of Alderman Crowe and Phelan, twelve loads being allowed. 4

Alderman Fife remarked that a firm stand must be taken some day and suggested that someone bring in a definite programme whereby possibly a small charge per load would be made.

Garbage Tender

Anglesey and Widdess, with a tender of $8,200 were awarded the contract for removing garbage during 1924. Only one other tender was received, a price of $9,100 being set by Edgar Millen. On motion of Aldermen Crowe and Phelan the lowest tender was accepted.

While some complaint was raised relative to the non-collection of garbage on days following holidays the concensus of opinion was that the work was well done. Alderman Phelan said, the Council relieved the garbage collectors of the necessity of collecting from districts missed because of holidays.

Sub-Fire Hall

The disposition of the pumping station and lot in the south end was discussed following the intimation that an offer had been made for it.

Alderman McIntyre enquired as to the suitability of the lot for the erection of a sub-fire station but Alderman Fife considered it too far east.

No action was taken.

Lights Needed

The Fire, Water and Light Committee under Alderman Crowe decided upon the necessity or additional lighting at several points and recommended to the Utilties Commission that lamps be installed.

The recommendations included the corner of Smith and Aylmer; London street between George and Aylmer; Simcoe street between the creek and Aylmer; Stewart street between Brock and Hunter, and at the corner of McDonnell and Monaghan road.

The lighting of George street between Lake and Romaine and at Bethune street where Brock street crosses, will be investigated by Alderman Crowe with power to act if necessary.

Alderman Maher remarked that an abundance of light is as good as police protection.

A communication from the Utilities Commission intimated that a new hydrant had been installed on Woodbine avenue. This, the committee said, was unauthorized and will be investigated by the chairman.

Fire Chief George Gimblett reported a hydrant needed at the Isolation Hospital and ordered has not yet been installed. He considers this most necessary for the protection of life.

Mayor Taylor remarked that installation in the position desired by the chief would cost about $400.

The chairman will look into this matter.

Alarms Totalled 39

There were 33 telephone, 3 box and 3 verbal alarms durng the month Chief Gimblett's report showed, and the loss by fire was $9,708.50 made up of buildings $4,749.58 and contents $4959.

Three hundred and ninety inspections were made and two new men, S. Smith and H. Cooney were taken on the force to replace one man resigned and one discharged.

A by-law to regulate the storage of coal oil and gasoline was discussed shortly and a small committee appointed to examine it exhaustively and report back.

Chief Gimblett cited the case of a grocery store in the south end of the city, where a floor is saturated with oil. "This is a menace to all around," the chief declared.

The only city bylaw governing the storage of oil is one passed in 1894 which provides that oil must be at least 15 feet from artificial light or fire. Nothing is incorporated governing the storage of gasoline.

In Hamilton, Chief Gimblett said any amount of oil over 5 gallons cannot be stored without a permit signed by the fire chief who in turn reports to the Fire, Water and Light Committee. That lets the Chief know where his big fire hazards lie.

This was considered a good plan, but no action was taken pending a report on the bylaw, which was drafted on latest lines by the Fire Marshal's Department.

Safety Methods

Austin P. Saunders, Provincial Organizer of the Ontario Safety League, reported on his recent inspection of Peterboro's waterfront with a view to removing unnecessary drowning hazards.

The report cost $32. Alderman Turner said, of which $12 covered expenses in Peterboro and the remainder was for office work in Toronto.

Alderman Stocker said the report is too late for action by the 1923 Council, but the general opinion was that it should receive attention at the first meeting of the 1924 Parks Committee.

Inverlea Park

Attention was called to the unsafe condition of the concrete wall at Inverlea bathing beach.

This was built as a retaining wall by the Peterboro Hydraulic Power Company (now the Quaker Oats Co.), by arrangement with the Nicholl's Park Trust Co. It is now so broken as to be useless for its intended purpose.

It was decided to call the attention of the Nicholl's Park Trust Co., to the fact that the breakwater is in a dangerous condition and should be rebuilt.

will cause criticism, however unavoidable the accident may be. The appliances should be inspected regularly to see that they are not tampered with.

The equipment for the life saving appliances can all be procured in Peterboro, with the possible exception of the lifebuoys. The cost will be about $25.00 each complete set. I will arrange to have a sample set made up at cost and forwarded to Peterboro, if so desired.

Bathing Areas

The drowning hazard in so far as bathing is concerned can be greatly mitigated by encouraging bathing at such places as Inverlea Park and the Lake Street bathing beach which can be made practically safe by surrounding the bathing areas, which must be free from holes, with floating lifelines. I would also recommend a Protected Area on the East side of Little Lake at the foot of Mark Street. The advantage of the floating lifelines over log booms is largely that of being able to row a boat over the lifelines to any point where a rescue may be necessary. This is not practicable where the booms are used.

A Supervisor or Lifeguard should be employed at both bathing areas during the summer holidays when these places will be largely attended by children. Telephones should be installed at the bathing beeches for use of the lifeguards in sending emergency calls for help.

The Ontario Safety League will be glad to circularize the Peterboro schools with letters for the teachers to read out to the scholars in order to point out that Protected Bathing Areas have been provided at certain places, and to get the co-operation of the parents to insist on their children going only to those bathing places. If the Peterboro Board of Education would distribute these letters throughout your schools, we will be glad to send a supply of several hundred, free of charge.

The lifeguards should be good swimmers and thoroughly proficient in the Schæfer Method of Artificial Respiration, the use of the Drag, and able to handle a small rowboat, which should be kept in constant readiness at each Bathing Area.

The fact is not generally known that there are three times more fatalities caused by drowning in Ontario, each year than by any other single accidental cause, according to the latest report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa. The analysis of these fatalities will prove that the majority of drowning accidents were caused by bathing in unsafe localities. The localizing of the bathing in Peterboro, and the education of the youth of your city to take advantage of the protection afforded, together with the prohibition of bathing in dangerous localities will doubtless duplicate the success of the Protected Bathing Area System in Toronto, where more than five hundred thousand bathers used the six Protected Areas during the course of the past three years, without the loss of a single life by drowning.

Lifeboat and Rescue Equipment

A very important feature in connection with the elimination of the drowning hazard in Peterboro is the provision of adequate Dragging Equipment for the quick recovery of persons from the water. This equipment should be placed in the hands of an efficient body of men who can reach the scene of an accident within the shortest possible lapse of time. It is necessary that these men should not only know how to locate and recover the victim of the accident quickly, but should be thoroughly conversant and proficient in the various methods of Artificial Respiration and First Aid.

My recommendation in this connection is to have the Fire Department take charge of this work. The necessary equipment is a small square sterned rowboat about twelve or fourteen feet long which could be attached to the ceiling of the Fire Hall by means of falls over a fire truck in such a manner that it could be lowered at a moment's notice in case of an emergency call. The lifeboat should be equipped with cars, drags, blankets, rubber sheet, rubber gloves, thermos bottles (to be filled with hot water), hot water bags, and a first aid kit. It would be well to place the telephone number of the Fire Department on the signs attached to the lifesaving appliances so that help may be called in case of accident.

It afforded me a great deal of pleasure while in Peterboro, to instruct the members of the Fire Department in the finer points of the Schæfer Method of Artificial Respiration. Chief Gimblett and his men were most enthusiastic to learn all that I was able to teach them in the limited time at my disposal. It is a generally acknowledged fact that the Schæfer Method if properly applied, is far superior to any other means of resuscitation, so far discovered.

Boat Liveries

Pleasure craft, especially canoes and row boats for rent by public liveries, should be inspected occasionally to see that proper precautions are taken in the way of sufficient life buoys such as buoyant cushions filled with Kapoc or some such material, and that children unattended by adults, are prevented from renting canoes.

Danger Signs

There are several peculiar features in connection with the waterfront in Peterboro that perhaps should have special attention. As an instance of this I would like to draw your attention to the danger at the Lock south of Otonabee Street to small craft such as canoes which are obliged to land alongside the steps at the lock. The danger of capsizing is very apparent because the current which flows south until the landing is reached, alters its course to the opposite direction and is sufficiently strong to carry a small craft beyond the landing into deep water and into imminent danger immediately below the dam. The remedy that I would suggest in this case is a log boom placed in such a manner so as to prevent canoes being swept towards the dam. Lifelines should also be fastened to the face of the landing steps. I would also suggest that a lifebuoy should be placed near the centre of the C.P.R. footbridge.

There are several places that I noticed where ice might be dangerous during the coming winter. These places should be marked by danger signs such as suggested on the enclosed blue print. The Sewer outlet at the foot of Lock Street is one place in point and there may be similar localities of which I am not aware.

The entire cost of all equipment described in this report should not exceed the sum of $600. I feel sure that the aforementioned recommendations will work out very satisfactorily in Peterboro, and will assist materially in the elimination of the Drowning Hazard which is claiming so many lives throughout our Province.

Mr. Saunders enclosed with his recommendations several blueprints showing in detail the construction of the life saving appliances, cedar floats, drags and pole equipment, together with instructions for their use He also included recommendations for signs to be placed at dangerous points.

The Committee received the report very favorably and several members expressed the opinion that it should be taken up early in the new year.

Liver Trouble the Cause

Mrs. A. C. Brown, Oromocto, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with my liver for a few years back and was so bad I did not feel able to do my work.

I had severe pains in my stomach so bad I could hardly stand them at times; coated tongue; bad taste in the mouth, especially in the morning, and had a yellow and sallow complexion.

I had read a great deal about Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and decided I would try a vial, and after taking two or three I found I was greatly improved, and can truthfully say that I felt more like living and can now do my own work without any trouble."

IN MEMORIAM.

BALL.—In loving remembrance of our dear brother, James Ball, who passed away on November 30th, 1916:

'This sweet to know we will meet again
Where parting is no more.
And our dear brother we loved so well
Has only gone before.

God knows how much we miss him,
He counts the tears we shed
And whispers "hush, he only sleeps
Your brother is not dead."

Some day, some time, our eyes shall see
The face we loved so well,
Some day, some time, his hands we'll clasp
And never say farewell.

—Always in Memory, Brothers and Sisters.

IN MEMORIAM.

BALL.—In loving memory of our dear son, James Ball, who went to rest on November 30th, 1916:

There is some one who misses you sadly
And finds the years long since you went,
There is some one who thinks of you daily,
But tries to be brave and content.

So we shed a tear that is silent
And breath a sigh of regret,
For you were ours, and we remember
Though all the world forgets.

—Sadly Missed by Mother and Father.

CANADA'S PROUD PLACE IN THE EMPIRE BRINGS GREAT RESPONSIBILITY

Said Hon. W. L. MacKenzie-King Who Landed This Morning on His Return From Imperial Conference — Declares Canada is Singularly Fortunate.

HIS BOAT AGROUND

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).—Looking the picture of health, Canada's Premier, Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, returned to his homeland this morning from his first Imperial Conference in London. The hour set for the arrival of the steamer Montclare, on which the Premier made the passage out, found the harbor enveloped in a thick fog, but the mist failed to hinder the progress of the vessel, and she anchored off quarantine on schedule time.

A boat containing a local reception committee, consisting of Hon. R. E. Finn, M.P., and Gordon B. Isnor, president of the Halifax Liberal Association, did not fare so well in the thick weather, and, stranding on Point Pleasant shoal with the Premier abroad, was held up for upwards of an hour. At nine o'clock, however, the sun struggled through the haze, and the Premier was brought ashore and taken to his hotel. In response to a wireless message sent him yesterday, the Premier had prepared a statement for the Canadian Press, which he handed out on his arrival.

At noon to-day a reception will be held for Mr. King in the historic Province building, and to-night he will address a mass meeting in the interests of George A. Redmond, Liberal candidate in the by-election, to be held in the constituency next week.

He leaves to-morrow morning for Ottawa.

Fortunate Canada.

After expressing his pleasure at being home again, Premier King in his statement declared that the people of Canada are singularly fortunate compared to the peoples of Europe and Britain. In Europe there was the greatest unrest, hatreds are rife as between nations and classes; suspicions and jealousies are giving rise to fresh enmities and new fears. The unsettled condition has a paralyzing effect upon industry and business.

In its solution of its problems and difficulties, said the Premier, the Old World needs the assistance of the New World, which should offer helpful co-operation as opportunity pointed itself in matters which are not without their effect upon the present stability and peace of the world. Amid uncertainty and insecurity, two great political entities, the British Empire and the United States, whose unity, strength and stability made them all powerful as agencies of peace and progress in the world, stood out in striking contrast to the rest of political society. They had ideals of human justice and human liberty, they understood government by opinion, and they looked to reason rather than to force in making the right prevail.

The most hopeful of all situations on the world's horizon to-day, stated Hon. Mr. King, "is the cordiality of the relationship that at present exists between these two peoples, and Canada can play no more helpful part in world affairs than in lending her effort whenever and as often as opportunity permits, to maintain this relationship of good-will and friendly co-operation. This she has done in the past and will continue to do more and more as interpreted to each other of points of view, difficulties and great responsibilities of the other, as a sister nation within the community of nations comprising the British Empire and the friendly neighbor of a great republic.

Premier Dominion.

"Reasons which cause Canada strongly to support the League of Nations as the only alternative to force in mantaining peace and security among the nations of the world give her reason for added satisfaction and pride in her position as the foremost Dominion of the British Empire. Nothing was more clearly demonstrated at the Imperial Conference than the fact that the conception of the British Empire as a community of free nations has come to be accepted.

"The conference proceeded on the assumption throughout that the extent to which its statement and guiding principles laid down, might be held to apply and to bind the several parts of the Empire would necessarily depend on the sanction of the Governments represented and the approval of their representative Parliaments.

"Co-operation and means of effecting co-operation speedily and efficiently between the several parts of the Empire in all matters of common concern were the underlying motives and aims alike of its discussions and conclusions. That the findings of the Conference will commend themselves to the several Parliaments of the Empire and their peoples I have not the least doubt. It goes without saying that unity and solidarity within the Empire will be thereby promoted with benefit to each of the parts and added power and prestige to the whole."

Minoca Aground.

The first work in which the Prime Minister of Canada was called upon to assist on his return to his native shores this morning was the refloating of the small steamer Minoca, known as the "doctor's boat." Capt. Chas. Pye, who in his anxiety to bring the Premier safely ashore through one of the thickest blankets of fog ever enveloping Halifax harbor, piled up his charge on Point Pleasant shoals to the south of the ocean terminals. The Minoca left the side of the Montclare shortly after 6 o'clock with 22 passengers aboard, and began to feel her way to King's Wharf, where the Premier was to land. At ten minutes to 7 she grounded amidships on Point Pleasant shoals, and remained hard and fast until five minutes after 8, when, with a rising tide and a judicious distribution of avoirdupoise of the passengers, she slid off the rock and gingerly made her way to her destination. The Premier seemed to enjoy the experience.

Welcomed Home

"Realizing more than ever that my country is my home, I hereby pledge myself anew, under the sure guidance of God to place whatever energies and capabilities are mine on the altar of my country."

In these words Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada endeavored to express his emotions on returning to the Dominion after an absence abroad of two months, spent in attending the imperial conference, at the reception tendered him at noon to-day in Nova Scotia's historic provincial buildings. The Premier said that the strongest impression he brought back with him was pride in the British Empire, its ideals and institutions. As a Canadian, he had been tremendously impressed with the proud position attained by the senior Dominion in the Counsels of the Empire. He had tried to express Canadian feeling with the utmost frankness and was happy to think that his pronouncements had met with the approval of his country men, as stated by Premier E. H. Armstrong, of Nova Scotia, in his introduction.

Mr. King was formally welcomed back to Canada by the Premier of Nova Scotia, Hon. E. H. Armstrong and by Mayor John Murphy, on behalf of city of Halifax.

SAYS TOBACCO KILLS BACTERIA

Might Be Used in Place of Schack Diphtheria Test

Pipe-smokers have an advantage in health over men who do not smoke, according to an American doctor who saw service as a surgeon with the American Expeditionary Force, in the world war. "During the war," he says, "I was in charge of over 500 soldiers at a post with marshes near by, and dysentery raged with virulence. I noticed that the heaviest smokers, who went about with pipes in their mouths, did not contract the disease. I smoked all the time and was free from it. So that smoking is in reality a great protective against disease."

According to the Pasteur Periodical, a magazine issued by the celebrated Pasteur Institute in Paris, tobacco smoke is highly antiseptic and kills, in a few moments, the primary bacteria of cholera, diphtheria and cerebro-spinal meningitis.

H. J. MOORE WILL GIVE AN ADDRESS

Mr. H. J. Moore, Forester of the Department of Public Highways, Provincial Government, will deliver an illustrated address this evening to the members of the Horticultural Society and all others interested, taking as his topic, "Plant Breeding and Improvement, and the Value of Trial Plots."

Mr. Moore was the designer of Victoria Park at Niagara Falls and has recently been appointed as the Ontario representative of the Plant Registration Bureau of the Canadian Horticultural Council.

This Council is arranging to place trial plots for plant breeding in the various cities in Canada, and Mr. Moore will explain its application to the City of Peterboro during his address, which will be given in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms, over the Dominion Bank, at 8 o'clock.

A good attendance is desired on this occasion as the Society is particularly fortunate in securing Mr. Moore, who is a specialist in horticulture and a very busy man.

Why the Secret of Perpetual Motion Still Eludes Man

INVENTORS are still striving to solve the secret of perpetual motion, and every now and then some experimenter is struck by one of the most brilliant ideas in the universe. His age may be six or sixty, but sooner or later it will occur to him, and the mere contemplation of the idea will raise his blood pressure several dozen points. If he is a real live experimenter, he will not rest until he has tried out the scheme.

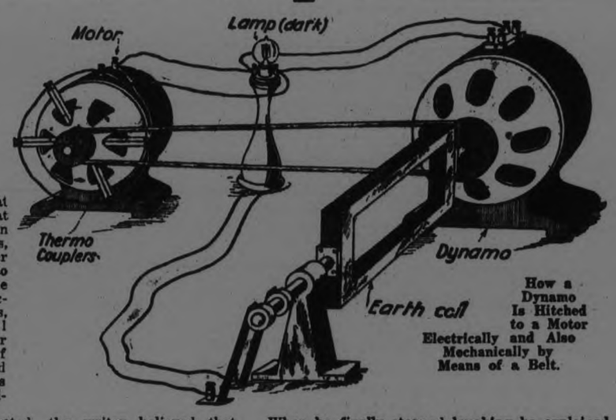
The brilliant thought is nothing less, nothing more, than hitching a dynamo to a motor electrically and also mechanically by means of a belt (see illustration). This scheme crops up regularly not less than three times a month, and the editors have encountered it ten times in a month.

The underlying idea, as H. Gainsback, a member of the American Physical Society, describes it in Practical Electrics, is simply this: The dynamo gives electric current. Suppose we connect the terminals of the dynamo to the motor. The dynamo, providing it runs, furnishes the current to run the motor. The motor, to return the compliment, if we connect it with a belt to the dynamo, will naturally feel obliged to run the dynamo in turn—a sort of dog trying to run after its own tail and keeping up its revolution.

The reason for failure is, first, that there is heat dissipation, and second, that no piece of machinery, no matter what its make or type, can render 100 per cent efficiency. Even if we had started the dynamo at full speed by an outside source, and then attached it electrically and mechanically to the motor, it would not run for two seconds, because the current developed by the dynamo would be just about 20 per cent less than the energy required to drive it. Then there are losses in the motor as well, so we can figure that the actual losses in the transformation between the two machines will run over 35 per cent. In other words, you cannot lift yourself up by your own boot-straps.

When the editor was a budding experimenter at the age of nine or ten the big idea struck him, as it has hit many others. He tried the experiment, of course, and was very much crestfallen at its failure to work. Not possessing extensive knowledge of electrical and mechanical efficiencies at that tender age, he consulted with an older friend who was high up in knowledge of these matters, and this worthy of course laughed and explained just why the scheme was not feasible.

First of all, your young experimenter was informed that there was great heat losses in the bearings, and many other losses due to heating of the windings, friction at bearings, and several other minor items, all of which tended to make success of the experiment nil.



How a Dynamo Is Hitched to a Motor Electrically and Also Mechanically by Means of a Belt.

Nothing daunted, the writer believed that somehow or other he would foil nature in the end. So he rigged up the contrivance illustrated here. The scheme was very simple. The writer at that time had read about thermo-couples and knew that when you heated a metal junction you would get electric current. "So," said he, "why not put these thermo-couples on all the bearings, collect the heat and feed it into the circuit?" It seemed plausible, and accordingly was done. But, strange to say, even with about a dozen thermo-couples sprouting out all round the bearings, nature persistently refused to be thwarted, and the contraption did not become mobile, much less perpetuum mobile.

After this disillusion we waded laboriously through several electrical textbooks and finally stumbled across another hint that looked promising. It had to do with a so-called earth coil. The magnetism of the earth is there to be trapped. Now if you rotate or swing a square frame, on which there are wound many turns of fine wire, in the earth's magnetic field, this coil will generate electric current. So far, so good. Said we to our young selves, why not hitch one of these coils to the shaft of the motor, and as it revolves quickly it will cut sufficient magnetic lines and give a tremendous amount of current, which when fed into the main circuit will be enough to overcome all the losses of the combination, consequently the device must work!

The great day arrived and we started to crank her up. We worked fast and furiously for many hours, but somehow or other the moment we stopped cranking the device would sink into a perpetually motionless state. Much hurt, we gave it up.

Our expert friend to whom we showed the great invention later had the time of his life. When he finally stopped laughing he explained to the dispirited experimenter that the loss of transformation in the thermo-couple is much greater than in any other electrical instrument; in other words, out of 100 units of heat you obtain less than 3 per cent of electric power that you can use.

As to the rotating earth-coil inspiration, this was not quite so bad, but even here, the current of a quickly rotating earth-coil, although it may be a pretty big affair, is only microscópic. In other words, the electric energy that was recovered from the thermo-couples plus the earth coil was less than one-thousandth of one per cent.

When Were CLOTHES First WORN?

WHEN did men and women first begin to wear clothing? This question has long engaged the attention of archeologists.

Almost certainly primitive man went entirely unclothed. As the scientists have reconstructed him he was something like a gorilla. He possessed a low forehead, huge jaws, and was so covered with fur-like hair that it probably never occurred to him that his body needed any protection other than that which nature had provided.

Millions of years later ancient men clothed themselves in the skins of animals. They also dyed their bodies blue with woad. But this was only when they stripped for battle. The warrior of that period disliked getting bits of fur and hide in his wounds.

Even then, however, fashions of Britons varied, says Mr. H. Dennis Bradley in "The Eternal Masquerade." The most chic garments were those made from the hide of a brindled cow, and were called "brych." Those made from the inferior skin of some vulgar wild beast were called "isgyn."

The smart-set woman of those days wore a one-piece "brych" garment covering the whole body and fastened with a thorn, a necklace of beads around her sunburnt throat, and wild flowers in her wilder hair. This latter she often dyed yellow. Queen Boadicea was probably the first prominent peroxide blonde.

During the Anglo-Saxon times woollen clothing largely superseded that made from the skins of animals. A loose robe of this material, reaching to the feet and another, longer, fastened over the shoulders to the middle of the breast by a clasp or buckle, were the chief features of the Anglo-Saxon dandy's wonderful wardrobe.

As for the women they were in many respects extremely up-to-date. They waved their hair artificially with curling tongs, wore necklaces, bracelets and rings, and "were fond of painting their faces with red cosmetics."

Later on, with the coming of the Plantagenets, the dandies thirsted to make experiments.

A new male garment, the "cotehardie," was evolved, shaped close to the figure and made of fine flowered silk. Over this was worn the "houppelande," a voluminous species of cloak with a very high collar buttoning up to the chin and fitting only on the shoulders; the sleeves, narrow at the top, became so wide at the wrist that they touched the ground.

Woman, on the other hand, displayed during this period little originality or individuality in her costume. She was content to adapt her dress from the existing fashions of the man. For riding—and she rode astride—she was habited exactly the same as a man.

Extravagance in dress continued and increased for some centuries; right down, in fact, till late Georgian times.

But with the coming of the Victorian age came reaction. Men clothed themselves like undertakers' mutes, and for hats wore upon their heads covered-in stove-pipe erections of cardboard and silk.

Women attired themselves in terrific skirts, with bustles; wore huge masses of false hair which hung from the back of their neck in a chignon, a netted excrescence longer than the head; comic little hats, and ugly elastic-side boots with striped stockings showing above.

What Happens When You Get Sunburnt

BENEATH your skin are tiny glands capable under conditions of producing minute specks of a certain brownish coloring matter.

Light contains certain "rays" which, though invisible, have a chemical effect upon these glands. These rays are found in electric light, but it is, of course, from the sun that their effects are chiefly felt.

The sunburn is really a sort of shield of coloring matter, which absorbs the sun's heat and then gives it out again in the form of perspiration, so protecting the blood from getting overheated. So that the same force which attacks also helps to build up the body's protection against the assault. Without a certain amount of sunburn man would undoubtedly suffer ill-effects from the heat of the sun.

How BIRDS Clean Their FEATHERS

CREATURES of the wild, both birds and beasts, are extremely clean. Feathers and coats are invariably sleek and well-groomed, unless the creature is unwell. It is a sure sign that something is wrong if you see ruffled feathers or a coat that is tangled and dirty.

Birds use both water and dust for cleaning themselves. Some prefer one, some the other. The sparrow likes a dust-bath, though when the weather is very warm he may be seen splashing about in the roadside puddles after a thunderstorm.

It is usually the birds that live on the wing that use water for washing. Birds that spend most of their time on the ground like a dust-bath, to get rid of the insects and other irritating creatures which are picked up from the ground.

The pheasant and the partridge never go near water except when they are thirsty, and require it for drinking purposes.

Fowls are the same. Give them access to dust, and you can see them enjoying themselves in it. Feathers are ruffled, so that the dust can get to the skin, from which the fowl shakes it when the bath is finished. Then comes a great preening with the bill, for the feathers keep the body warm and watertight, and unless each is in its proper place the air penetrates to the skin.

Birds that live in the water never take a dust-bath. They splash themselves for cleanliness, shaking their wings and working the water up and down between their feathers.

MEALS That MAKE the Best DIET

"IT ought not to be difficult to plan a well-balanced diet," writes Dr. Benjamin Harrow in his latest book, "What to Eat in Health and Disease" (Dutton's). "It is not our intention to give elaborate menus with detailed instruction. Our experience has taught us the utter valuelessness of such lists, except in the preparation of food for every large groups, as in the army, in hospitals and in institutions of various kinds. We shall merely give lists of foods suitable for the three meals per day. We shall spread our wares on the table and allow the housekeeper to make her own choice, which, in turn, will depend very largely on her own, her husband's and her children's tastes, and more particularly on the state of her husband's finances.

"Breakfast: Fresh fruit in season; otherwise stewed fruit. A variety of cereal (oatmeal, cream of wheat, etc.) with sugar (sparingly) and milk. Egg (preferably soft, scrambled or poached), bread and butter and coffee, tea or milk (preferably).

"Lunch: What is popularly but erroneously known as a vegetarian lunch is recommended. This might include bread and butter and milk (or cocoa containing much milk), and a salad (preferably a fruit one). During the Winter months a vegetable soup may be ordered in addition. A salad, two slices of bread, a slab of butter and a glass of milk, constitute an ideal light lunch, and no other type of lunch is necessary or, in the long run, is as wholesome.

"Dinner: A variety of soup on alternate days during the Winter, to be discarded altogether during the Summer months. Once or twice a week a special appetizer—oysters, for example—may precede this dish. Meat not more than twice a week, chicken once a week, fish twice a week, if possible. Arrange a dairy supper twice a week, when, in place of meat and fish you have a dish that includes eggs or cheese. Potatoes, boiled or baked, but not often fried, at least three times a week. Other vegetables, such as carrots, spinach, peas, beans, wherever possible. Milk and bread and butter, a light dessert. Fruit jelly (with a sip of cream, if you must) and raw fruit (for example, the peach and plum when in season) at least three times a week. Avoid the rich, creamy, suggary combinations. Empty at least one glass of water at each meal, and probably two at dinner."

Open Air Fireplace for Cool Evenings

IN a semi-tropical climate where hot days may be followed by very cool evenings, an open fireplace on the veranda may not be so incongruous as it might seem to be at first. A writer in Popular Science Monthly describes such a fireplace that has been built into a corner of the veranda of a Los Angeles home. The low walls of the veranda are of cobblestones. The fireplace itself is of the same construction, with a brick chimney extending high enough into the air to conduct the smoke cloudward.

This Rough Stone Porch Fireplace Is Useful in a Semi-Tropical Climate Where Cool Evenings Follow Warm Days.

Here on cool evenings a bright log fire is built, which makes it possible for the residents to enjoy the out-of-doors.

The PERIL in Nose OPERATIONS

MANY modern medical discoveries, according to Dr. Paul Trudeau, a prominent Canadian physician, may be responsible for the increase in the number of diseases.

"We have been getting too far from nature and it is time we retraced our steps," says Dr. Trudeau in explaining the growth of catarrhal maladies as an instance.

"Fifty years ago catarrh was an almost unknown disease," he said. "To-day it is universal. Three out of every five Americans have it in some form or another.

"The principal reason for this lies in the popular faith in the operation for the removal of the tonsils as a cure-all. The tonsils are a vital part of the human anatomy in that they act as a filter of the air we breathe. Take them out and that filter is removed, impurities lodge in the bronchial tubes and catarrh is almost certain to result.

"Better a swoolen tonsil than permanent catarrh, which may and very often does lead to tuberculosis, pneumonia, pleurisy and death.

"When the tonsils operation began to be practised in 1896 there were only a few isolated cases throughout the world. The operation was a dangerous one then and often resulted in fatal hemorrhage. But the surgery became simplified into an operation no more immediately dangerous than the extraction of a tooth, and public ignorance made a fetich of the so-called 'remedy.'"

Similarly Professor Trudeau condemned hasty operations on the nose.

"The nasal membrane is one of the most delicate in the entire system and very little suffices to permanently damage it," he asserted. "Yet there are thousands of specialists in the removal of the septum—a protective bone, placed there by nature—who cannot take care of their would-be patients, so numerous are they."

Dr. Trudeau recommended the exterior application of light as the best means of curing nasal maladies.

"Plenty has been written condemning hasty abdominal surgery," he resumed, "but despite this more than 200,000 people annually go gladly under the knife.

"I do not hesitate to say that not 10 per cent of appendicitis operations are justified by the patient's condition.

"At the same time I do not condemn surgeons for practising the appendicitis operation if they genuinely believe in its efficacy.

"Most diseases, other than infectious ones—and many of these are included, too— are caused by three things; Mistaken diet, mistaken clothing, lack of exercise.

"Good food, porous and light-admitting clothing, fresh air and a moderate amount of exercise remain the great preventive mediums, serums and 'medical discoveiries' to the contrary notwithstanding."

Experiments in Cross-Breeding

MANY novel experiments have been tried in cross-breeding. An animal produced by a cross between a wild American bison bull and a Hereford cow seems likely to be one of the best beef-producers of the future. It is called the "cattleo," and numbers are being bred in Canada for the market.

The late Mr. Hagenbeck made many experiments in cross-breeding. He successfully crossed the lion and tiger, their progeny having a tiger's body and a lion's head.

Equally interesting but much more useful is a cross between the Southdown sheep and the large wild sheep from Central Asia. The new sheep is very hardy, can withstand great cold, and gives excellent mutton.

Pheasants from Central Asia have been crossed with the ordinary wild pheasant, resulting in a large bird which is strong on the wing, and a splendid creature from the sportsman's point of view.

The mule, a cross between the horse and the donkey, has always been one of the most useful of draught animals. The only objection to it has been its somewhat sulky temper.

There has lately been produced in British East Africa a new cross which is as good as the mule and less stubborn. This is called the "zebrule," and is half horse, half zebra. These creatures stand about fourteen hands high, are very hardy, good workers, and easily broken to harness.

Disease DANGERS Detected in DREAMS

BECAUSE practically everyone has a dream now and then all that modern mental science has to say by way of explanation of these events is full of interest. They are by no means so absurd and meaningless as is generally supposed. Scientists have learned that most dreams are built up by the sub-conscious mind from reminiscences of the previous day, mixed with material derived from the days of infancy.

"The objection may be made," a scientific authority explains, "that we are familiar with certain facts, or are doing things which do not accord with the truth of our experience. But we must not be so sure of this, because, while we dream, our memory is really more active than when we are awake. Hence events which we have actually experienced are represented before our dream consciousness—events of which during our waking hours we have no recollection.

"These dreams seldom occur in a purposeless kind of way. For instance, while many dreams are sufficiently disturbing to waken the dreamer, other types promote and prolong slumber.

"Students of mental science are aware that a dream is the dramatic, or even the melodramatic, representation of a repressed desire. Thus, when we are asleep, we wish to continue sleeping, but disturbances of our sense organs—movements, noises, flashes of light, internal discomfort or pain—occur, which threaten to make us wide awake.

"It is then that the dream comes along to render first aid to the sleepy. The hungry and thirsty castaway sits down to a royal banquet, or the poverty-stricken beggar finds untold gold; and both continue placidly to dream their pleasant dreams."

The great modern investigator of dreams, Professor Freud, says that if in the evening he eats olives, anchovies, or other highly-salted foods, he eventually awakens in order to satisfy his thirst. But this awakening is delayed as long as possible by a dream which regularly recurs in these circumstances. In this dream he is slaking his thirst with deep draughts of water which is as delicious as only a cool drink can be when one's throat reminds one of the Sahara.

But there are others, such as those represented by the type that wake you up with a start, or it may be even in terror and a cold perspiration. Strange as it may appear, these unwelcome dreams wake you up for your own good.

The commonest dream of this unpleasant type is the nightmare, due to the eating of food that is unsuitable by reason of its indigestibility, its bulk, its admixture with foods or drink, or the lateness of the hour at which it has been taken. This dream warns you that unless that you reform your dietetic habits your health will suffer permanently.

Again, if you are sleeping in such a position that your breathing is impeded, your imperfectly aerated blood will convey such a message to your brain centres as will conjure up a dream sufficiently startling to wake you up with a jerk and change your posture to one that allows your breathing apparatus free play. A badly ventilated bedroom will also cut into your unhealthy slumbers with a vivid picture of impending calamity which literally opens your eyes to your unhealthy surroundings.

But perhaps the most terrifying "alarums" of dreamland are reserved for the instant rousing of sleepers whose heart action and circulation has been, or is being, injuriously affected by an awkward posture, pressure of bedclothes, an over-filled stomach, excess of drink, tobacco or exertion. The alarming dream resulting from the one or the other of these causes makes the dreamer sit up in bed, a change of posture which often does all that is needful to meet the immediate requirements of his circulation.

Why Two Weeks Are Called a Fortnight

THE word fortnight is simply a contraction of fourteen nights, exactly as a week was once referred to as a "Sennight," for seven nights.

Why one word has been kept in popular use and the other dropped seems at first hard to explain, but the reason is only that while "a week" is easier to say than "a sennight," the word "fortnight" comes more readily to the tongue than "two weeks." As language always chooses the easiest path, the word "sennight" was dropped and the word "fortnight" retained.

The reason why a period of time should be reckoned in nights rather than days is only that the custom of most nations was to count the twenty-four hours as starting at sunset instead of at sunrise.

Don't Dab PERFUME On Your DRESS

TO those women who are in the habit of dabbing a little perfume on the front of their gowns, it will be news to discover that this is just the way it should not be done. "Such a method of applying it," says one of the best known authorities on the subject, "not only risks a spot on the delicate fabric, but the perfume will be too evident, and it will linger long after our mood has changed, and we may prefer to change our perfume the next time we put on the dress. Instead of this direct application, a very little perfume should be applied to a piece of cotton, and concealed beneath the front of the frock."

One's handkerchiefs and gloves, it appears, should not be hurriedly scented with a spot of perfume at the last moment. Instead, a piece of perfumed blotting-paper kept in the drawer will lend them a faint fragrance, and a daintier way to add the last-moment touch of perfume to the gloves is to slip a tiny piece of perfumed cotton or little glove handkerchief carrying the favorite odor in one of them.

The faintest touch of perfume may be applied behind the ear or on the upper lip, but to lend a delicate perfume to the hair, instead of applying it directly, the perfume is placed on a piece of cotton and concealed in the lining of one's hat. For evening, a tiny spot of perfume may be placed on the tip of the fan, where its fragrance may be wafted in any direction the owner wishes to wave it.

EXCESSIVE OIL BAD FOR ENGINE

Too much oil in a car will cause the engine to smoke; it soots up the plugs, making the engine miss explosions; it accumulates in the head of the cylinders, causing pre-ignition and knocking; it makes the valves leak and lose compression and power; and makes the engine overheat, which causes a further loss of power. Bluish-white smoke pouring from the exhaust pipe is a symptom of trouble which is approaching, slowly but inevitably.

Ignition cables can be ideally protected with garden hose.

Loose battery terminals may be tightened by using a thin sheet of tinfoil.

The best way to keep the car looking new is to have it varnished every six months.

When a short circuit occurs, heat will always generate at the point of trouble.

A cotter pin can be worked into a hole much easier if one end of the pin is shortened.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

520 Sherbrooke St., City,
Nov. 29, 1923.

EDITOR EXAMINER:—

This time last year I was trying to get a bit of coal, and found it very difficult to get a hearing from the dealers. It was like approaching a king or some autocrat. But this year I was fortunate enough to purchase two tons of Alberta coa.. Have been using it right along, and like it well. Will be sorry when I have it all used up.

For throwing out heat I think it equal to anthracite, it will not last as long, but you haven't to carry out a lot of clinkers and slate, the ash from it I sue for my garden as a fertilizer. The coal is splendid for starting in the range these mornings. A bit of light wood and some Alberta coal on top, and you very quickly have a nice bed of coals for toasting, etc.

I would like to get two or three tons of it for use every winter, for while using it, I know that my money is doing some good in Canada. I don't think our coal dealers are at all patriotic in their preference for U. S. coal. They seem very eager to swell out Uncle Sam's money bags.

I may need a little coal to help me out the winter, so please keep back my name and oblige,

Yours truly,
A COAL USER.

THE ANTI-TOXIN CRAZE

MR. EDITOR:—

Dear Sir,—All honor to the bug boosters who so laboriously follow the funeral processions of those infinitisimal pestiferous enemies of the human flesh. But if man was made in the image of God, we are left in wonder as to what image these conquerors of the human race were fashioned after. In what terror the trembling nations are being led up to the sacrifice.

Is there no hope for salvation other than this that with due solemnity we wait upon the pus-producing microbes that we have forced the poor animal to harbor in its body, and with a thankful Amen, transfer their refuse to nourish the poor starving baccilla in the bodies of our children. A few more years of this grand progress and the school curriculum will include two or three years in the clinical laboratory, getting loaded up with serums. Another two or three years learning how the conquering heroes act on parade up and down the anatomical playground, and the remainder of the allotted span in heated debates as to the generalship displayed by the different bug leaders in the body in their successive assaults.

"And I dipt into the future,
Where I saw the flags unfurled
With the words of warning written,
This is now a buggy world."

The old Egyptians were bug-haters. They spent a lot of time in baulking the demons of their feast, after the spirit had resigned its place but we have lost the secret, and so get the human body accustomed to the putrifying process as soon as the child is able to sustain the shock. There was a day in the past, if the Bible leads us aright, when human flesh had not taken such a slump in value; when the individual consciousness was given the right to lift the body through its own inherent power to that harmonious relationship in the divine plan, where these baccilla, which we have petted and pampered, could be relegated almost instantly to their proper place of utter dependence on higher function of the mind.

The greatest physician of all time—Jesus Christ—Whose great love prompted Him to take the earthly burdens of humanity that we might be shown more clearly the possibilities of our God-relationship through His example. Demonstrated time and again that vibratory forces could instantly work chemical changes in the body, even before His wonderful demonstrations the seers and prophets of Israel were aware of this mode of function. Christ's disciples and pupils found that working under his instructions the laws which He had revealed and which were so perfectly reflected in His own physical, mental, moral and spiritual being, were operative whenever they spoke the word. We may still keep the mind and its grander creative principles subservient to the body and its corruptable changes or lifting it into the clearer light of the type that Christ has set. Bring that vital immunizing power which will leave us free from this obsession of being slaves to the bugs and bug boosters.

Yours faithfully,
JOSEPH GRIERSON.

THE GREAT BETRAYAL
(By J. H. BURNHAM.)

Who would have thought a few years ago that sayings by Jesus as recorded in the New Testament concerning the Old Testament would have been termed impossible and ridiculous.

And that, too, by the evangelical clergy! But such is the fact. I have already quoted two instances. But now I will refer to a third. You will remember that Christ likened His descent into the tomb and His resurrection to the experiences of Jonah. He specifically compares one to the other and uses Jonah as an illustration. But the higher critics who comprise nearly all the evangelical clergy, aver that the Book of Jonah is merely a poem written by people of a romantic turn of mind to illustrate their ideas. It is said by the critics not to be what Jesus affirms that it is. With the Book of Jonah therefore goes the whole story of the resurrection. If one is untrue so must the other be. For if Jesus was wrong about one He must necessarily have been wrong about the other. The critics allege him in so many words to be just like other men in his mental attainments, liable to error and guilty of error—and not even knowing enough to be a higher critic. All who follow the evangelical clergy in this new apostasy (called by them their search for truth which they thus allege is not contained in the old faith) are turning their backs upon Christ. As the French cleric well said, "They crucify Christ again," . . . . "To such base uses have come."

A few quotations may perhaps be more satisfactory for your readers than my observations which, however, are necessary, perhaps, to draw attention to the purpose of the quotations. The Rev. Dr. A. B. Davidson, a famous evangelical minister and higher critic says: "The creation and the flood narratives are not the inventions or imaginations of Hebrew writers; neither are they what might be called immediate revelations to the minds of the writers. They are reproductions of traditions and modes of thought common to a large division of the human race;" and then the Rev. James Denny, D. D., says: "The plain truth, and we have no reason to hide it, is that we do not know the beginnings of man's life, of his history, of his sin." Look at the last three words. Another great critic and evangelical teacher, in his address to American students at the Universities, said: "This is the service which in the providence of God Biblican criticism is doing for the modern mind; it is helping us to see how this which we feel must be true is really so." Then, filled with the modernist spirit, which has spread to the laity, of criticising severely God's plan of governing mankind and of substituting compulsion for no sin He provides punishment for sin only, we have people complacently allowing the destruction of the Bible as the inspired word of God, while they attack other things which in comparison with Higher Criticism are as innocent as water. The truth is we are in a silly, stupid and self-righteous age. We have reached that point where we know more than God. I will close this letter with a quotation from another leader of the people, the Rev. Professor Jackson, who says: "We must not raise a hue and cry against criticism, as if it were robbing us of our Bible; the facts are not the critics' facts—they are God's. It is He and not we who are responsible for them. . . ." It is such creatures as these and their any thing but humble follo. ers, who have assumed the moral governance of the world. It will take another blody war to clean up this modernistic impertinence. And yet these people would prohibit us! What next?

NO CLOCKS ARE USED IN CHINA.

In Corea They Have No Special Hours For Anything, They Eat When They Feel Like It.

You'd never hear an alarm clock if you lived in Korea. People there pay no attention to time, according to the book, "Wandering in Northern China."

Koreans, reports the author, have no special hours for anything. They eat when they get hungry, not before. They don't go to bed until they're tired, regardless of the clock. And they don't get up in the morning until they feel like it.

How'd you like this sort of life?

After all, there's a lot of horse sense to the Korean system of eating and sleeping according to impulse. Impulse or craving is the voice of nature.

Nature tells us when we need food. She tells us when we need sleep.

Our ancestors, back yonder in caveman days, probably obeyed nature's voice. In becoming civilized, we have somehow gotten the notion that regularity in our habits is "the thing."

We are slaves of the clock instead of nature.

What difference does it make? Well, nearly all of man's problems are results of violating natural laws.

Regularity of course, is necessary in this automatic existence, civilization. For civilization is an association of individuals, a grouping in herds for mutual benefit. Grouped, we exchange ideas and the products of our labors.

Such an exchange necessitates routine. And, the more highly civilized we become, the more routine—mechanical existence—naturally.

Marmora Expects to Play in Trent Valley.

MARMORA, Nov. 29.—The prospects for hockey are about up to normal this year. Mr. Walter Donnelly, the owner of the skating rink property, has not yet decided whether he will run the rink himself, or allow the Marmora Skaring Rink Co. lease it to someone else. However, this will be decided at the meeting of the shareholders and anyway the youngsters in town needn't worry as it is certainlyMMMMMMMM worry as it is a certainty that they will be provided with a rink. As for the lookout concerning a senior hockey team this winter, it is about as bright as usual. Several players on the high school team last year will make good material for the senior team this year if Marmora enters a team in the Trent Vzlley Hockey League. These, among whom are Gordon McWilliams, Ralph Neal and Jack Brady along with the old standbys like Leal, Shannon, Jones and Wells, supplemented by what material Deloro can produce, ought to make a snappy team indeed.

WESLEY BARRY GOOD AS EVER IN NEW FILM

Mischief-Loving Screen Favorite Splendid in "The Printer's Devil."

All the boyish tricks and pranks that we love so much to see in our own boys are admirably portrayed by Wesley Barry, the young freckle-faced star, in his new picture, "The Printer's Devil," which opened for a three days' run at the Royal yesterday.

With an admirable supporting cast, including Harry Myers, who played the welathy young city man thrown upon his own resources; Katherine McGuire, as the beautiful young daughter of a small-town banker; George Pierce, her father; and Louis King, Ray Cannon, Mary Halter and Harry Rottenberg, the story reveals how a simple, fun-loving boy, working as a printer's devil on the village newspaper, brings about the happy conclusion to a story of petty cheating and intrigue on one side, and honest, open-hearted dealing and love on the other.

It is not too often these days that we have the opportunity of seeing a picture and leaving the playhouse just brimful of good feeling and satisfaction. But "The Printer's Devil" is just that kind of a picture, with just the kind of cast, and with the unobtrusive but very tangible signs of the excellent direction of William Beaudine, to make one feel young again and think of the days when one went to school and had never a care in the world.

The story was especially written for Wesley Barry by Julien Josephson.

GRIFFITH SET MARK FOR FILM PRODUCERS

His "The Birth of a Nation" Coming to the Royal Theatre Monday Tuesday and Wednesday

Since D. W. Griffith's American triumph, "The Birth of a Nation," a United Artists release, paved the way for the super-screen productions and proving that they could be made sucessfully, they have been followed by several others. The usual method of exploiting these was to pick out a catch line from some obsolete review and herald the new born effort as greater than the Griffith success. While those who have followed the career of "The Birth of a Nation' closely have never denied that these newcomers are greater than the pioneer of them all they have waited patiently to see one that is just as good. As no producer has modestly laid claim to such distinction it remained for a revival of "The Birth of a Nation" to demonstrate that it was the only one. Its reappearance at the Royal Theatre for a stay of three days will emphasize these simple facts.

In its way ths great spectacle is unique. Nothing of its kind has been conceived because there is no picture subject which embraces the scope of history and intense drama that is crowded into the story which is the foundation of "The Birth of a Nation."

With its historical scenes ts romantic love interest between the children of Southern and Northern parents, its rich atmosphere of the ante bellum days below the Mason and Dixon line, stirring scenes of rehabilitation culminating in the rising up of a down trodden peope to throw off intolerable yokes which threaten their lives and property made terrifically and realistically impressive by the battles of the Civil War—such es so many points of interest that it taps the very heart core of the crucial welding of the great nation into a mighty union.

What contemporary drama rooted in American history has ever approached such a span? Little won der then that it is thrilling beyond description and interesting in every moment of its unfolding. The appeal of it all will ever remain fresh in American hearts. It comes back after an absence of several years to appeal to a new clientele and will be presented in the same magnificent manner which established it in

AT THE CAPITOL.

The role of Tom Mix in movie productions seems to be always one of action and stirring life. As the central character in such a drama, he is hard to equal. Along with his wonder horse, Tony, he is at the Capitol Theatre for this week end in a screen dramatization of one of the ever-popular Zane Grey stories, "The Lone Star Ranger."

An outlaw fighting a nest of outlaws, a man redeeming his forfeited life by facing single-handed a group of venemous desperadoes, is the gist of the story, which provides fire and movement enough to satisfy the most faded fan. In the Lone Star state, the Chesledines operate, a band of cattle rustlers, hold-up men and stage robbers. Tom Mix, as Duane, an outlaw from justice, is brought in by the Texas Rangers and offered a chance for life in going out to brave the band, alone. He takes it, and becomes involved immediately in intrigue that leads finally to the band's capture and his own vindication.

There is the wonder horse waiting for his master, jumping with him from perilous heights and giving an almost human touch to its speechless role. There are wild rides, amazing escapes and a chase with bloodhounds. There is a girl, Helen Strathway, played by Billie Dove, as the daughter of the band's leader, his identity masked under respectable guise through many thrilling episodes. There are vivid hold-ups and a bank robbery, in a series of situations that make a red-blooded, thrilly picture, with all the exciting pleasure that comes from a portrayal of one man's pluck and daring matched against almost overwhelming odds. Tom Mix holds the stage throughout with his wonder horse.

The comedy is a hilarious mix-up with the absurd hero comedian wending his serious way through a variety of situations arising out of a will that declares as a condition to inheritance of a fortune, the necessity of a large number of relatives living together in "peace and harmony" for on year on a small plot of ground.

SECOND EPISODE OF "SPEED" STARRING HURRICANE HUTCH AT CAPITOL SATURDAY MATINEE

The second episode of "Speed" the thrilling serial starring Hurricane Hutch will be shown at the Capitol theatre Saturday matinee only. This episode is called "Nerve" and is said to one ot the most exciting in the entire serial.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS COMING TO CAPITOL NEXT MONDAY.

"The Fighting Blade" Richard Barthelmess' newest production will be the attraction at the Capitol theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. This is a rip-roaring story of the good old days when Oliver Cromwell and his Round-heads ruled England and is thick with romance, intrigue, clashing-sword thrills and hairbreath escapes. Barthelmess plays the roles of a dashing Cavalier and is seen to great advantage in it. It is said to be one of his finest pictures since "Tol'able David."

AT THE GRAND.

BRINGING UP FATHER

Something radically a departure from the usual and conventional in musical comedy is promised in "Bringing Up Father On Broadway" which is to hold the boards at the Grand theatre commencing tonight with two performance tomorrow, matinee and night. The new cartoon play based on the famous comics by George McManus is in two acts and five scenes. John P. Mulgrew is the author of the book and lyrics. A real plot involving plenty of side-splitting complications and situations and written on original lines takes the various characters around the world. Of course the beloved Jiggs Mahoney will be a conspicuous figure. And it may be assured that Maggie his termangent better half along with Dinty Moore and Kitty are also in the limelight. Maggie still contrives how to spend "Father's" money her social aspirations having not been squelched even in the face of past failures and tribulations. An elaborate and up-to-the-minute production the employment of a capable cast a pretty bevy of chorus girls and other original features should provide unusual entertainment.

MANY CANADIANS RETURNING HOME

The Canadians That Left Canada and Followed the Big Boom to California, Are Now Wiser Men.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 29.—The "Northward Ho" movement on the part of Canadian residents in California is growing stronger every day, and hundreds who left the Dominion last year now are on their way back, declared W. J. Hammond, a former Winnipeg business man, who returned to this city. Many workers and their families attracted by the high wages prevailing last year, but the boom is about over tand they are again on the homeward trek.

Prominent Los Angeles men have told Mr. Hammond that the financial and building boom in that section of the country has reached its peak and that the reaction in sight will be terrible. Things are so far past their value that it can not last much longer. The real estate boom has already extended to a point eighteen miles from the centre of the city; and the hundreds who have bought small lots, thinking that they could raise fruit and vegetables with profit are just now discovering their mistake.

Those who will return last will be the mechanics, who are still able to get work at good wages. But even the mechanics will soon be forced to yield to the call of the northland.

"Southern California has a wonderful climate—it is an excellent place in which to live—but after 13 years in the country I have been forced to the conclusion with the hundreds of other Canadians who are now returning north, that there is no place like Canada," stzted Mrl Hammond.

GOOD BOWLING AT WATER STREET ALLEYS.

Some good bowling was turned in last night at the Water Street Alleys. There were four different leagues in action beside the other usual bowling.

On the evening's play George Green was high with 542, while Stanton had the high single of 209. J. C. Greene rolled 513 for his three games and some of the other players had nice scores.

The Quaker Oats Ten Pin League got in a couple of games. Jones' team took two straigh from Donnelly's outfit. Kirn was high man for both game with 371, and also had the high single.

In the Mercantile Five Pin League the Wm. Hamilton took two out of three from the Nashua Paper. All three games were hard fought and proved very interesting. The Wm. Two more of his men also passed the 500 mark while three on the Nashua team rolled over 500, Robinson rolling the high score for his team of 523.

The Brinton Carpet League also was productive of some good bowling, when the Ardebils took two out of three from the Windsors. Shaughnessy who was the high man for the evening showed up in great form when he rolled 641 for three games. He rolled over 200 in every game. The Brinton Carpet players are hanging up some nice scores and have some sweet bowlers in their league.

WILLIE RITOLA WON IN DETROIT

Jimmy Dellow of Toronto Fourth in Ten-Mile Race —All Starters Finished.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 29.—Willie Ritola, of the Finnish-American Athletic Club of New York, the national ten-mile and cross country champion, won the annual 10 mile race of the Irish-American Athletic Club here to-day, completing the distance in 53.08 3-5.

Jimmy Moorcroft, of the Millet Athletic Club of Detroit, finished second, and Jimmy Dellow, of the Gladstone Athletic Club of Toronto, third, their time being 55.56 4-4 and 55.57 1-5, respecttively. Chuck Mellor, of the Illinois Athletic Club, finished fourth and Aug. Faber and Gunner Nilson of the Finnish-American Athletic Club in the order named.

Ritola, who broke the tape at the starter's gun, never was headed. His sterling display of grit enabled him to lower the record for the ten miles over the local course which was often blocked by automobiles and spectators.

The race was unique in that all of the 38 runners who started finished, including Mitchell Baker, the 54 year old runner of Chicago.

CHILEAN HANDED KNOCKOUT.

Clarke Griffith Tries Umpiring; Has Most Unusual Experience

BY BILLY EVANS

ONE day last summer in a game at Washington a certain play came up in which the base umpire after rendering a decision of out on a play was overruled by the plate umpire and the runner called safe. The ball beat the runner, but the first baseman juggled the ball several times and it was in the air when the runner passed over the base. The base umpire couldn't see the juggling ball because of his position back of the fielder. When informed by the plate umpire that the ball had been juggled a number of times, the base umpire changed his ruling, declaring the runner safe.

The reversing of the decision caused considerable gossip and incidentally caused Clarke Griffith, president of the Washington club, to relate an unusual thing that happened to him along those lines during his days as a star pitcher for the Chicago Nationals, Griffith, always a close student of the game, one day essayed the role of big league umpire and thereby hangs the story, but we will let "Griff" tell it himself.

"The umpires failed to show up for a Sunday game at Chicago and "Cap" Anson, then managing the Chicago club of which team I was a member, selected me as one of the umpires. The other umpire was a visiting player. I umpired the bases.

"A rather close play came up at first base in which I declared the visiting runner out. I felt sure that I had rendered the proper ruling, but from the kick that resulted a lot of folks must have thought otherwise. The visiting players surrounded me, called me all kinds of names, threatened to leave the field and do many other dire things, but I stood my ground and insisted the man was officially out and that settled it. Imagine my surprise when I hear 'Cap' Anson say to the captain of the visiting club:

"'Come on and let us play, quit kicking. The man was safe. I know it and he is going to stay on first.'

"The game was resumed with the man I had declared out taking his place on first. Later he scored, and that run decided the ball game against Chicago. As an umpire, therefore, I believe I hold the record, in having a decision in favor of the home team overruled by the leader of that club. Beat that one if you can."

BELMONTS WIN CLUB SECTION

Defeated the L.O.L. 50 Before a Large Crowd in Fast and Exciting Game —Will Meet De Laval For Championship.

Last evening the Belmonts won from the L.O.L. 50 by the score of 14 to 13 after a very fast and furious game punctuated with plenty of arguments. One of the largest crowds in years turned out to see the battle and their rooting could be heard for blocks. It was a battle from start to finish and at the end the Belmonts were declared the winners of the Club section. They will now meet the De Laval in the finals which is the best two out of three games, for the city championship. The L.O.L., although they were six runs behind at the end of the eighth never gave up hope and in the ninth they stood up to the plate like Babe Ruths and walloped Holyman for five runs. The teams lined up as follows:

L.O.L.—Batten, 2b; K. Hardill, ss; Dobson, c; J. Hardill, 1b; McGee, lf; Hall, 3b; Helson, rf; Fitzgerald, ss; Nicholls, p.

Belmonts—Batten, ss; Lowe, 1b; Heckman, lf; Stuart, 2b; Holyman, p; Jobbitt, 3b; Haskill, c; Fanning, rf; Thompson, ss.

Score by innings:

L.O.L. ..... 202310005—13
Belmonts ..... 15110105x—14

The feature play of the game was a double play from Thompson to Lowe.

Umpires—Kay, McMartin and Mackey.

The runners of the two sections, the Gunners and the Quakers also played a very fast game. The latter team won by the score of 6 to 3, after six innings. The score was 8 to 6 for Gunners when the game was called but on account of the Quakers not getting their innings the score went back to the former innings. The teams lined up as follows:

Gunners—Piercy, p; Ranger, c; Ross, 1b; Wolfe, 2b; Coursey, 3b; Dundas, ss; White, ss; Simmons, lf; Bradley, rf.

Quakers—Kearnes, ss; Dineen, lf; Meyette, ss; Kirn, 3b; Guerin, 1b; Collins, 2b; Turner, c; Carruthers, p; Cunningham, cf; Graham, rf.

Score by innings:

Gunners ..... 00021—3
Quakers ..... 60000—6

Umpires— Kay, McMartin and Frick.

QUEEN'S CONFIDENT OF CHAMPIONSHIP

Substitutes Show Up Promisingly at Work-out— McKelvey Will Play.

KINGSTON, November 29.—Minus the services of "Chick" Mundell and Delehay, Queen's worked out this afternoon at the Richardson stadium, and are now in the pink of condition for the final game in Toronto on Saturday with the Regina team for the Dominion championship.

The players had a brisk practice, and seemed ready to tackle any team that could be trotted out against them.

"Red" McKelvey, the husky middle wing of the champions, while using a cane, is in far better shape for the game than he was last Saturday. He expects to start against the westerners and play through the entire game. When spoken to by the Canadian Press, McKelvey said that the westerners play an open game which will be just what the tri-color want.

"They'll bring the play to us," said the burly wing man, "and we'll take it."

Gib McKelvey, who is taking Mundell's place on the half line, shaped up better than ever to-day, while Adams seemed to have fitted into Delehay's position to a nicety. Coach Hughes had the players under wraps the most of the afternoon, and is taking no chances on getting any of the players injured before the game.

It is likely that about 500 fans from here will make the trip to Toronto for the game, and everyone is confident that the tri-color will capture the championship of Canada for the second time in succession.

Trainer Billie Hughes has Queen Boo-Hoo ready to make the trip and everything points to another glorious victory for Queen's.

Pittsburgh, 20; Penn State 3

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 29.—One of the outstanding upsets of the 1923 football season was recorded at Forbes Field to-day when the University of Pittsburgh machine swamped the strong Penn. State eleven, 20 to 3. The gridiron was extremely muddy, but Pitt uncorked an aerial assault which State could not solve.

Nebraska 34; Kansas Ag. 12

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 29.—Nebraska University stopped the Kansas Aggies passing machine on the football field here to-day, and won 34 to 12. Consistent line smashing by Noble, overbalanced the Aggies' passing. By winning to-day, Nebraska completed its Missouri Valley Conference schedul, without a defeat. The University of Kansas, the only other undefeated Conference team, played a 3 to 3 tie with Missouri in a snowstorm at Lawrence, Kansas.

THE GEORGE STREET BAZAAR

There was plenty of patronage at all hours for the Christmas Fair which commenced yesterday in the Sunday school rooms of the George street Methodist Church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, with Mrs. G. L. Stevens, and Mrs. P. Hetherington as general convenors, assisted by dozens of the members. The bazaar closes this evening. Afternoon tea is served and fowl supper on both days, with the tables laid in the parlour, the primary department, and at one end of the big assembly room, loaded with all manner of home made dainties.

The big hall has been turned into a miniature of the real bazaar idea with colorful booths decorated in harmonious, elaborate style, lining all four sides of the room and taking up the central space, leaving narrow aisles through which the crowd throngs to examine dainty wares. Soft music adds the finishing touch to the pleasant atmosphere of the big interior in one of the prettiest bazaars of the saosn.

Everything that a bazaar sale specializes in is on view, excellent in quality and quantity both. The decorative scheme is exceptionally pretty, with each booth done in a different color, in varying arrangements and effects. Colored paper streamers cover the overhead lights, and an effective note in the arrangement of every section are the large, varitinted toy balloons that hang pendant from side sections or clusters overhead.

Rev. W. H. Young opened the bazaar in formal fashion yesterday afternoon after which everything was in full swing. The sale itself, the fowl supper tables, and the afternoon tea room were thronged with patrons during the ensuing afternoon and evening hours, in an interior filled with movement and light and color.

At the whitewear booth with its pale prettiness of tinselled green and white, its large overhead lattice work faced with triple wheels, its table decorated with a lovely basket of pink and red artificial carnations, there are plenty of pretty things on view. Mrs. E. E. Lord is convenor of this section.

Next door, with yellow and white cheerful decorations in long festoons and streamers is the handkerchief and woollen goods counter, containing pretty things for the baby in light-colored wools and plenty of dainty handkerchiefs, many with finely-tatted edgings. A baby doll with spectacles, and tiny comfort, looks out on the world from a nest of colored handkerchiefs. Mrs. B. Shortley is in charge of this counter.

In the corner is a particularly attractive booth with unique decorations, where fine fancy work and linens are sold. Mauve and yellow are the color keynotes for this section. A tall brown reed holder contains a big bouquet of orange 'mums, it domed top of reed lined with vivid orange paper, while domed ornaments of the same shades mark the corner sections. Mrs. George Robertson has this sale.

Christmas greens, painted flowers, colored balloons and Christmas paper covered with red bells ornament the square enclosure in the middle of the hall, which holds the library section at one end and the flowers and potted plants at the other, in charge of Miss E. Higgins, Mrs. C. Staples and Mrs. G. F. Elliott.

One of the daintiest sections is that devoted to the sale of home made cooking, where Mrs. James Stubbs is in charge. White paper with a wild rose design trims the counters, where pink cherry blossoms climb up a white trellis and fill tall vases, and branches of yellow honeysuckle hang from the overhead frame.

A corner section houses aprons and porch dresses in great variety, with a large autograph quilt as a novelty. Here an entire top is formed of the orange and black paper that trims the booth where Miss S. Miller is in charge.

The bright hues of gold and yellow in varying tints, make the arbor where candy is sold, under the supervision of Mrs. H. M. Yelland. This is a very dainty section, with its cupola of yellow and white, its tiny butterfly and bluebird decorations, its pots of sunshine-yellow marigolds.

The Japanese tea garden, a bower of dainty charm, is a popular corner, where tea is dispensed from little tables to the sound of music, with lovely Japanese maidens in kimonas and obis and hair 'mums, flitting about. Cherry blooms over a white latticework, Japanese lanterns and rosepink festoons, form the decorations here, with a huge orange teacup surmounting the entrance. Mrs. W. Harold Young has charge of the tea room.

At the novelty counter near the door, where pretty Christmas fancies, ornamental and useful, may be bought, Mrs. W. McMillan and Mrs. W. G. Cornell are in charge of the little square section, with its gay hangings of cerise and black crinkled paper.

The tables for the fowl supper laid with snowy cloths, covered with goodies, and decorated with bright red paper, red candles and red carnations, are supervised by Mesdames P. Hagerman, James Long, W.Brock, William Hill and S. Kingdon.

Canadian Stock Exchange And Mines — New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—(Special). — Wall street was unable to form any definite conclusions about the developments abroad over the holidays, so it devoted its attention at the renewal of business to-day to stocks affected by special news. Gulf States Steel dropped three points to 81 1-2 reflecting disappointment over the action of the directors in authorizing only the regular dividend after Wednesday's close of the market.

Selling ex-dividend Baldwin showed a fractional loss at 124 3-4 but fresh strength appeared in Davison Chemical, which advanced to 74 in the early dealings against a low of 68 in the preceding session.

Special activity continued on individual stocks in the first half hour. Gulf States Steel steadied after its initial drop, reflecting buying based on the fact that a stock dividend came up for discussion at Wednesday's directors meeting.

There is in the treasury something over $1,000,000 second preferred stock which is convertible into common. It is understood that a resolution was passed by the Board to convict this second preferred which with the small amount of common now in the treasury, is equivalent to ten per cent of the common outstanding a declaration of a stock dividend is said to find ore favor among the directors than any suggested dividend increase or extra dividend.

In comparison with the recent activity trading was light in the late morning.

The volume of dealings showed a marked tendency to fall off when prices were declining. This tendency encouraged further operations for the rise in special stocks.

Associated dry good reached a new high on the movement, reflecting the record Christmas trade, the company is enjoying.

Tobacco products continued its advance on purchase amounted to interested identified with the management who feel that the company's business outlook and the disposition of manufacturing assets to the American Tobacco Co., assure the permanence of the $6 dividend rate recently established.

Takes First Prize in the Klondyke Beauty Contest Held Last Wednesday.

DAWSON, Y.T. Nov. 30—Elizabeth Grant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Grant, is the victor in the Klondyke beauty contest which was concluded in a whirlwind finish Wednesday. The contest was carried on through a regular polling system in which everybody was allowed to vote. The winner is the niece of Robert Henderson, discoverer of the first gold found in the Klondyke Valley. Miss Grant wins a nugget necklace trophy and the right to be crowned Queen of the Yukon at the annual pioneer ball here on Dec. 7.

Miss Pauline White was second choice; Grace Gladwin, third; Harriet Osborne, fourth; Rose Horsfall, fifth and Isabel McNeil, sixth. Thousands of votes were cast in the four preliminary contests and also in the final. Sour doughs in every walk of life took a keen interest and voted in the contests.

All the contestants are Yukon-born beauties under 18 years of age and the Klondyke backs them against the world.

PROTECTION FOR DAIRY INTEREST

Canada's Butter Will Continue to Come From the Cow.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press).—"I want Protection," said Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, when advocating the continued prohibition of oleomargarine before the Dairy Conference here to-day.

"This is not Protection. It is only a fair deal for the cow against the competition of the packing houses, not against another cow."

The Minister was speaking in acknowledgment of a resolution, adopted unanimously by the conference, congratulating him on his successful effort last session to prevent the continuance of the importation and manufacture of oleomargarine in Canada. The resolution was moved by A. E. McGruer, of Dundas County, and seconded by E. H. Stonehouse, of Weston, Ontario.

MILLBROOK, November 30. — Sandy Hanna, a mail carrier, whose route is just west of the village, took a stroke while on his rounds on Thursday.

He is about 62 years of age, and has been on the same route for over ten years.

When found, he was half hanging out of the buggy.

He was taken to his home immediately, and Dr. H. A. Turner was called. He found his left side paralyzed, and on account of his age he may not be able to get around for quite a while.

There was a slight improvement in his condition to-day.

Shoots at Flock of Decoy Ducks; Misses Only Live Bird in the Bunch

Shoots at flock

BY BILLY EVANS

EVANS

NEXT to baseball, Eddie Collins of the Chicago White Sox, recently mentioned as the probable manager of the Washington Nationals likes shooting. Collins isn't so strong for the big game stuff, and prefers bird shooting.

Just at present Collins is in the wilds of Maine with Bob Shawkey and several other players who lean to shooting as a winter sport. It may just have happened, but it is a bit of coincidence that the day the wires carried the report that Collins might manage Washington next year, he departed on a hunting trip. As a result no one has been able to get the view of Collins on the subject.

Chief Bender, one of the greatest pitchers of all time, who finished the 1923 season with Baltimore in the International League, is one of the best shots in the country. Chief prides himself on his ability to bring 'em down when he pulls the trigger. They do say that Chief's aim with the gun is even better than his control as a pitcher. That is saying something, for Chief sure could get them over.

Collins and Bender have been partners on many a hunting trip. Eddie tells this story at the expense of the Chief, and Bender, who is rather touchy on the question, insists that Eddie is just kidding.

On one of their hunting expeditions, so the story goes, Chief spied a flock of ducks. At the opportune moment he blazed away. To his great delight only one duck took to flight. The Chief was positive that ht had made a killing and started to brag about it. He even expressed regret that even one of the ducks had gotten away.

Collins was almost as enthused as Bender since he was not in on the joke. The pair hastened to the spot expecting to bag enough ducks to last out the year. Upon reaching the flock, it is easy to imagine Bender's disgust when he discovered that he had fired into a bunch of decoys and the only real live duck in the flock had gotten away.

Collins got a big laugh out of the situation while Bender profaned. Eddie insists if the Chief had ever used such language on an American League umpire as he did on the ducks, President Johnson would have suspended him for life.

It so happened that a friend of Bender's, who knew how touchy Bender was on his shooting ability, purposely planted the decoys to put one over on the Chief.

It worked out great.

Peckinpaugh Gets Draw Decision In Battle of Wits With Umpire

By BILLY EVANS.

ROGER PECKINPAUGH, famous shortstop of the Washington Nationals, is a great favorite with American League umpires. The reason—Roger never kicks unless he believes he has one coming. As a result, when he registers a complaint he always receives serious consideration.

On or off the ball field Roger is not inclined to be talkative, yet he has a keen sense of humor. One day last summer he and Umpire Dick Nallin staged a battle of repartee that was worth while, with a draw being a very fair decision.

Washington was playing at the Yankee Stadium, Nallin was calling balls and strikes, Waite Hoyt, pitching for the Yankees, was having one of his very good days and the Washington boys were having a tough time hitting his sharp breaking curve.

As is customary at all the ball parks, "Old Glory" floats from a flag pole in the outfield. At the Yankee Stadium is also a clock which keeps the fans in touch with the time so as to enable them to get away for dinner if the game happens to drag.

The first time Peckinpaugh faced Hoyt he popped up to the infield, the second time he tapped a weak bounder to Hoyt, the third trip to the plate had Nallin calling him out on a third strike that Peck was positive missed the plate by a fairly wide margin.

Peck was peeved. He seldom gets that way. However, on this occasion he was so positive that he was right, and the umpire wrong, that he couldn't refrain from expressing his disgust. Peck was nothing if not original in his style of making a protest. Walking half way back to the bench he turned in the direction of Nallin and shouted:

"How many flags on the pole?"

Quick to see that Peck was slipping him a choice bit of sarcasm, Nallin replied:

"Two."

"Correct," replied Peck. "How many hands on the clock."

"One," was Nallin's immediate comeback.

"Right once more," said Peck. "Now I can understand how you called that last one a strike."

MR. ROCCO ROCKS 'EM

ROCCO STAMAGLIA.

Out on the coast they think Rocco Stamaglia is the coming middleweight champion of the world. Rocco is a new comer in the ring game—in what fights he has appeared to date he has performed with high credit. Rocco is a tremendous hitter. When he hits 'em they stay hit. In the last three fights none of his opponents was able to come up for the third round. Rocco gave Jack Dempsey a stiff work out in a practice mill with the heavyweight champion.

WEDDING BELLS

PERDUE—BUCKLEY.

The marriage was solemnized at half past nine o'clock on Tuesday morning, November 27th, at St. Joseph's Church, Douro, by the Rev M. McGuire, of Beatrice Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Buckley, of Douro, and Charles A. Perdue, son of William Perdue and the late Mrs. Perdue of Ennismore.

The bride was becomingly attired in fawn canton crepe, with hat of brown velvet, and carried ophelia roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Carrie Young of Young's Point, wore green crepe, black velvet hat and carried Columbia roses. Mr. Leonard McAuliffe of Ennismore, acted as best man.

The wedding march was played by Miss Mabel Allen, and the church choir was in attendance for the ceremony.

A dainty wedding breakfast to nearly one hundred guests, was served later at the home of the bride's parents, when guests present included Rev. J. McAuley, of Ennismore, Rev J. Garvey of Lakefield, and Rev. M. McGuire of Douro.

After a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Perdue will reside in Ennismore

The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful gifts from a large circle of friends and relatives

OH, THAT'S ALL!

He—Who's the sullen-looking chap who keeps following us about?

She—Oh, he's only the fellow who brought me down here for the day.—Passing Show.

NEW YORK GANGSTERS IN CRIME SYNDICATE EXPOSED BY MURDERS

Plotted to Rob Bank of $750,000 But Decided It Was Too Risky — Slew Two Bank Messengers — Second Murder Revealed Since Arrest of Seven Conspirators.

LIKE BECKER CASE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—With eight men in custody and the plot unraveled, police believe they are near the solution of the double crime on Nov. 14, in which two west end bank messengers were shot dead without warning in a Brooklyn subway station and robbed of $43,607.

And as the police unfolded, chapter by chapter, one of the most startling slaying and robbery plots in the history of the city, they uncovered clues pointing to a "syndicate" of criminals. In the arrest already made, the police believe they have opened the way for the solution of numerous killings, holdups and auto thefts committed in the last few months.

Three men alleged to have had most important parts in the double crime are still at large but the search for them is said to be narrowing. Two of them have been revealed in admissions, by men already arrested as the gunmen who actually did the shooting which cost the lives of William S. Barlow and William H. McLaughlin and the police believe their arrest is near. The third man drove the automobile in which the bandits escaped.

Bungalow Raided.

Detectives yesterday swooped down on a Bronx bungalow, after lying in wait for hours for their prey to gather and took into custody seven men, two of whom were soon released. Anthony Pantano was arrested at the same time in Brooklyn.

Pantano admitted having under pressure informed the plotters of the bank messengers' movements police said. Another prisoner was Michelo Mezzano, a boxer, who, although virtually cleared of complicity in the Brooklyn robbery, was retained on a charge of homicide, after he was alleged to have been indentified as the slayer of Jacob Banoff, druggist, during the holdup of his store on Nov. 13.

Pantano and three of those caught in the Bronx raid, Eduardo Capabianco, Angelo Farlina and Nicolo Luciana, were held in default of $50,000 bail as material witnesses.

Brothers Held.

Of the eight men now held, two face charges of first degree murder, the police said last night. They are Barlow Morris Diamond and his younger brother, Joseph Diamond, the first to be arrested and from whom information leading to the other arrests was obtained. The three men being sought will also face the first degree charge if caught, the police declare.

The police said they had a clear idea of the plot after Pananto had confessed and the Diamonds, formerly well known in Brooklyn as high school athletes, had made important admissions. The police version of the plot follows:

The conspirators began three months before the robbery to lay their plans, which were perfected two nigths before the killings in a little stucco bungalow in the Bronx, when Pantano, the Diamonds, Edwardo Capabianco, Angelo Farina, Nicolo Luciana, the two missing gunmen and the driver of the death car were alleged to have been present.

Pantano, in his confession, states that at this meeting he was forced at the point of a revolver to give the conspirators inside information concerning the movement of money between the West End Bank and the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Co., by both of which he previously had been employed.

Their plans for the robbery welllaid, the Diamond brothers, the police said, drove the car used in the case to a Brooklyn garage near the scene of the robbery. A short time later the two gunmen and the driver now missing, took the car from the garage and drove to the elevated station where the messengers were shot.

Gunmen Do Job.

The driver waited below, while the two gunmen ascended to the platform. A few minutes later the messengers were shot down, with their loot, and the car dashed away. Later it was found abandoned.

While the holdup was being committed, the police said, Joseh Diamond walked from the garage past the elevated station on the way to the factory of the Diamond Basewood Co., owned by his family. In the meantime, according to the police, Barlow Diamond was alleged to have used another machine to follow the movements of the death car.

Barlow was said by the police to have met the gunmen at a designated point and there to have received

LLOYD GEORGE TOURING AMONG HIS OWN WELSH

Appeals For Re-election to Constituents He Has Represented 34 Years — Quotes Trade Statistics.

PERSONAL ADDRESSES

LONDON, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press)—Former Premier Lloyd George spent Friday in Wales among his own people, appealing to the constituents whom he had represented in Parliament for 34 years to elect him again. He addressed the people in familiar tones, laying aside his customary rhetoric and gestures, and making his appeal personal, rather than political. He made several short addresses on his tour, which started from Llandudno. Speaking at Deganwy, he dilated upon the dangers of the Government being re-elected on a minority vote of the electorate, as happened a year ago.

"You might have millions of votes for free trade but a protectionist majority in Parliament," he said. "That raises the greatest constitutional issue with which this country has been faced since the day of the ship mone—that is, taxing the people against their consent."

Britain's Exports.

Giving statistics to counter the arguments of Premier Baldwin he said:

"In 1921 Britain sold £32,000,000 worth of goods to the United States. In 1922, after the Fordney tariff started, we sold £40,000,000. This was after the tariff was in complete operation, when the wall was so high you couldn't look over it, when every gap bristled with duties of the latest and most modern mixture."

"But these," he added, "are only statistics—and Mr. Baldwin doesn't like statistics."

Mr. Lloyd George also emphasized that during the war other countries came to free trade Great Britain for financial assistance.

"Great Britain was then the rich beggar—unarmed, unprotected by tariffs and at the mercy of all the slings and arrows of the world," he said. "Yet they wanted our help."

MATHES LAUNCHES RHENISH UNION

DUESSELDORF, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Joseph Matthes, who several days ago announced the abandonment of his efforts to regain control of the Coblenz Rhineland Republic Government, launched a new "Rhenish Union for Independence" at a meeting held Thursday at his new Duesseldorf headquarters. Forty-five delegates of the directory and of local groups of the Lower Rhine and the Ruhr were present and adopted seven resolutions inaugurating the movement, with Matthes as their chief.

The resolutions consider the Coblenz Cabinet dissolved and announce the determination to re-organize the separatist movement under Matthes. They express the expectation that the occupation authorities will protect the adherents of the new union "from Prussian brutality." Matthes was appointed at the meeting to conduct negotiations with the French and Belgian authorities.

MARX MINISTRY IS INCOMPLETE

Four Vacant Portfolios But Cabinet Begins Functioning—Crisis Not Past.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The new three-party coalition government, headed by Dr. Wilhelm Marx as Chancellor and with Dr. Gustav Stresemann as Foreign Minister, began to function Friday, although four portfolios still remained to be accepted.

The positions vet to be filled are the Ministries of Food, Justice, Transportation and Economics. It was announced during the day that the Cabinet would be finished late yesterday afternoon, but Dr. Marx seems to have encountered unexpected difficulties, and to-night the four positions still were vacant.

The Nationalist Party is angry at President Ebert's disregard of it in his search for a new chancellor, and the leaders refused to permit one of their members, Herr Schiele, to take the Food Ministry. Thereupon the Bavarian Volks Party's man, Dr. Emminger, withdrew his promise to accept the portfolio of Justice.

"The crisis if dead! Long live the crisis!" sardonically explains this evening's Lokal Anzeiger in an editorial. The editorial adds that the new cabinet, so far so it has been constituted, "is a case of driving out the Devil with Beelzebub."

There was a report in the Reichstag lobbies to-night to the effect that Dr. Marx intends to carry on the government with some sort of "authorization law" with the spectre of dissolution of parliament forever hovering in the background.

Sails For New York to Arrange Horse Race.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Pierre Wertheimer, owner of Epinard, France's champion three-year-old race horse, leaves for New York to-day on board the steamer Paris. On his arrival in the United States he will be ready to consider any responsible proposition to send Epinard to the United States next spring to meet the best United States horse in a match race over any distance up to one mile and a half.

M. Werheimer would prefer that the race be held in France, but the negotiations which have been in progress since November 3, to arrange an international cup race on the Longchamps course for May 3, next year, have been held up by the Vincennes Race Track Society, to which this date originally was allotted, refusing to yield.

Hole Stove In Vessel By Corner of Wharf.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Dec. 1.—The Canadian Government steamer Sapper while docking at the railway wharf this forenoon to load produce and cattle for Newfoundland had a hole punctured in her side below the water line forward of the bridge by striking the corner of the concrete wharf. The extent of the damage cannot be ascertained till low tide and possibly a diver may have to be sent for. In the meantime the pumps are kept going to keep her free from water.

FREIGHT EXCHANGE RATE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press.)— The rate of exchange on shipments of freight between Canada and the United States from December 1 to 14 inclusive will be two and one-eighth per cent., as announced by the Dominion Railway Commission to-day. The surcharge on freight traffic will be one per cent. During the same two weeks the rate on international passenger traffic will be based on two per cent. exchange.

GOOD NAME FOR CANADA BUTTER

The Dairy Conference Approves Uniformity in Grading of Cream — Draft Model Bill.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press.)— The Dominion Dairy Conference which is in session here approved resolutions yesterday calling for Dominion-wide uniformity in the grading of cream, as also for such uniform export regulations as will safeguard the good name of Canadian butter. The conference also approved the appointment of a permanent committee which will draft a model bill bringing into conformity provincial dairy legislation.

The permanent committee will comprise the federal Dairy Commissioner and the Dairy Commissioner or head of the dairy branch, respectively, of all the nine provinces. The secretary will be supplied from the Ottawa office.

On behalf of the province of Quebec it was stated that a law governing the grading of cream was already on the statute book and regulations making it effective would become operative next year. E. Bourbeau, cheese and butter inspector for that province, said that dairymen were fighting oleomargarine, but people would buy oleo in preference to some of the very poor butter which was being marketed. For the province of Ontario it was also asserted that the dairymen were very generally in favor of compulsory grading regulations. The market for No. 1 cream was being destroyed by the marketing of lower qualities.

The conference approved a resolution that federal grade certificates should not be issued for any butter which does not score first or better; or for any butter for export to the United Kingodm which was not pasteurized.

It was resolved that manufacturers should not be required to guarantee to make Number 1 cheese or butter.

Conciliation Board In Shipping Strike.

ST. JOHN, N.B' Dec. 1 — Wm. Ely, business agent of St. John local No 810 coal handlers and trimmers, was appointed this evening to represent the workmen on the conciliation board requested by the shipping interests to discuss wages and conditions, which are a matter of dispute between the men and their employers Bernard Rose of Montreal will act for the shipping interests. These two will meet probably to-morrow in an endeavor to select a chairman.

Screen Actress Burned to Death

SAN ANTONIA, Texas, Dec. 1.—Martha Mansfield, screen actress, died here yesterday as the result of burns received while on location work during the filming of "The Warrens of Virginia" in which she was being starred.

A lighted match ignited her clothing while she was resting in an automobile waiting to be called for the next scene.

The flames were extinguished by members of the company, but not until the screen beauty was severely burned about the chest and arms. She was taken to a hospital where a corps of physicians vainly worked in an effort to save her life.

YOUNG BALDWIN LABOR COMRADE TELLS PURPOSE

Attacks Father's Government For Failure to Fulfill Promises — Also Opposes Liberals.

ON LABOR PLATFORM.

LONDON, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press)—Oliver Baldwin and A. G. MacDonald, respectively sons of Premier Baldwin and James Ramsay MacDonald, the Labor leader in Parliament, appeared on the same platform at an election meeting held in London last night to support the Labor candidate for the Islington district.

The chairman of the meeting addressed Mr. Baldwin as "comrade" and Mr. MacDonald as "the son of the future Prime Minister." Mr. Baldwin in his address repeated his previous attack on the government his father heads, particularly with regard to what he termed its inaction. He asserted that he was not opposing his father, but was opposing principles which would lead nowhere. The Government had fulfilled none of the promises made during the war, and he had looked in vain in the manifesto of the Tory and Liberal parties without finding in them any intention of dealing with the filthy conditions under which the poor were living in London. That was why he was supporting the Labor Party.

Tariff Not a Remedy.

David Lloyd George delivered several addresses in Wales Friday. In the evening at Bangor, attacking the protection policy of Premier Baldwin, Mr. Lloyd George maintained that tariffs never had cured unemployment. Comparing the United States and Great Britain he said that, taking the situation over a period of years, unemployment in New York was thrice what it was in London. In the case of Massachussetts from 1908 onward, there was only one year in which unemployment in Great Britain was worse than it was in Massachusetts. In every other year it was worse there.

Ragged By Students.

This meeting provided a humorous incident. Crowds of Welsh university students "ragged" Mr. Lloyd George, welcoming him with college yells and Welsh songs. Beaming on his tormentors, the former Premier remarked:

"I heard many varieties of that in the United States. I did not understand all the language, but I knew it was friendly. This I do understand."

QUEBEC PREMIER IN WITNESS BOX

The Provincial Treasurer Plaintiff in Libel Action in Sherbrooke Court.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Dec. 1.—Premier Taschereau and Minister of Agriculture Caron were the outstanding witnesses yesterday in the Nicol-Noel libel action that has been in the courts here since the beginning of the week.

Premier Taschereau produced all letters he had had on the subject of the $100,000 requested by Dr. Noel as a provincial grant in aid of the post graduat, medical research institute to be founded by the doctor. In connection with Hon. Jacob Nicol, Provincial Treasurer, the Premier stated that Dr. Noel had told him that Mr. Nicol was destroying the Liberal party at Sherbrooke that he was a cause of weakness for the Government, and that he thought he should get out of the Cabinet and re-enter private life. Premier Taschereau spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Nicol, who, he said, had completely satisfied him in respect of his work in Sherbrooke.

Hon. J. E. Caron, Minister of Agriculture followed his chief in the witness box. He too spoke of the $100,000 plan for graduate medical research and stated that while he thought the plan appeared good it also appeared to him impossible. He denied having promised to defend the plan before the Provincial Cabinet.

J. H. Lemay, District Magistrate and former M.L.A. for Sherbrooke took the stand and stated he had heard rumors at various times in connection with Mr Nicol and traffic in liquor business.

The case was adjourned at noon until next Tuesday.

ANOTHER DEBATE OVER QUESTION OF REPAIRS FOR THE POLICE MOTOR

Dispute Over the Money Actually Spent Results in a Dead Heat With the Usual Result.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

If Alderman Maher had not arrived at the Board Room in the city buildings just as the Finance Committee of the City Council was rising after a particularly tranquil session, or if the Committee had not waited to discuss a proposal for the expert investigation of civic offices, it might not have happened. But he did, and a bomb was hurled by Ald. Crowe that disrupted the harmony of the gathering, and sent the members off in groups of two and three discussing the perfidy of the police department in connection with the reports on the expenses attached to the police car.

Ald. Crowe, addressing Ald. Maher —"I think you should show up about this suit. The figures you gave us about the police car don't agree with the figures the Chief gives. Who is right? Did you get your authority from the treasurer's office?"

Ald. Maher—"I got my figures from Ald. Phelan."

Chairman Phelan—"I went into the treasurer's office and asked the exact expenses on the car this year. The treasurer was not there, personally, but the girls got out the sheets and we figured the expenses at $824.

Ald. Crowe—"If that is so I suggest we go into the matter thoroughly and show the public the truth."

Ald. Maher—"I prepared figures previous to Ald. Phelan's, and his just about agred with mine. I knew they were correct."

Mayor Taylor—"Were you including last year's accounts that were paid this year?"

Ald. Maher—"No; I deducted them."

Ald. Phelan—"Included in the $824 there was a new tire, but I think that should be included under repairs."

Ald. McIntyre—"The car may have been repaired twice, and the Chief may have referred to only [illegible] count when he said it [illegible] $600."

Family on Same Farm Since 772

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The Government announcement that it would decorate with the Order of Agricultural Merit the heads of families which have farmed the same land for three centuries has brought to the fore no less than 750 such families.

The record is held by the La Fargues, who have lived on their present estate since 772.

EXPLORER SCRUBS FLOORS IN CELLS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press). — Word has reached the Department of Justice that Dr. Frederick A. Cook, explorer, sentenced at Fort Worth, Texas, for oil frauds, has taken to floor scrubbing.

Twenty of the prisoners, according to the report, were confined in a large room in the upper storey of Fort Worth Jail. The Warden threatened to remove the stove unless the prisoners kept the space about it clean, and next day he went to the room and found Dr. Cook at work with the rest with brush and soap.

Dr. Cook's wealth at the time of his conviction was more than $1,000,000, according to Justice officials.

STATES WILL NOT JOIN IN HEARING

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The United States Government still is unwilling to participate in the restricted enquiry into German finances, and has so informed James A. Logan, United States observer with the Reparations Commission in Paris.

The communication outlining the United States Government's position was sent to Colonel Logan after he had informed the State Department that the Reparations Commission favored the United States membership on two committees created by it to investigate and report on the state of German finances as related to the ability of that Government to pay reparations.

The French Premier is described as all the more ready now to bring the United States, either officially or unofficially, into the two inquiries authorized, along with the invitation sent Secretary Hughes by Colonel Logan, was an inquiry if there would be any objection by Washington to the Reparation Commission inviting eminent United States financiers to participate in the investigation in case the United States Govrnment did not desire to designate members of committees.

The fundamental reason for the anxiety to have Unted States assistance, it is pointed out, is that any plan to restore the finances of the German Republic must include the advance of a large sum, certainly $500,000,000 at the minimum.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The cancellation of European war debts was characterized as "unthinkable" by Elbert H. Gary, directing head of the United States Steel Corporation, in setting forth his views on the virtues and vices of charity at the Town Hall last night.

There is a strenuous agitation going on at present, he asserted, in favor of cancelling or reducing the debts of some foreign countries to the United States. From the viewpoint of the United States proposition, it would appear to be irrational and preposterous, he said.

He compared German "scrap of paper" attitude toward treaties with proposals of some nations to ignore these financial obligations.

"THE QUIET FAMILY" WAS AGAIN REPEATED

"The Quiet Family," the comedy which was repeated by special request in the parish hall of All Saints church last evening, by the A.Y.P.A. of the church, had a fair sized audience, and was carried out in an enjoyable fashion, supplemented by an interesting musical programme.

Members of the cast included Mrs. H. Sisson, the Misses J. Maconomy, P. Twigg, G. Smith, and Messrs. E. Lawis, H. Sisson, W. King, J. Price.

The musical programme included vocal solos by the Misses Tucker and Ritchie, Messrs. George Chandler and E. Lewis, violin selections by Master W. Gatfield, readings by Mr. J. John, and piano numbers by Miss Wood and Mr. K. Brown. Miss Amy Lawerence acted as accompanist.

ONE LITTLE WORD CAUSED THE RAID

(By Camillo Cianfara, United Press Staff Correspondent).

ROME, Dec. 1.—Because an evening paper erroneously translated the remarks in an American paper by Francisco Nitti, former Premier of Italy, and a pronounced Liberal, 300 Fascisti raided his home, threw an ink well at him, fired several shots and molested the statesman's family without, however, injuring anyone. The incident took place Wednesday night. Considerable damage is reported to have been done in the Nitti.

The attack was the subject of Parliament interpellations Friday.

Signor Nitti issued a statement today and declared the outrage inconceivable and unjustified. He pointed out that the Stefani Agency since carried a disclaimer of the article that occasioned the raid. Nitti was writing of unsavory conditions in Europe, and it was printed here with the word "Europe" changed to "Italy."

I.O.D.E. Bazaar at Hastings

HASTINGS, Dec. 1.—The Hastings Chapter I.O.D.E., of which Mrs. P. M. Howard is Regent, held an attractive bazaar on Friday afternoon and evening at the Town Hall. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion with streamers, festoons, flowers and bunting. Booths were numerous about the hall, and each had a color scheme of its own. On entering the hall each individual paid ten cents admission fee to Mr. A. W. Bailey, who acted as cashier.

The miscellaneous booth, decorated in red and white, with floral rosettes, was in charge of Mr. A. W. Bailey, Mrs. Wilkins and Miss Gertrude Coughlan.

Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Spellman had charge of the fancy work booth, which was decorated in blue, yellow and white, and contained all kinds of useful articles, such as embroidery, crocheting, knitting and sewing.

The candy booth was made very attractive with pink and white fringe and streamers, and was well looked after by Mrs. Walter Foulds, Mrs. G. Whitred, Misses Carrie Doxsee and Belle Thompson.

The refreshment and home-made cooking booth looked very refreshing with its pale green and white streamers and was in charge of Mrs. A. V. German, Mrs. Wm. Hill, Mrs. A. B. Smith and Mrs. W. A. Baker. Luncheon was served in cafeteria style, the small tables daintily laid with white tea cloths and a pretty floral tribute in the centre.

Miss Della Plant was a very capable fortune teller as she sat in her caravan of black and red, dressed in the garb of an English gypsy. Her name became famous there by the wonderful stories she told to all seeking knowledge of the future.

The "Dorontal Chapter's" booth was very pretty, the color scheme being black and orange. Flowers, plants and wicker work made at the Blind Institute were for sale here. Miss E. Fowlds, Mrs. W. H. Burkholder and other girls of the Chapter took charge at different periods.

The main feature of the evening was a wheel of fortune, conducted by Mr. Dwyer, of Peterboro. Live geese and hens, fancy articles, potatoes, a comforter, screen door and window sashes, and a three-storey fruit cake were among the prizes which were won by those holding the lucky numbers.

At this period Mrs. Howard presented a handsome copy of Tennyson's Poems to Master Freddie Richardson, who obtained the highest marks in history at the entrance examinations here. This prize is given annually to both schools.

An auction sale was then proposed and proved a decided success. Mr. Dwyer acted as auctioneer to the satisfaction of all.

At 10.30 strains of music drifted out for those who wished to trip to the light fantastic, and lasted until an early hour in the morning. Mr. W. E. Tate helping out with the musical part in his usual willing way.

This is the first affair of this kind held by the organization, and has proved a most wonderful success. The proceeds amounted to over $400, and will go to help swell the Chapter's funds for the war memorial in honor of the boys who fought and fell in the World War.

The monument is to be erected in the spring on the water front, in the park lately presented to the town by the Fowlds Estate.

BOOKS SEIZED AT HOME BANK

Police Took Books Recording Loans to Firms in Which Directors Were Interested—Further Information.

TORONTO, December 1 (Canadian Press). — Criminal investigation men of the Provincial Police made a seizure yesterday afternoon at the head office of the Home Bank of books and papers required by the Crown in the prosecution of the directors and officials of the defunct institution.

The officers acted upon the authority of a search warrant issued by the Attorney-General's Department, under instructions from D. L. McCarthy, K.C., special prosecutor in the Home Bank case.

The books in question were records of loans made by the bank to business concerns in which the directors were interested, and also regarding the returns made to the Finance Department at Ottawa, and the minute books of the directors' meetings.

Criticises White.

W. A. McHaffie, of Stratford, formerly assistant to the president of the Home Bank, had some further information regarding the wrecking of that institution. Again he was critical of the attitude assumed by Sir Thomas White when Minister of Finance, to complaints made regarding the soundness of the bank.

Mr. McHaffie once more referred to his previous statement that in 1918 he had written Sir Thomas, then Minister, that a quarter of a million dollars had been added to the Frost account.

He says this was never denied, but reveals the wording of the explanation the directorate sent the Minister. It reads: "No unpaid interest upon Frost account or other inactive accounts was credited to the profits since 31st of May, 1917."

Mr. McHaffie also observes that, in his opinion, the depositors have very good claim against the Federal Government.

TORONTO, December 1 (Canadian Press). — Marking positively the beginning of a new epoch in the inter-urban transportation out of Toronto, the first gasoline-driven railway coach to be used in this city left the Union Station last night for Hamilton.

Operated by the Canadian National Railways on the Toronto-Hamilton run, the day coach carries approximately 50 passengers and a crew of two men.

While the service is partially of an experimental nature, Canadian National officials are confident that it will meet the demand for convenient access to points between Hamilton and Toronto.

Lending a touch of festivity to the inauguration of last night was the presence in the ew car of a wedding party.

50,000 LIVE CATTLE TO BRITISH PORTS

Estimate For Year Falls Short of Predictions of Canadian Exporters.

MONTREAL, Nov. 30.—It was estimated today by leading Montreal cattle exporters that by the close of the present season since the lifting of the British embargo on Canadian live cattle, a total of approximately 50,000 head would have been shipped to British ports from Canada, chiefly from Montreal.

This is slightly less than the 55,000 head predicted by Canadian exporters when the embargo was lifted March 15th last, and very much less than the two or three hundred thousand head expected by British interests at that time. The actual number shipped from Canadian ports to the end of November was 38,197 head. There would be shipped from here until close of navigation and later from St. John and Portland about three thousand head more which with shipments up to March 15 next will bring the total to about fifty thousand head.

Traced His Stolen Car to Junk Yard

LINDSAY, Dec. 1.— Last September, when "Tubby" Perrin and his gang were busy in this section, the garage of Mr. George Steele at Manilla was entered and his new McLaughlin touring car stolen. Mr. Steele was ready to start on a holiday trip the next morning, but the thieves spoiled his plans.

He spent considerable money in advertising his loss and in following up supposed clues, and had given up hope of ever getting his car. As a result of the admissions made by "Whitey" Anderson in Toronto it was learned that he assisted in the theft of the auto. When Mr. Steele went to Toronto he found that the car had been stripped and the parts sold to Jews. The fenders and running boards were also ripped off. The missing parts have been recovered.

HEART WAS SO BAD HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Mrs. O. E. Fitzgerald, 106 Ross St., St. Thomas, Ont., writes:—"In the Fall of 1921, I was taken ill with my heart, but I did not pay much attention to it. I kept on with my household duties, but seemed to become worse and worse, and finally had to call in a doctor. He said I was all run down and was a nervous wreck. I had a severe pain in my chest which would move over to my heart and it became so bad I could not lie down, as when I did I had such a smothering feeling I would have to sit up in bed till it passed away.

I tried several remedies, but with no good results. Finally, I was induced to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took 7 boxes, and I am now as well as I was 30 years ago, and I am now 65 years old."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all druggists or dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HOME MADE COUGH MIXTURE CONSIDERED BEST

Spreads Over Membrane, Soothes, Heals and Stops Cough Almost Instantly.

COSTS BUT A TRIFLE

Make your own cough syrup in two minutes at home if you want the best.

Simple coughs, or stubborn coughs, it doesn't matter which, this home-made mixture will stop them quicker than any expensive cough syrup you can buy ready made.

It's fine for chest colds too and for acute nasal catarrh.

Get from any druggist one ounce of Parmint (double strength)—to this add a little granulated sugar and enough water to make one-half pint—that's all there is to it, and children like it.

Like a soothing, healing poultice one costly substance in this home-made cough mixture spreads itself completely over the membrane of the throat. This causes the most stubborn hang on cough to cease almost instantly. No ordinary slow-acting cough syrup contains this expensive ingredient.

And remember—any remedy that overcomes catarrh, partially or wholly is bound to be of benefit to those who are troubled with head noises and catarrhal deafness.

Get Parmint and get better.

IS THERE WORK FOR THEM?

Is Ontario's Minister of Agriculture on safe ground in his announced policy of endeavouring to secure for Ontario 10,000 farm labourers and domestics?

Labour leaders in Toronto doubt very much that anything like the number spoken of could be provided with employment in the Province under the present conditions, and they say very reasonably that Hon. Mr. Martin should take a complete survey of the situation before going ahead with his plans.

The trouble seems to be that at certain periods of the year there is a big demand for farm labourers, but in between the rush periods the wages offered are so low that men cannot be persuaded to remain on the farms.

That is the situation just now, the wages for winter work being usually so small that it is difficult to induce men to accept farm jobs during the cold weather.

Such being the case there is reason to fear that the majority of the farm labourers that would be secured under the Hon. Mr. Martin's plan would eventually land in the larger centres, instead of remaining on the farms for which they were originally intended.

The Minister of Agriculture should be thoroughly convinced that there is permanent work in the country for farm labourers before undertaking their importation on a large scale.

ASKING TOO MUCH.

Most Canadians are not, the Examiner is sure, proud of the part many of their fellow-countrymen are playing in flooding the United States with liquor and are sympathetic with the efforts being made by our neighbors in conference with Canadian authorities to put an end to the traffic.

In any reasonable way the majority of our people are willing to co-operate with the United States in suppressing the rum running over the border.

But some of the suggestions made by Uncle Sam's representatives go further than even those Canadians who look with disfavour on the present traffic are prepared to go.

The proposal that Canadians accused of violating United States liquor laws be made subject to extradiction is one that cannot be accepted on this side of the line.

The trade these men are engaged in may not be one that deserves much consideration, but the rights of Canadians cannot be given away simply because they are involved in a traffic which interferes with a social experiment in another country.

To ask Canada to turn over such men as are believed to have been assisting in abusing the Volstead Act is demanding too much of this country, and the suggestion should be rejected without loss of time.

THE LOGICAL PLACE.

Reference is made in another article to the general recommendation offered by A. P. Sanders of the Ontario Safety League as likely to render conditions along Peterborough's waterfront much safer than at present.

In spite of all such precautions, however, accidents cannot be completely eliminated, and therefore Mr. Saunders' other recommendation that adequate dragging equipment for the quick recovery of persons from the water should be provided is one that should be acted upon.

In fact, such equipment should have been available here years ago.

Much valuable time has been lost in cases of drowning, and more than one life has been sacrificed because there were no facilities available for recovering the body quickly or no one at hand with knowledge of resuscitation methods.

The Safety League expert recommends that the Fire Department take charge of the work, and that seems a reasonable and logical suggestion.

The equipment could be stored at the fire station where means of rapid transportation are always available and where there is always a staff of men on duty.

The firemen could quickly be drilled in the fine points of resuscitation work, and in case of an accident an efficient staff with all the necessary equipment could be on the scene within a few minutes—a wonderful improvement over the present haphazard system, which leaves everybody doubtful as to the first steps to be taken.

HARD ON THE WHISPERERS.

Two items in yesterday's news should be stressed, says the Ottawa Journal. The first was that the Canadian National Railways had a net operating revenue of $5,163,470 for the month of October. The second was that for the twelve months ending October 31, Canadian trade increased over the same period last year by $300,000,000.

The Canadian National Railway showing is impressive. Briefly stated, it is as follows:

1.—The net operating profit of the road is nearly two millons greater than during the month of October, 1922.

2.—The net earnings of the road for 10 months of 1923 total $12,021,285, as compared with a net of $3,825,007 for the same period of 1922.

3.—The net earnings of the month of October show a gain of $3,317,000 over the preceding month of September.

These figures mean two things: (1) that public ownership is being triumphantly vindicated; and (2) that we can now look forward to the time when the Canadian National Railways will not only have large operating surpluses, but will be taking care of their fixed charges as well.

Add to this that trade and revenue are good; that bank deposits are notably strong; and that Canada is practically free of unemployment—add up all these things, and you have the true measure of the motives and the calibre of the miserable defeatists who are whispering of death.

MAKING THE RIVER SAFE.

Austin P. Saunders, Provincial Organizer for the Ontario Safety League, after a personal investigation of the conditions along the waterfront in Peterborough, has made a number of recommendations to the City Council, the carrying out of which, he believes, will assist materially in the elimination of the drowning hazards along the Otonabee.

His report should receive the earnest consideration of next year's Council.

The equipment called for can be supplied, Mr. Saunders estimates, for $600.

It is not a very large sum, and if by its expenditure but one life is saved the outlay will have been more than justified.

Life-saving equipment is recommended not only for the two bathing beaches, but at a number of other points along the river where there is a likelihood of accidents.

In connection with the bathing beaches Mr. Saunders' report bears out exactly what the Examiner has frequently said about these places.

He urges that the bathing areas be surrounded by floating life-lines thus making them practically safe, and he emphasizes the necessity of the lifeguards or supervisors being expert swimmers and thoroughly proficient in the Schaefer method of artificial respiration.

In the past there has been little effort on the part of the Council to see that their caretakers were proficient swimmers or knew anything about rescue or resuscitation methods.

The main idea has seemed to be to get the work done as cheaply as possible, and as a result the protection accorded bathers has been more nominal than real.

Next year's Council should pay consideraple attention to the report of the Safety League expert, which is apparently a complete survey of the situation and offers for consideration a policy that will make conditions along the waterfront much safer than they are at present.

Particularly important is the recommendation that the bathing beaches should be made safe, and then that bathers be encouraged to swim only in these protected areas, a campaign in which the Ontario Safety League has offered its co-operation by circularizing the public schools with letters to be read to the children.

IMMIGRATION AND ASSIMILATION.

or one calling is an unbalanced plan of peopling a country. This Dominion needs not only farmers, but artisans and factory workers who will labor to increase the country's production.

This sentiment expressed last night by Mr. Beatty, president of the C. P. R., before the St. James Literary Society should strengthen the hands of Mr. Robb in bringing to successful accomplishment the plan for the removal of the restrictions in immigration which he recently announced. In the past, the Government's campaign to attract immigrants to this country has not only been luke warm, niggardly and half-hearted, but it has been confined almost entirely to efforts to secure farm hands and harvesters for the prairie provinces The campaign has lagged not only through the spinelessness of succeeding Governments but also because there is no nation in Europe that can afford to send its trained agriculturalists abroad at this time No country, least of all Great Britain, will look with especial favor on the activities of this or other Dominions in enticing the men of the land, with the traditions of the soil and the skill of their calling, to leave the Homeland

While the campaign to secure more settlers for Canada is solely confined to the casting of our bait in these restricted waters the catch will never be large. Yet there are in Europe thousands of able bodied men who have served a long apprenticeship and can boast of a high earning dexterity who are unable to obtain work owing to the politico-economic conditions of industry in their coountry With opportunity and encouragement these men would quickly add to the sum total of our productive capacity and aid to advancing Canada to that greatness which the fates are willing and anxious to weave for us if we do not deliberately tangle up the skeins of our manifold opportunities.

Yet, as Mr. Beatty pointed out last night, the success of any scheme of immigration cannot be gauged solely by the counting of heads. The contribution which the new settlers make to the welfare of our Dominion is not to be measured only by the figures showing the number landed at the port of debarkation. Mr. Robb has been named Minister of Immigration and Colonization and the success of the administration of his department will not be judged by the number or even by the physique of the new-comers. His responsibility is two-fold. The work as Minister of Immigration ends when he lands the immigrant at a Canadian port, provided the new citizen is sound in health and capable of earning a livelihood. But at the same port Mr. Robb must begin the second half of his task, assume the more difficult portion of his responsibility. Colonization begins where immigration ends.

The newcomers will find many things strange and not a few customs incomprehensible. Old prejudices will make many revolt at first against the new life. Cherished traditions which the new arrivals have brought from their own fatherland may be roughly trodden down by a careless jest or a thoughtless word. The task of colonization is not like that of immigration—a matter of a few days in train and boat. It is a slow process of years and every step along its road bristles with thorns and brambles of misunderstanding and prejudice.

Every new-comer who settles permanently and contentedly in the Dominion is a double asset to the country He is himself one more recruit to the army of producers which Canada must have in largely increased numbers if she is to fulfil her destiny and his contentment and satisfaction are the best advertisement for the country, the most powerful magnet for the attraction of friends and relatives. These men not only from Britain, but from Italy and Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary and Norway, Denmark, Esthonia and the Balkans. Christian and Jew, Latin and Greek, will each bring ot his new home some contribution to the spiritual and aesthetic life of the Dominion. In return we must offer him or her material aid which will smooth over the rough stones of his earlypath. We must be colonizers as well as settlers.—Montreal Star.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, December 1. — Receipts af cattle at the Union Stock Yards this week were comparatively light, being only a little over 7,200 head, and notwithstanding the small proportion of really good butchers, everything was practically sold on Thursday. Some higher prices were made this week, and a few head of choice steers, about 1,000 pounds each, brought $7.25 a cwt. Taking quality into account, however, it is questionable whether any actual advance in price was made.

Heavy steers were generally held back as the exporters had announced they would not be buyers this week. For the few fat steers that came in the packers made a market for the best at 7.00 a cwt. The exporters picked up a few heavy cattle at lower prices, and also a number of bulls, and will carry them for shipment with other purchases next week.

Butchers' cows had a fairly good market, with an occasional choice one selling at 5 to 5 1-2 cents. The average run of the best cows were, however, only good for 4 1-2 cents. medium cows brought 3 1-2 to 3 3-4 cents, and common cows 2 3-4 to 3 1-4 cents per pound. Canners and cutters were plentiful, but buyers took them at steady prices. The former usually sold below 2 cents a pound, and the cutters up to 2 1-2 cents. Bulls were not too plentiful, and good heavy bulls sold from 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 cents. Fair bulls were a cent a pound lower, and bologna bulls went at and below 3 cents.

Next week is expected to produce a much heavier run, with some Christmas quality butchers. The feeling is that these will be taken at satisfactory prices. There will also be a demand for some good baby beeves. The export firm will be in the market again for a goodly number of fat steers, but say the Old Country market is not favourable to stronger prices. Any quantity of common butchers is not wanted, and there will therefore be no betterment in prices in this department.

Lambs slipped away in price on Wednesday and Thursday, and the only really good saleable lambs was the 80 to 85 pound kind. Prices touched 11 cents for choice ewes and wethers early in the week, but on Thursday it is doubtful whether the same lambs would have brought 10 1-2 cents. Heavy lambs are selling at a big discount, and 8 1-2 cents was quoted for them on Thursday. Choice handyweight sheep have a good market at 6 1-2 to 7 cents.

This week's heavy run of hogs left the price vulnerable, and packers dropped them 25 cents a cwt. to $7.50 f.o.b. It is still claimed that prices are too high, according to the English bacon market, and a further cut of 25 cents will be put into effect next week, if shipments permit of it. Commission men are fighting the decline, but team play among the packers places them at a disadvantage.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—Business in western turkeys in car lots continues and probably for the first time large handlers in the east are now in the prairie provinces looking over the ground and making purchases. CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.— Month-end adjustment of accounts, especially on the part of traders unwilling to settle by taking actual deliveries of wheat tended to make price changes irregular in the wheat market to-day, and to restricted new business. The close was unsettled, at 3-8 and 1-2c. net lower to 1-8c. gain, with December $1.01 7-8 to $1.02 and May $1.08 1-8 to $1.08 1-4. Corn finished at 1-4c. off to 3-8c. up; oats a shade to 1-4c. down, and provisions varying from 10c. decline to 20c. advance.

A leading authority here figured that the domestic reserve next July 1 would be 44,000,000 bushels and this aggregate also was regarded as bullish, inasmuch as it contrasted with 101,000,000 bushels last July 1. Besides, domestic primary receipts to-day were light.

Under such circumstances wheat bears failed to make much headway with talk about prospective large supplies in Argentine, Australia and India, or the predictions of further generous imports of Canadian wheat into the United Sttaes. Word that the largest amount yet, 3,320,000 bushels, had cleared from Russian ports this week, was more or less offset by announcement that drought in Russia had led to a decided reduction of wheat acreage there.

Wet weather gave comparative firmness to the corn market. Moreover, receipts here were of less volume than expected, and rural offerings were small. Oats trading was almost altogther local.

Provisions averaged higher, in line with hog values.

POLICIES OF UNITED STATES ARE OUTLINED BY SECRETARY HUGHES

Preponderant Thought of the People Opposed to Alliances With Europe — Enumerates Nine "Affirmative Policies" in Relations With Republics of American Hemisphere.

CONSISTENT POSITION

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The foreign policy of the United States today, whether in relation to conditions in Europe, Latin-America or the Pacific, squares consistently with the Munroe Doctrine, Secretary Hughes said in an address here last night before the American Academy of Political and Social Science, gathered in celebration of the centenary of the Monroe Doctrine.

With the declaration as his text, the Secretary delivered a comprehensive statement of the position of the United States toward the European tangle, the Far East and Latin-America. He said the United States would rather bear such ills as might result from its present policy toward Europe than "suffer the greater evil which would follow the sacrifice of our independent position," rested the position of this Government to the principles of peace in the Pacific laid down by the Arms Conference, and set forth nine positions which, he said, should govern relations with asserted, added entirely with the Monroe Doctrine, which "remains an essential policy to be applied whenever any exigency may arise requiring application."

Taking the relationship between the policy of the United States toward Europe and the Monroe Doctrine, he said:

"We entered the Great War, not violating our tradition, for the cause of liberty itself was at stake. We have emerged from the war with the same general aims that we had before we went in. Though victors, we have sought neither territory nor general reparations. Our people have borne their own burdens and in large part we are bearing the burdens of others.

Sympathy for France.

"We are not seeking to dictate to Europe or to deprive anyone of rights. But we do desire peace and economic recuperation in Europe. We have the deepest sympathy with the people of France; we warmly cherish their ancient friendship. We desire to see France prosperous and secure, with her wounds healed and her just demands satisfied. We desire to see a united and prosperous Germany, with a will to peace, making amends to the full extent of her power and obtaining the appropriate rewards of her labor and skill. We wish to see an end to the waste of military efforts and the easing of the burdens of unproductive expenditures. We wish to see the fires of hatred quenched.

"It is because of these earnest desires that we have hoped, as was stated in the recent communication to the British Government, that the solution of the present grave problems would be sought in fair and comprehensive inquiry in which all interested might participate and which would be inspired by the determination to find means to restore productive activities through which alone reparations can be paid, and to give opportunity for the reasonable contentment and amicable relations of industrious peoples through which alone peace and security can be assured.

"The bitter controversy which followed the war showed with what the sister republics of the Western Hemisphere.

All of these policies, Mr. Hughes tenacity we still hold to the principle of not meddling in the political strife of Europe. It is true that the spread of democratic ideas and the resulting change in Governments have removed the danger of organized effort to extend to this continent the European political system of a hundred years ago. But Europe still has 'a set of primary interests,' which are not ours. Unity in war did not avail to change the divergent national aims and policies in peace.

Independent Position.

"It is not that our interests may not be affected injuriously by such controversies. But it was, despite such injuries, the abiding conviction that we had better bear these ills than suffer the greater evils which would follow the sacrifice of our independent position. We still hold to that view.

"The preponderant thought among us undoubtedly is that our influence would not be increased by pooling it.

"Generally, our policies toward Europe may thus be summarized: We are still opposed to alliances. We refuse to commit ourselves in advance with respect to the employment of the power of the United States in unknown contingencies. We reserve our judgment to act upon occasion as our sense of duty permits. We are opposed to discriminations against our nationals. We ask fair and equal opportunities in mandated territories as they were acquired by the Allies through our aid. We desire to co-operate according to our historic policy in the peaceful settlement of international disputes which embraces the policy of such judicial questions as are justiciable.

"In short, our co-operation as an independent state in the furtherance of the aims of peace and justice has always been and still is a distinctive feature of our policy."

Far Eastern Policy.

So far as the Pacific and Far East were concerned, Mr. Hughes said, the United States had developed "the policies of (1) the open door; (2) the maintenance of the integrity of China; (3) co-operation with other powers in the declaration of common principles; (4) co-operation with other powers by conference and consultation in the interests of peace; (5) limitation of naval armament, and (6) the limitation of fortifications and naval bases."

He declared all these were entirely consistent with the policy of Monroe.

American Relations.

The nine "affirmative policies" of the United States enumerated by the Secretary as a "fitting complement" to the Monro Doctrine were:

"First—We recognize the equality of the American Republics and their equal rights under the law of nations.

"Second—We have no policy of aggression; we do not support aggression by others; we are opposed to aggression by any one of the Latin-American Republics upon any other.

"Third—States have duties as well as rights. Among these obligations is the duty of each State to respect the rights of citizens of other States which have been acquitted within its jurisdiction in accordance with its laws. A confiscatory policy strikes at the foundations of international intercourse.

Promote Stability.

"Fourth—It is the policy of this Government to make available its friendly assistance to promote stability in those of our sister Republics which are especially afflicted with disturbed conditions involving their own peace and that of their neighbors. We are not aiming at control, but endeavoring to establish self-control. We are not seeking to add to our territory or to impose our rule upon other peoples.

"Fifth—With respect to the Latin-American Republics, it is our policy not only to seek to adjust any differences that may arise in our own intercourse, but to extend our good offices to the end that any controversy they may have with each other may be amicably composed.

Limit Armaments.

"Sixth—This Government has sought to encourage the making of agreements for the limitation of armaments.

"Seventh—The policies which have been described are not to secure peace as an end in itself but to open the way to a mutually helpful co-operation.

"Eighth—The United States is seeking unconditional most favored nation treatment in customs matters."

Safeguard Cause.

Ninth—This section Mr. Hughes devoted to "special policies of highest importance to the United States," as follows:

"We intend in all circumstances to safeguard the Panama Canal. We could not afford to take any different position with respect to any other waterway that may be built between the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans. Disturbances in the Caribbean region are therefore of special interest to us, not for the purpose of seeking control over others, but of being assured that our own safety is free from menace.

"With respect to Cuba, we have the special interests arising from our treaty and our part in the securing of her independence. It is our desire to see her independence not weakened, but safeguarded and her safety and prosperity assured. Our friendly advice and aid are always available to that end."

TRENT RESORT IS PROSPERING

New Holiday Place Near Hastings Appealed to American Tourists.

HASTINGS, Dec. 1.— Messrs. Monniette and Robertson of Buffalo are busy making preparations for next summer's tourist trade.

Their resort is situated two miles from Hastings on the Trent River and can be reached easily by automobile.

The resort was well patronized all summer by American guests who have made arrangements to return next summer.

New Public School.

The trustees of the Hastings Public School are contemplating building a new school.

They are going to make a tour of some of the surrounding towns and make an inspection of their schools.

The school which is now situated on Albert street has been in use for nearly seventy years and lacks modern accomodation.

Hastings is badly in need of a high school as there are about 20 pupils atttending school in Campbellford leaving here every morning at 9.03 and returning on the evening train. About 10 are driving to Norwood daily.

Painting Tannery.

The Hastings Tanning Company have had the painters busy painting the outside tannery with a black weather proof paint.

Coal at $13.50.

Mr. T. Masterson of Toronto has been in town for the last couple of weeks taking orders for coal at $13.50 a ton.

Mrs .L. Lukes of Trent Valley Lodge spent Friday in town on business.

Robt. Whelan of Norwood was a visitor in town on Friday.

Lift Restrictions In Belgian Zone Cities.

COBLENZ, December 1 (Canadian Press). — The Inter-Allied High Commission has rescinded all restrictions on the free movement of people in various cities in the Belgian zone.

It also has abolished some of the red tape requirements in connection with coal shipments and the steps have been taken as part of the programme for restoring normal conditions in the Rhineland and the Ruhr now that passive resistance is considered to have ended.

CATTLE AND WOOD CHEAP AT APSLEY

Farmers Discouraged By Low Prices of Produce—Mission Has Ended.

APSLEY, Dec. 1.—There seems to be quite a slump in prices for cattle, according to reports received from settlers, who say they are not worth raising at the present market price. One or two instances vouched for as authentic by the narators may be quoted. Five good cows were sold for $100, and at that the seller had to throw in a yearling to close the bargain. Another claims that three cows were sold for $27, while calves fetch $2 and $3 each. The same poor prices prevail with regard to wood; good dry hardwood loaded on the cars only fetching $7 per cord. One settler, who thinks there is a nigger in the wood-pile somewhere, wrote to an Ottawa company for prices on pulpwood, believing he could get a better price by dealing direct instead of through a middleman, and was offered $7.50 per cord loaded on cars. He says he can get the same price at Coe Hill without having to load it.

As these two industries, stock-raising and cutting timber, are the mainstays of the settler, whose land is mostly unproductive or poorly so, his lot is not a happy one at present prevailing prices.

Nest Like a Balloon.

Marsh hay was of fair quality and quantity this fall, but Al. Davis of Lasswade has the cream of it in this district. He has been exhibiting a sample known as Red Top Grass, which is eight feet high, which must be a record for this variety. Al. has also a hornet's nest, perfect in shape and preservation, of a huge size. It is 40 inches in circumference and 14 inches in diameter, and quite an ornamental curiosity.

Mission a Blessing.

The Rev. W. J. Creighton, rector of Bradford, who has been conducting a strenuous twelve days' mission in Apsley and district, concluded his work on Wednesday evening at St. George's Church, Apsley, where a good sized congregation assembled to hear his closing address.

The mission aroused considerable interest, which was evidenced by the number of questions relating to religious matters that were placed in the question box and answered by the missioner. Spiritual results were also manifested in the large number of promise cards and pledges signed by members of the different congregations, and there is no doubt that the mission has been a blessing to many.

Personals.

Mr. John Johnson of Young's Point has been in the village and vicinity this week looking after some timber interests.

The Rev. W. J. Creighton was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Downing during his stay in Apsley.

Mrs. Spence has gone on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. E. T. Shewen, Nassau. Miss Marjorie Spence is also visiting her sister.

John Coones and George Kilborne left on Monday for Toronto where they have taken positions.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Windsor are moving into their new residence.

Mr. Isaac Lean has rented Apsley House and will occupy it immediately.

ARREST OF FRENCH OFFICER DEFENDED

German Note Also Protests Against French Reprisals.

PARIS, December 1 (Canadian Press). — Two German notes have been delivered to the French Embassy in Berlin, one justifying the arrest of the French officer, Pandayres Daramon, as having taken place on German soil, and the other protesting against the French reprisals which consisted of the arrest of Herr Lenzberg, president of the Dusseldorf Chamber of Commerce, and other Germans in the occupied territory.

The second German note demands the immediate release of these prisoners.

The French contention is that Daramon was taken on Swiss soil by three German policemen disguised as peasants.

He is an officer on the French staff, and was engaged in watching the Swiss frontier for any evidences of armament by Germany.

NEW YORK GANGSTERS

from the $9,300, $9,000 of which was recovered from a valut in Cleveland, where he deposited it before he was arrested there.

Barlow then left the gunmen after making an appointment for them to meet him in his East Twenty-seventh street rooming house in Manhattan and hand over more of the loot, according to the police He was alleged to have waited in vain and then fled to Philadelphia after reading in the afternoon newspapers that there had been found on the running board of the death car license plates traced to a man who gave as his address a house owned by the Diamonds mother.

Shortly after the robbery Capabianco and Luciano were alleged to have taken to a Manhattan garage from which the death car was removed nother machine of similar appearance; to allay any suspicion of the garage proprietor, who might report to the police that a car from his place was missing.

Chorus Girls Help.

Joseph, it was said by the police, became nervous the day after the robbery and went to his lawyer Then he hastened to his brother in Philadelphia, where the pair entertained two chorus girls who later were questioned by the police and reported to have furnished important leads.

Despite entries on the books of the Diamond Basswood Co., which at first led District-Attorney Dodd to believe that the Diamonds received most of the loot, the police today expressed belief that the missing gunmen and their driver retained more than $34,000 The Diamonds were said never to have heard from the fugitive since Barlow left them in Brooklyn. Sales of wood were believed by the police to account for entries on the company's books.

Called Arch Plotter.

Anthony Pantano, son of a wealthy Italian importer, of No. 8788 Bay Parkway, Brooklyn, is the youth proclaimed as the arch plotter of the wanton killing of McLaughlin and Barlow. He is held on a charge of murder.

The two Diamond brothers, Pantano, and William Fried, manager of the Diamond Brothers' Basswood factory in West Twenty-third street, who is held as a material witness, vied with one another in trying to unload themselves of any responsibility for the murder.

The three who were picked up in the Bronx, however, remained sullen and silent. They merely grunted acknowledgment that they knew the Diamonds and Pantano.

Though the stories told by the Diamonds, Pantano and Fried disagreed in details, out of the whole the police pieced one of the most amazing stories of crime and attempted crime, which has come to their ears in years.

Tantano Had Plan.

Joseph Diamond was the man who told a story of the proposed robbery of the West End bank that made the listeners stand aghast in the Kings District Attorney's office. Her is what he told District Attorney Dodd:

"About three months ago Pantano, who worked in the bank, and whom I had known for some time, came to me with a suggestion that the bank be robbed by a group of men.

"He went into great details with the proposed hold-up. He said that he thought that seven men could stage it and asked me to get the men. Pantano told me that he had carefully gone into the plot, and had drawn plans of the interior of the bank.

"His plan was to have the seven men descend on the bank in a body, force everyone to hold up their hands, and then rob the place of $250,000 in cash and $500,000 in bonds, which were always on hand.

Could Cut Off Alarm.

"He said that although the bank was elaborately wired, he, through his connection with it, could arrange matter so that warning buzzers could not be sounded. He said he knew that tthere was a button at the feet of Germain, the manager of the bank, which could be set off when anything happened. But he could disconnect the buzzer, he told us.

"At his request, I saw my brother, Barlow. I told him about the plan. Barlow went downtown and saw some gunmen and laid the plan before them. They listened to him, but would not go into it because they thought it was too risky.

"The gunmen, however, were willing to stick up the messengers carrying the money and take it away from them.

"So I went back to Pantano and told him what they said. Pantano then obtained knowledge of the movements of the bank messengers and the route they took in traveling back and forth with money.

Met the Gunmen.

"We went over the plan a number of times, and he went with us to the place in the Bronx where we met the gunmen. Pantano explained everything to them."

Pantano however, though willing to talk extensively to District Attorney Dodd, did not take kindly to being pictured as the originator of the robbery and murder plot.

HIGH SPOTS IN THE ELECTIONS

Man in the Audience Wanted to Hang One of the Speakers.

LONDON, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press).—In Coventry, the seat of the motor industry in this country, where there is a triangular contest in the present election, all the candidates lunched yesterday with the local Rotary Club. A. A. Purcell, the Labor champion in the riding, said when the Labor party reached power it would establish a second Chamber, containing the best of the industrialists. He would do his best, he said, to see that Sir Edward Manville, Conservative member of Coventry since 1918, a big employer of labor, whom Purcell is opposing, should have a place in that body.

Charles Latham, Labor opponent of Sir Philip Lloyd Creame, president of the Board of Trade, in the Hendon Division of Middlesex, has received £300 from an undisclosed source, without any conditions attached to the gift. Latham announced that he will hold the money till after the election, when he will consider the question of handing it to charities.

Sir Robert Horne, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, was accused by a man in a Glasgow audience of being "rotten," the individual in question following this up by declaring that he had a good mind to string Sir Robert up. Sir Robert leaned forward and invited the interruptor to come to the platform and try it. The man shrank back in his seat and that ended the incident.

PROBABLE RESULT OF THE ELECTION

Weekly Review Makes Some Pointed Observations on Present Fight.

LONDON, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press). — Discussing vagaries of Lord Rothermere and Lord Beaverbrook Press in this election spectator in weekly Review, points out these two peers call themselves Unionists or Conservatives yet they attack Premier Baldwin every day and it deduces from this that there is conspiracy by Rothermere and Beaverbrook Press to re-establish Coalition Government in which Lloyd George, Lord Birkenhead and Austen Chamberlain would have place.

"If Premier Baldwin should have great success power of huge newspaper syndicate will be marked down considerably in political market," says Spectator, "but even before we know result of polling we do not need to take our courage in both hands to say that Press peers are mistaken if they think public likes great combin, and waits upon its words. What public wants is honest news.

Weekly review in outlook gives following final estimate of probable result of election:

Conservatives 324; Liberals 150; Labor 138; Independents 3.

This means that Premier Baldwin according to outlook, cannot translate into concrete legislation his tariff proposals for he will be faced with block of thirty-five free trade members of his own party. He will need majority of at least 50 to have even sporting chance to fulfill any promise he is making on platform.

The Nation, which is opposed to Premier Baldwin, in its weekly review of political situation, says it is entirely to Premiers credit that he should be in Lord Rothermore's blackbooks. Great Britain will sink very low indeed, Nation says, "If it ever gets Premier who has not this much good in him."

BOXING BOUT PROMISES TO ATTRACT BIG CROWD

TORONTO, December 1 (Canadian Press). — Charlie Hallatt, matchmaker for the International Club of Toronto, which is staging the Villa-Mack bout here next Wednesday night at the Coliseum, announced this morning that "the Leopard of Luzon" would arrive on Monday morning from New York, and will complete his training at one of the local clubs.

One of the largest crowds that has ever attended a boxing bout here promises to witness the fight, and experts concede that the Toronto boy has a good chance against the flyweight champion.

MISS PEARL BURFORD RECITAL

(By Jeannette)

The concert recital given by Miss Pearl Burford at the Conservatory of Music last evening was eminently successful. Nearly two hundred peopl, formed an appreciative audience which listened with rapt attention to the brilliant playing of the one performer of the evening, who held the close interest and attentive consideration of her audience through an hour and a half of beautiful music.

Miss Burford, who takes the place this year of Carlos Buhler on the Conservatory staff, has an admirable stage presence. Her gown was an exquisite creation of cream and gold lace. Her playing is free from jarring mannerisms, her technique appears to be almost faultless, with a touch of crystal clearness, her lengthy and difficult programme was played entirely from memory, and the entire performance was one of brilliant artistry.

Miss Burford has an evident fine appreciation of tone production. Every note was given its full value, without ragged overlapping, and the effect of the chiselled cameos of sound that flowed from facile fingers was heightened by an intelligent use of the pedal.

The programme was mainly of the romantic type of composition, and the artist appeared to be quite at east in her interpretation of a varying exposition of music that ranged from the earnest and lofty compositions of Bach to the fantastic charm of Schumann and what has been termed by an admirer of Chopin as the "chromatic sinuosities" of the great exponent of Polish music.

Beethoven's Sonata in E. Opus 109, a composition seldom heard, was one of the loveliest of the charming gems on the programe. Here the artist's facile touch was emphasied, in a rapid transition from the force of prestissime movement to the velvet smoothness of the dreamy andante, that illustrates so well the spiritual quality of the great composer's work

A certain quality of radiant interpretation was evident also in the tender and delicate music of Chopin's Nocturne Opus, 15, Number 1, in which the musician's command of her instrument was ably exemplified A fine, singing tone was the outstanding note in this attention-holding number.

Scenes of Childhood, one of Schumanns descriptive fantasies of childish play and emotion, was a triumphant exposition of transition in musical mood. Each brief merceau was chiselled in delicate sound. The time, with the staccato liveliness of grave to gay, from lively to severe, in the tonal story of childish pastime, with the staccate liveliness of the hobby horse Knight melting into th, legato drowiness of "falling asleep" and the minor, faraway sweetness of the finale, "The Poet Speaks. Interprettve ability stood out here in a fashion that enthralled an attentive audience.

The opening number on the programme was one of Bach's impressive compositions for th, piano, the English Suite in A minor, illustrating the great musicians comprehension of the old English dance music.

The changing humours of Brahms with his ascetic phrasing, were illustrated in a brief Ballade in G. Minor and there was a bizarre touch to the programme in the strange descriptive rhythm of Carpentier's Tango American. Another bit of sparkling humour was Godard's Le Cavalier Fantastique, bright, vivacious, characteristic.

Lovers of the superb music of Liszt could probably find no better exponent than Miss Burford, who included two of his shorter compositions in her brilliant programme. With facile, liquid tone, with comprehension of the rhapsodical quality of his varying music, emotional, full of brilliant charm, Hungarian in atmosphere and temperament, the artist played with ease and finish the capricious, dainty Valse Oubilee, with its unexpected interludes, taking as a second number by the composer the descriptive composition inspired by one of the masterpieces of the great painter, Raphael, in his delineation of the "Espousals" of the Blessed Virgin Mary. This lovely number progresses from a mild prelude to sustained, crashing chords of massive tone, interspersed with accented intervals of trailing sweetness.

Miss Burford who proved herself last evening to be a versatile and brilliant musician, in an artistic performance that brought from her audience a close attention and repeated hearty applause, was the guest of honor later at a reception tendered by the teaching staff of the Conservatory of Music and their friends.

The grand piano used at last night's performanc, was loaned by the Heintzman Hall management.

THE ART ASSOCIATION.

An interesting and unique display of curios and South American handicraft is being shown this afternoon and evening in the studio of the Women's Art Association at the Conservatory of Music. The exhibit is in charge of Miss Stockton, who has been working as a missionary in South America for the past five years. Miss Stockton gives a talk, illustrated with snap shots, descriptive of her exhibit and of the life and customs of the country.

The collection includes some wonderful examples of ancient and modern pottery, baskets of dyed horsehair, finely woven linen and lace, goatskin rugs, carved tortoise shell combs, and Spanish lace.

There is for sale also a number of hand-woven bedspreads, scarves and rugs of homespun in soft, harmonious shades.

Tea will be served by the ladies of the Art Association, after the afternoon and evening lectures.

"Yes," she asserted.

"Will you marry me?" he asked.

MARKET FORUM AGAIN ACTIVE

Chilly Backs Warmed at the Stove and Current Issues Discussed.

Purchasing in the basket section of the farmers' market was slow this morning. The tables were piled with fowl of every description, and the supply of butter and eggs was much more plentiful than in some time, but the throng of men and women seemed to be in a critical humour, content in many cases to survey the proffered goods and pass along to the next round of chicken or basket of eggs. Rivals to the feminine venodrs appeared on the open section this morning, where many the carts held baskets of eggs and a few dressed fowl.

Eggs were 75 cents a dozen, butter ranged in price from 40 to 43 cents a pound, chickens, dry plucked and milk fed, could be bought for 22 and 25 cents a pound, ducks and geese were 25 cents a pound, and turkeys 30 and 35 cents.

Downstairs there were Barred Rocks in open crates, at $1.25 apiece, and White Leghorns, their nice white eggs displayed in an accompanying basked, were the same price. A pair of Rouen ducks, with their odd markings of blue and green, progressed through the crowd, heads down, in the hand of a purchaser, whose avowed audible intention was to take them home and make them ready for a Sunday dinner. These birds were $1.10 each, while live ducks of the same family at another stall were $3.50 a pair.

Little pigs were $8 a pair this morning.

Potatoes were plentiful to-day, at a price per bag of $1.50, and there were many varieties of apples, Spies at $5.50 a barrel at one cart, 65 cents a peck at another, Baldwins $4.50 a barrel, and Scott's Winter, in two grades, at $4.50 and $5.50 for the same quantity. Peewaukies at 50 cents, Snows and Banana apples at 75 cents a peck.

Pork was 16 and 18 cents a pound, lamb 20 and 25, beef 10 and 12.

Carrots were 20 cents a peck, onions 75 cents, beets 40 cents a basket, parsnips 50 cents a peck, celery from 10 to 20 cents a bunch, cauliflower 20 cents apiece, and turnips 75 cents a bag.

In the basket section, numerous sales went on this morning. There was a display of useful articles, in plain sewing, some woollen goods, home-made cooking and a sale of Vetcraft articles.

The market forum was in great shape this morning. Backs that have been chilly for weeks past got a good warming around the two lighted stoves this morning, while their owners discussed many things. A great deal of satisfaction is expressed over the good rains of this week, of which the country stood greatly in need.

Wood of varying quality was for sale this morning on a dozen carts, ranging in price from $9 to $14. Hay was selling for $12 and $13.

Among the auctioned-off articles was a used car which went for $325, a load of odds and ends of wood that brought a price of $11.75, a pair of old horses, "fit for the bone yard. You could see every rib," which went together to the highest bidder. A pair of cows brought nineteen and twenty-four dollars, respectively.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

141 Maria Street,
Weston, Ont.,
November 27, 1923.

EDITOR:

Would you kindly insert a letter for me in your paper.

I have been very interested to read of the efforts to put a little horse, etc., into your children going to wschool.

It is quite a business this vaccine and serum selling, must be a good game because it bobs up here and there and they seem to get rid of quite a lot. When I was a young mother I lived in Cambridge, England, and this kind of a thing bobbed up then. I loved my children and wanted to do the very best possible for them and so when a lecture was advertised I was anxious to learn all about this and I went. Some fine old professor from one of the colleges gave the talk, and in summing up he said this: "Mothers, (it was a mother's meeting) if you do not remember anything I have said I want you to remember this, never put into your children's blood what you cannot put into their mouth.

Now my family have all grown up and I have kept to that. May I say they are all fine, healthy grown-ups and never had any of these filthy things put into them, nor any useful things cut out. Of course, I must admit they have been no profit to the serum manufacturers, neither have any died. At the time I speak of the dread disease it was smallpox, now it is diphtheria. I wonder if there is more profit from antitoxin than vaccine or have the public got too wise so must try something they don't understand so well.

MOTHER.

Clarady P.O., Peterboro,
November 30, 1923.

Dear Sir,—

Noticing your article in the paper last night stating that you are not getting replies to cards sent out on the Alberta coal question. In reply I beg to state that I for one never received a card, and probably a great many more has not received them.

I have been using Alberta coal in the lump size in our cook range since the 6th of November and I like it fine and if I could only get it right along I would not buy any more American anthracite.

The qualities are everything that can be desired. We have never yet banked the fire up to last over night, but all the same it has never been out since I started it on the sixth. It is economical, and clean to use. There is no ash sifters to buy as you don't require one, and I firmly believe that if it cost the same as anthracite we should be as well off, considering the waste attached to the anthracite and the risk of getting bad coal, which will not burn, and throwing off no heat.

I trust that the users will make response to your request and that you will push your campaign and be successful in getting the coal through which would mean a great thing for this country.

Very truly yours,
SOUTH END USER.

LITERATURE PRIZE AWARDED TO YEATS

DUBLIN, Dec. 1. Canadian Press. —William Butler Yeats was complete ly surprised when he learned that he had received the Nobel prize for litterature. He did not know its amount amount (£75,000) and said to his wife, "If it is small we will spend it and be rich; if it is large we will invest it and be substantial."

Yeats attributes the honor rather to the Anglo-Saxon literature movement than to merit in his own work.

The romantic school, he believes, is passing, and will be replaced possibly by the pychologists.

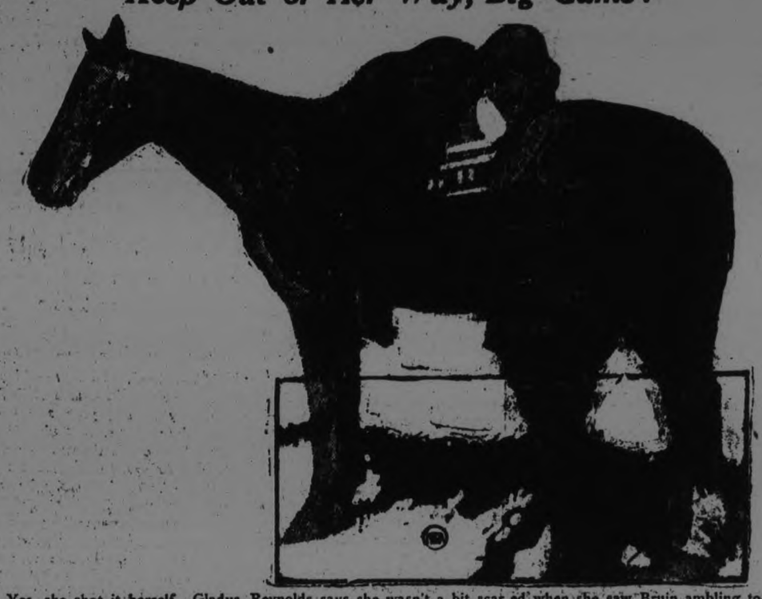
UMBRELLAS AT GAME HELD TO BE NECESSITY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 29.—Men, who peddled raincoats and umbrellas at the Harvard-Yale football game last Saturday were adjudged public benefactors, even though they had no licenses, when they appeared in the East Cambridge Court yesterday.

"Any man who was selling raincoats, umbrellas or anything to protect the people at that game is a public benefactor," said Judge Stone, "and in no way can I bring myself to impose a fine on him."

Men without licenses who peddled flags, pins and similar articles at the game were fined $5 or $10 each.

Keep Out of Her Way, Big Game!



Yes, she shot it herself. Gladys Reynolds says she wasn't a bit scar ed when she saw Bruin ambling toward her in the woods of northern Oregon. She just simply aimed and fired. And down went Mister Bear. He weighed 230 pounds.

BILLIARD LEAGUE UNDER WAY AGAIN

Annual Meeting Last Evening—Larger Membership This Year.

The annual meeting of the above League was held in the S. O. E. Hall last night with a good attendance of representatives. The officers elected for the coming season 1923-1924 were President Guerin; Vice-President F. Collis; Secretary-Treasurer F. A. Dainton.

The Past President was pleased to note more interest being taken in the game and league as twelve teams had signified their intention of joining. The financial statement was read and a balance of nine dollars was in hand to carry on with.

A re-organization meeting and initiation of new members into the Order of the Knights of the Maccabees, was held in the C.O.F. Hall on George street, during Thursday and Friday evenings of this week.

Owing to the new legislation passed by the government, making it compulsory for the society to raise its rates, several of the older members dropped out of the organization, and a campaign for membership has been going on for some time, which culminated in the initiation last evening and the night before of about 35 new members.

LOOK AFTER YOUR GENERAL HEALTH

A Mild Malady, Neglected, May Develop Complications Dangerous and Even Fatal.

The surest way to live to a ripe old age is to get an incurable disease and nurse it. So said the distinguished Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. Joking? Not at all. He meant it.

A mild malady, neglected, may develop complications dangerous and even fatal.

An incurable malady often can be fought and held in check for years by taking proper care of the general health.

The body's power of resistance is the thing to worry about, rather than any particular ailment that attacks the body.

We have known many people, with one foot in the grave, who lived on and on for years though always on the verge of dying. And simply because they took such good care of themselves.

Few diseases are more distressing than neurasthenia—which is a name given by physicians to cover a multitude of ailments that they cannot definitely diagnose.

A neurasthenic patient is notorious for developing one ailment after another. Now it's the stomach. "all shot to pieces." Tomorrow the stomach is behaving and the heart palpitates. Later the heart steadies and the liver begins acting up. And so on. Through all, the neurasthenic lives on—because the most decided tendency of neurasthenics is the excellent care they take of themselves.

As a result, a pronounced case of neurasthenia usually dies of old age.

Winter is here and with it come epidemics of head colds, tonsilitis, bronchitis and what-not. The best weapon against all of them is to keep the body's powers of resistance in good shape, by sensible diet, plenty of fresh air indoors and exercise outdoors, also lots of rest. As in battle, the enemy is less dangerous than than the victim's inability to fight.

VALENTINO

"I have only 150 suits of clothes," says Rodolph Valentino sadly. "You may think that a large number, but clothes to me are just like a pick and shovel to a laborer—they are my tools."

Even Socrates would listen to that.

Socrates also would be keenly interested in the bit of cable news describing Valentino in his boudoir, "several French journalists interviewing him on international relations." The real joke about this is that some of the politicians who actually shape "international relations" aren't half as keen and wise as the Sheik.

(By Ed. L. Keen, ral European manager Unitedews).

LONDON, Dec. 1-day marks the close of one of speediest, most hectic fortnight e history of British election cas ns, which will increase in intens until Thursday.

David Lloyd Georg easily the star of the campaign, invigorated by his American , former Premier is adopting the first time American device th as amplifiers and broadcast He has been setting a hot pa with from ten to fifteen meetin ly in the north of England and Wales.

Ramsay MacDonald, bor's candidate for the premiers is a close second as a popular ation.

It is estimated that a ut seven thousand speeches are m daily by spokesmen for all parties.

A prevailing impressi continues that the Conservative probably will retain a majority in e House of Commons, although th present-age probably will be ously reduced with the Liberal gaining most of the seats which t Baldwin party loses.

It is not expected that e Labor party will increase mately their present representation, in fact they retain their present nbers.

Considerable piquancy has been ed ded to the campaign by th appearance of Oliver Baldwin, so of the prime minister on the Labor stump.

In an interview, the young an explained—"I am not opposin father personally but his principle which are leading us nowhere, kannot help opposing a government which has failed to carry out even the smallest part of the post wa promises made to the men who ere in the trenches.

Bitterness and Rowdyism which have marked election campaign in some sections of th country took turn for worse last night when Hooligans attacked Miss Violet Robertson, Unionist candidate for the St. Rollox Constituency, when she was addressing a meeting in a schoolhouse, kicking her and treating her insultingly. Miss Robertson was confined to her bed to-day from bruises and shock.

Many meetings previously have been broken up in various places but this is first time in present election than any candidate has been injured so fa as is known.

Baby Dies, Mother Cries And Toys Go Up For Sale

This is the Story Behind Some of the "For Sale" Advertisements That Appear in the Paper — From Grave to Gay in the Classified Ad. Page of a Newspaper.

There is plenty of what might be termed local color in one of the most business-like appearing columns of any newspaper; the classified ad section. Perhaps a small city paper may not abound in the romantic elements that fill the personal columns of big city dailies, where they ask "Joe" or "Ella" or "Beatrice" to "come back and be forgiven," or tell a distant inamorata in a confidential blatant newspaper aside that "all is forgotten", nor are there the heart-throbs that pulse out of the black and white type in the "War Cry", for example, with its heart-searching quests for long-lost sons and daughters with tatooed arms and scars on foreheads to identify them for desolate parents or wives.

But consider the pictures that come to the mind from a perusal of a few days' "lost", and "for sale", and "wanted' columns.

One may conjure up a vision of a fuzzy Persian kitten, lost out in the black night, while a small owner hunts vainly for the wandering pet. Sheltered in out of the way niches of verandah steps, it may be picked up by some kindly passer-by, or fall to the tender mercies of a group of gamins who think a kitten's tail is meant to be pinched and pulled. In the meantime, its owner advertises for it in the daily press.

Then there are sundry dogs, collies and hounds, a Sam or a Betty or a Gyp, gone by unaccounted ways from homes that look for them in vain. One, last month, was last seen near a swamp that may have swallowed it up later, and another is described as being of a "dead grass colour", whatever shade that might be. Here also is a wily little pig that escaped from its cart and an abattoir fate, to make off "unbeknownst", and prolong its grunting life for another while.

And there is a touch of comedy in the advertisement that records the loss of a "bay horse, with halter and long rope shank on him when he broke away from a little boy," Evidently the wise equine knew the strength of its small guardian and made a successful bid for freedom, despite the "halter and long rope shank."

One of the most common of "for sale" advertisements is the one recording the disposal to anyone interested of a baby carriage. There must be many pathetic tales behind these little ads. Why do people sell baby carriages, many of them proclaimed as "almost new?" Is the mother dead who bought the grey or the cream or the ivory carriage, possibly selecting it with a careful eye to color and make, and buying the baby's clothes thereafter with a thought for its outward-bound appearance, framed in its new buggy? Or has the baby gone on to another world, and the heart-broken parents want no reminder of the little one?

Sometimes it looks like the latter, when one see's advertised "a child's bed, go-cart and red sleigh with hood", evidently a complete outfit for some cherished baby. Then there are combinations, like the "folding baby carriage and a five gallon ice cream freezer." Don't they need any more ice cream when the baby has gone away, or has it grown up and taken to buying ice cream cones for itself, and turns up its nose now at the home-made commodity?

Dont' they want any more heat in the house where the baby carriage and the Quebec heater are offered for sale in conjunction?

There are stories behind these things, sometimes tragic, sometimes comical, and they peep out of the classified ads like printers' errors that give a Swedish twist to the wording of another section that offers "potatoes by the jag," and the sample that proclaims a "size 40 black cloth winter 'boat'" as too small for its owner.

Here is an equivocal advertisement that requests the services of a respectable woman to take care of a child that is five months old "during the day," and there is a refreshing simplicity and frankness about the announcement of the gentleman who says he wants a middle-aged woman for a "housekeeper or wife". Probably the choice is up to the lady, who would probably have good judgment if she had arrived at the middle age desired by the insertee.

Another request is for "three thousand dollars for two years" — simply that and nothing more,—a whimsical-minded advertiser says he had a chassis for sale "just the thing for somebody to build a body on"; there is a "large grocer's refrigerator" to be picked up handily, and the loser of a twenty-dollar bill advertises it as being "valuable to owner."

A specific advertisement that is often met with, too is the one that says "a horse load of wood", instead of the loose term "a load" that might mean anything from a wheelbarrow to a delivery truck.

A Steeple-Jack Fell From a Hamilton Chimney Top Today

HAMILTON, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Frank Seybold, Chicago, fell 165 feet from the top of a chimney being erected by Semit-Solway Company for the United Gas Fuel Company, to his death this morning.

He had come here from Chicago with his father. They are experts in construction of such work. They were putting the finishing touches on the chimney when part of the scaffold broke.

His body was frightfully mangled in the fall.

ANOTHER DEBATE

institution for a Christmas treat. A sugestion that $15 was the usual grant was rejected by the Mayor, who spoke of the need of the children for a good Christmas treat.

Immediately the Mayor's interruption had been disposed of the discussion of the police department car was resumed, but resolved into several debating parties, when a scarce heard motion to adjourn was declared carried by the chairman.

Fatherly Mood.

The Finance Committee was in a fatherly mood last night, granting five requests for assistance or for maintenance of indigent Peterboro citizens in outside hospitals.

Ald. Crowe suggested calling on the Citizens' Research Institute to investigate the city business departments and put the business on a right basis. "Manufacturers have experts to go through their plants and advise them, and our business is no different in principle. But we just take their words for what they do," remarked Ald. Crowe.

Fuel Committee Reports.

Chairman Fife reported to the Fuel Committee on the sale of the three cars of coal seized from Miss Sophie Kohen, which were sold by the Sheriff to satisfy a judgment in favor of the city. The proceeds will not wipe out the obligation, but the city has gained some 300 from the transaction.

It was announced that the Sheriff will hold the money for 30 days to enable other creditors to file their claims, when if there are any, they will receive a pro rata share of the proceeds.

One of the cars was purchased by the city, and the operation was considered by the Aldermen present last night as a good arrangement.

The chairman's actions were endorsed by a motion to which Ald. Phelan and Stocker spoke.

There were present at the two committees last night, Mayor W. H. Taylor, Ald. Phelan, Crowe, Stocker, McIntyre, Holloway, Fife and Maher.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1. — (United Press).—Stocks closed the week with an outburst of strength, which carried the general level of prices to the highest ground seen on the current upswing. Baldwin, American Can., Steel and other old-time leaders of the industrial class headed this movement, which was based on the outlook for highly constructive developments when the new session of Congress opens.

Wall Street found the time to look for a bullish programme in Washington a refreshing change from the earlier apprehension entertained about the re-opening of Congress. Hence it joined in the bullish demonstration of the Stock Exchange, with the result that the market was buoyant throughout the brief session.

Stocks gained strength towards the close, and the final dealings were characterized by marked buoyancy throughout the list.

New highs on the movements were reached by Studebaker, Corn Products and other leaders, following the strength shown by Steel, Baldwin and American Can. Bullish demonstrations went ahead in numerous specialties, and prices closed at the best levels of the week.

The overnight news was constructive. Judge E. H. Gary's straight from the shoulder speech on the soldiers' bonus, taxation and the foreign debts pleased the Street as much as the Chairman Grace statement on the future of the steel industry.

Secretary Hughes' clear explanation of the foreign policy policy of the United States was expected to have a widespread political influence.

The weekly trade reviews said business was on a solid foundation. The production of Powell Field Crude Oil showed a further falling off, and Standard Oil of New Jersey raised the price of gasoline and kerosene for export ¼ cent a gallon.

Marshall, Field and Co. reported an improvement in dry goods sales. The business reviews of the New York banks were optimistic. Savings bank deposits in the country increased $608,000,000 in the last 12 months. This favorable budget stimulated the demand for stocks and prices were generally higher at the opening.

Standard of New Jersey led the oils, reaching a new high on the movement at 36½. Stocks moved ahead vigorously through the first hour under the leadership of American Can. and Baldwin, which moved into new high ground for the current upswing.

Wall Street was confident that the first measures to come before the new Congress would look toward tax reduction, and this prospect was expected to form the basis for a bullish demonstration in the whole market, simultaneously with the return of the legislative body to Washington. All classes of stocks were stimulated by this outlook, and the general list was buoyant around 11 o'clock. Central Leather issues displayed special strength, reflecting substantial short covering.

The woman was unconscious when picked up and taken to the General Hospital, where she died at eight o'clock last night. A receipt found in her purse bore the name Bailey, but no address.

MUSIC AT TRINITY CHURCH TOMORROW

Tomorrow, Sunday, night at Trinity church, during the evening service, selections from Gounod will be rendered by the choir, assisted by Mrs. Foster, violinist.

Charles Francois Gounod as a composer ranks among the foremost of the great composers.

One of his greatest works "The Redemption" a sacred trilogy, was dedicated to the late Queen Victoria and on the title page Gounod wrote, "The work of my life."

The chorus, "Unfold Ye Portals Everlasting," taken from "The Redemption" and which will be one of the selections rendered by the choir, shows the depth of his religious feeling and his desire to acclaim the "King of Kings" and "Lord of Lords."

His fellow countrymen to show their admiration for his genius bestowed on him their country's greatest honour by decorating him with the Cross of the Legion of Honour.

He died in 1893 at the age of 75, leaving behind him a name immortalized in the world of music.

The following are the selections that will be rendered during the evening service:

ORGAN PRELUDE—Serenade.
CHORUS—"By Babylon's Wave."
SOLO—"O Divine Redeemer," Mrs. Geo. H. King.
CHORUS—"Unfold Ye Portals Everlasting."
VIOLIN SOLO—"Ava Maria," Mrs. "Come Unto Him," Choir (unaccompanied).
ORGAN POSTLUDE—Marche Romaine.

AN AWFUL ATTACK OF PIMPLES ALL OVER HIS FACE

Pimples breaking out on the face and other parts of the body is a sure sign that the blood is not in proper shape.

While the skin is the object of the attack the real seat of the disease is in the blood on account of the entire circulation being poisoned.

Burdock Blood Bitters quickly and effectually banishes pimples and all other skin diseases as it goes right to the root of the trouble by cleansing and enriching the blood.

Mr. Conad Anderson, Kelfield, Sask., writes:—"A year ago I had an awful attack of pimples. They broke out all over my face and I could not get rid of them in any way. One day a friend told me about your Burdock Blood Bitters and let me have a bottle he had to spare. After using it I noticed a change, so I bought three more bottles, and now I don't know there is such a thing as pimples."

STATES INVITED TO JOIN PARLEY

Committee Will Investigate Germany's Ability to Pay.

PARIS, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press).—An invitation to the United States Government to appoint members of each of two committees which are to investigate the German finances has been forwarded to Washington by Colonel James Logan on behalf of the Reparations Commission.

According to information in reparation circles, the principal reason why the door was left open by the Reparations Commission for the United States Government to be represented on the committee was that the French, British, Italian and Belgian Governments were agreed that United States money would be essential to any reasonable plan for the restoration of the German financial system.

Premier Poincare, it is declared, did not expect Secretary of State Hughes to refuse so quickly the conditions insisted upon by France for the originally proposed inquiry into Germany's capacity to pay reparation. M. Poincare had thought, it is said, that the period of negotiations would take place in which France would be prepared to go much further in the direction of the United States views, providing some concessions were made regarding her debts to Great Britain and the United States.

Eat and Get Thin

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made the revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion; if you are likewise fond of the table, and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward ave., Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) one dollar. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure. He will hand you a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription) one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat steadily and easily. Then continue the treatment until your weight is what you desire. Marmola Prescription Tablets are not only harmless, but really beneficial to the general health. You don't need starvation diet or weakening exercises. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully, and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.

XIX.

They sat beside the fire in chairs that had never felt softer. He smoked a cigar, she cigarettes in a long topaz holder ornamented with a tiny crown of diamonds and the letter Z. She had given it to him to examine when he exclaimed at its beauty.

Z!

But he banished both curiosity and possible confirmation. He was replete and comfortable and almost happy. The occasional silences were now merely agreeable. She lay back in her deep chair as relaxed as himself, but although she said little her aloofness had mysteriously departed. She looked companionable and serene. Only one narrow foot in its silvery slipper moved occasionally, and her white and beautiful hands, whose suggestion of ruthless power Clavering had appreciated apprehensively from the first, seemed, although they were quiet, subtly to lack the repose of her body.

Once while he was gazing into the fire he felt sure that she was examining his profile. He made no pretentions to handsomeness, but he rather prided himself on his nose, the long fine straight nose of the Claverings. His brow was also good, but although his hair was black, his eyes were blue, and he would have preferred to have black eyes, as he liked consistent types. Otherwise he was one of the "black Claverings." Northumbrian in origin and claiming descent from the Bretwaldes, overlords of Britain, the Claverings were almost as fair as their Anglican ancestors, but once in every two or three generations a completely dark member appeared, resurgence of the ancient Briton; sometimes associated with the high stature of the stronger Nordic race, occasionally—particularly among the women—almost squat Clavering had been spared the small stature and the small to narrow head, but saving his steel blue eyes—trained to look keen and hard—he was as dark as any Mediterranean. His mouth was well shaped and closely set, but capable of relaxation and looked as if it might once have been full and sensitive. It too had been severely trained. The long face was narrower than the long admirably proportioned head. It was by no means as disharmonic a type as Gora Dwight's; the blending of the races was far more subtle, and when making one of his brief visits to Europe he was generally taken for an Englishman, never for a member of the Latin peoples; except possibly in the north of France, where his type, among those Norman descendants of Norse and Danes, was not uncommon. Nevertheless, although his northern inheritance predominated, he was conscious at times of a certain affinity with the race that two thousand years ago had met and mingled with his own.

He turned his eyes swiftly and met hers. She colored faintly and dropped her lids. Had she lowered those broad lids over a warm glow?

"Now I know what you look like!" he exclaimed, and was surprised to find that his voice was not quite steady. "A Nordic princess."

"Oh! That is the very most charming compliment ever paid me."

"You look a pretty unadulterated type for this late date. I dont mean in color only, of course; there zare millions of blondes."

"My mother was a brunette."

"Oh, yes, you are a cast of atavism, no doubt. If I were as good a poet as one of my brother columnists I should have written a poem to you long since. I can see you sweeping northward over the steppes of Russia as the ice-caps retreated . . . re-embodied on the Baltic coast or the shores of the North Sea . . . sleeping for ages in one of the Meglaiths, to rise again a daughter of the Brythons, or of a Norse Viking . . . west into Anglia to appear once more as a Priestess of the Druids chaunting in a sacred grove . . . or as Boadicea—who knows! But no prose can regenerate that shadowy time. I see it—prehistory—as a swaying mass of ghostly multitudes, but always pressing on—on . . . as we shall appear, no doubt, ten thousand years hence if all histories are destroyed—as no doubt they will be. If I were an epic poet I might possibly find words and rhythm to fit that white vision, but it is wholly beyond the practical vocabulary and mental make-up of a newspaper man of the twentieth century. Some of us write very good poetry indeed, but it is not precisely inspired, and it certainly is not epic. One would have to retire to a cave like Buddha and fast."

"You write singularly pure English, in spite of what seems to me a marked individuality of style, and—ah—your apparent delight in slang!" Her voice was quite even, although her eyes had glowed and sparkled and melted at his poetic phantasma of her pzst (as what woman's would not?) "I find a rather painful effort to be—what do you call it, high-brow?—in some of your writers."

"The youngsters. I went through that phase. We all do. But we emerge, I mean, of course, when we have anything to express. Metaphysical verbosity is a friendly refuge. But as a rule years and hard knocks drive us to directness of expression. . . . But poets must begin young. And New York is not exactly a hotbed of romance."

"Do you think that romance is impossible in New York?" she asked irresistibly.

"I—oh—well, what is romance? Of course, it is quite possible to fall in love in New York—although anything but the ideal setting. But romance!"

"Surely the sense of mystery between a man and woman irresistibly attracted may be as provocative in a great city as in a feudal castle surrounded by an ancient forest—or on one of my Dolomite lakes. Is it not that which constitutes romance—the breathless trembling on the verge of the unexplored—that isolates two human beings as authentically—I am picking up your vocabulary—as if they were alone on a star in space? Is it not possible to dream here in New York?—and surely dreams play their part in romance." Her fingertips, moving delicately on the surface of her lap, had a curious suggestion of playing with fire.

"One needs lesiure for dreams." He stood up suddenly and leaned against the mantlepiece. The atmosphere had become electric. "A good thing, too, as far as some of us are concerned. The last thing for a columnist to indulge in is dreams. Fine hash he'd have for his readers next morning!"

"Do you mean to say that none of you clever young men fall in love?"

"Every day in the week, some of them. They even marry—and tell fatuous yarns about their babies. No doubt some of them have even gloomed through brief periods of unreciprocated passion. But they don't look very romantic to me."

"Romance is impossible without imagination, I should think. Aching for what you cannot have or falling in love reciprocally with a charming girl is hardly romance. That is a gift—like the spark that goes to the making of Art."

"Are you romantic?" he asked harshly. "You look as if born to inspire romance—dreams—like a beautiful statue or painting—but mysterious as you make yourself—and, I believe, are in essence—I should never have associated you with the romantic temperament. Your eyes—as they too often are—Oh, no!"

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

DOCTOR FOSTER GETS A PRIZE

It was whispered about that Nick held the ink bottle and Nancy held the blotter.

This is the riddle that Nancy an Nick helped the Riddle Lady to write. I don't know what part of it they helped with for Humpty Dumpty was the only one who was in the secret and he wouldn't tell, but it was whispered about that Nick held the ink bottle and Nancy held the blotter.

Anyway this is the riddle:

"When my good friend and I go out,
I walk around—I walk about,
But though I choose the smoothest street
My friend can't walk! He has no feet!

"Another thing that's queer about him
(I don't know what I'd do without him)
Is that when we go out together
We always choose the wettest weather.

"He's very thin, it's really shocking,
You quite could put him in your stocking.
His ribs are gaunt, his backbone shows,
He's skin and bone from head to toes.

"When we go strolling 'round the town
Full half the time he's upside down,
Yet that's the time he swells with pride,
Puffs out his sides and stretches wide.

"At home my friend's like Jackie Horner,
He much prefers a musty corner.
Because, perhaps, he hates the sun,
For surely he can't think it fun!

"He isn't smart, his head's quite hollow.
If I forget him, he can't follow,
Yet he's my friend, this stupid fellow,
My wooden-headed, silk ————"

"My goodness!" exclaimed Doctor Foster, who had stopped in Riddle Town on his way to Glouceste (Gloster). "Nobody could guess that in a hundred years."

"You shouldn't have any trouble at all people," laughed the Riddle Lady.

"I!" almost shouted Doctor Foster in such a surprised voice that Nancy and Nick started to dance around him in glee. "No, you shouldn't," cried Nick. "You always get caught in a shower."

"Well, I declare! I de—clare!" said Doctor Foster, puckering his eyes so hard his cyebrows quite drew together. "There! As usual it is raining. Can anyone lend me an—" Suddenly his mouth fell open and his eyebrows flew apart. "You can't mean—you don't say—it can't be an umbrella, can it?" he gasped.

"Exactly!" said the Riddle Lady. "And that's the prize today and you get it. Don't get wet, now, and watch the puddles."

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

How many times you have had to refuse invitations to go somewhere or do something you really wished to do, because of being dead tired or fatigued?

Fatigue may be termed muscular, postular or nervous. Muscles in active continued use pour into the circulation chemical substances which strongly affect, by their stimulant action, the respiratory nerve centers. There is a direct connection between muscular action and nerve fatigue.

In addition to cell loss or waste by action of the muscles, there is also a complicated chemical waste production. By long continued or violent action this waste is thrown into the body circulation more rapidly than it is removed. In normal muscular action this so-called overloading is rarely apparent.

Loss of "pep," or fatigue through bad posture, is also of frequent occurrence. Careless, slovenly habits, or indifferent posture, bring this about. If the strain or pull is not too severe on the sacro-iliac joints (base of spine) and reflex action through the spinal cord not retarded, this cause will be greatly reduced.

The splanchone (abdominal) circulation is repressed by bad posture and cannot carry the waste fast enough. It clogs athe blood outlet. The nerves suffer and refuse to aid your muscles. Fatigue is the result.

Often drowsiness and general lassitude are from food disturbances, brought on by bad diet or overeating. One must learn to avoid the excess of any one food element tending to this cause. It is not fatigue but bad diet. Do not eat heavy meals when fatigued.

To avoid fatigue requires no more than ordinary caution. The muscles must have relaxation and rest or both muscle and nerve will soon refuse to do your bidding. Relaxation is a great safeguard. Practice your resting powers. To do this plan some part of your busy day for a short vacation between activities.

Bathing is another means of avoiding fatigue. Perfect relaxation should be practiced to obtain the most good. A cold bath or a spray, which should be alternated with hot, will prove most stimulating and will prevent fatigue if regularly taken.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

MEAT SAUCES

The clever cook looks carefully to the kind of sauce she will serve with her meats No one would think of serving turkey without its cranberry sauce, but how many women think of adding the right touch to plain everyday boiled beef by serving horseradish sauce with it?

Fish is improved when accompanied by a sauce Oyster, egg, lemon, bechamel and brown sauce add much to any fish

Roast veal, which in and of itself is a tasteless meat, gains interest and flavor if sserved with tomato or onion sauce

Boiled mutton and caper sauce are quite as inseparable as roast pork and apple sauce.

As there are some people who absolutely object to meat sauces, the sauce should be served with the meat, not over it. This way the full flavor of the meat is preserved and the sauce acts as a complement to the meat instead of overwhelming the meat juices.

Meat stock, drawn butter or white sauce form the foundation for most sauces.

Caper Sauce

One and one-half cups drawn butter sauce, 1-3 cup capers, 1 tablespoon liquor over capers.

Add capers to sauce with the liquor in the bottle. Let simmer until thoroughly hot and serve in tureen.

Drawn Butter Sauce

Six tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 1½ cups boiling water, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper.

Melt butter in sauce pan, stir in flour and make perfectly smooth. Add water slowly, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and boil three minutes.

Onion Sauce

One and one-half cups milk, ½ cup cream, 3 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 3 medium sized onions, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Peel onions, put in cold water, bring to the boiling point and drain. Return to sauce pan with boiling water to cover and simmer one hour. When half done add ½ teaspoon salt. Drain onions and chop corasely. Melt butter, stir in flour and when well blended slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and add chopped onions. Simmer three minutes, stir in cream and serve in tureen.

Tomato Sauce

Two cups canned tomatoes, 1 small onion, 2 whole cloves, 1½ cups drawn butter sauce.

Two cups canned tomatoes, 1 small onion, 2 whole cloves, 1½ cups drawn butter sauce

Put tomatoes, onion, peeled and sliced and cloves in a smooth sauce pan Simmer for half an hour Strain and add to hot drawn butter

Bechamel Sauce

One cup white stock, ½ cup cream, 2 tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 small onion, 1 "bouquet-garni" (parsley, thyme, bay-leaf), 6 peppercorns, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon nutmeg

Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add stock, stirring constantly Add all the remaining ingredients except the cream and let simmer half an hour Rub through a strainer and reheat with cream

Horseradish Sauce

One tablespoon flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup cream, 1½ tablespoons finely grated horseradish, 1 teaspoon vinegar, ½ teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt

Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add cream which has been scalded Cook, stirring constantly until thick and smooth Remove from the fire, stir in vinegar, salt, sugar and horseradish and serve at once

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT STAND

Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

Glens Falls, N. Y.—"For over two months I was so sick I was not able to stand on my feet, and my husband did my housework. The doctor said an operation might be necessary. I read testimonial letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take it. Before I had finished taking the first bottle I saw what good it was doing me. I am now well and strong, doing all my work for a family of four, all my washing and my sewing, which I think is remarkable, as I had not dared to run my sewing machine, but had done all my sewing by hand. I truly feel that were it not for your medicine I would not be here today as my case seemed very serious."—Mrs. GEORGE W. BURCHELL, Glens Falls, N.Y.

KID LAVIGNE, AT 53, GETS LICENSE TO WED.

DETROIT, Dec. 1. — George H. Lavigne, former lightweight boxing champion of the world, who was known in the heyday of his pugilistic career as the "Saginaw Kid," and Mrs. Flora M. Davey has taken out a license to marry.

The "Saginaw Kid" gave his age as fifty-three, and his bride-to-be as fifty-eight, but refused to announce the date of the nuptial. Mrs. Davey is a widow.

This is the second time the "Kid" has taken out a license to marry within three months. On August 27 he got one to marry Margaret L. Morrisette, but the marriage never took place.

CAUSE OF BACKACHES

Every muscle in the body needs a supply of rich, red blood in proportion to the work it does. The muscles of the back are under a heavy strain and have but little rest. When the blood is thin they lack nourishment and rebel. The result is a sensation of pain in these muscles.

Many people are frightened into believing that backaches are due to kidney trouble, but the best medical authorities agree that backache is very seldom due to kidney trouble. In fact not more than one backache in a hundred has anything to do with the kidneys The whole trouble is due to thin or impure blood, and those who are troubled with pains in the back or loins, either frequent or occasional, should look to the condition of the blood. It will be found in most cases that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by building up the blood and feeding the starved nerves and muscles will banish the pains and make you feel better in every other way. How much better it is to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for your blood than to give way to unreasonable alarm about your kidneys. If you really suspect your kidneys any doctor can make a test in ten minutes, that will set your fears at rest, or tell you the worst.

All dealers in medicine sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville.

RECOGNIZE WRECK ONTARIO FINANCE

Premier Ferguson Says Proince Must Start at Bottom to Build Up.

TORONTO, December 1. Canadian Press. — A plain intimation that with or without Dominion government cooperation, Ontario would harness the mighty St. Lawrence for the benefit of its industries and homes, was given by Premier Ferguson last night at a big banquet tendered by the West York Conservative Association to its members in the Legislature, Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health and Labor.

The Premier also announced that the province was to have a scientific research bureau established in connection with the University of Toronto in which would be conducted not only medical research, but industrial research on a scale that would hold out benefits to every commercial undertaking in the province. He mentioned particularly the need for research work in connection with the iron industry, Ontario being dependent on the United States for that commodity, while having huge deposits of iron ore of a grade which had hitherto proved unworkable.

Recognize Wreckage.

"We propose to reveal to you when the treasurer comes to make his financial statement," he said, "exactly what is the appalling condition of the provincial finances.

"We think the people are entitled to know exactly where they stand, and what they must face in the future, if we are to overcome our difficulties and make the progress in this province that we should.

"I think we may just as well recognize the wreckage and begin to build anew."

Speaking as Minister of Education which portfolio he heads in his government, Hon. Mr. Ferguson reiterated his previous declaration of intention of paring educatic al service in Ontario to the fundamentals.

"I am opposed," he said, "to the open door immigration policy that looks to me to be practiced at Ottawa. Whatever they may do, Ontario proposes to protect herself. We do not propose that our labor markets will be over-run or to permit undesirables to enter the province."

GUARD THE BABY AGAINST COLDS

To guard the baby against colds nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a mild laxative that will keep the little one's stomach and bowels working regularly. It is a recognized fact that where the stomach and bowels are in good order that colds will not exist; that the health of the little one will be good and that he will thrive and be happy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Urges Halifax Claim To Fisheries Station.

HALIFAX, Nov. 30.—Speaking at the Liberal rally here to-night when Premier King was the chief speaker, Hon. E. M. McDonald, Minister of National Defence, defended Halifax as the most suitable place for the location of a fisheries experimetnal station for which $70,000 was appropriated at the .ast session of Federal Parliament. The appropriation was for a station to be erected on the Atlantic coast and Hon. Mr. McDonald said he believed Halifax to be the most central place and the easiest of access to those who would benefit most by the station. If the experiment proved successful, he said, other stations could be erected.

Nerves So Bad That She Would Sit and Cry

Mrs. Mary Hocking, Madoc, Ont., writes:—

"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a wonderful lot of good. I suffered from general weakness and was so run down and my heart and nerves were in such bad shape that I would sit down and cry and not know what I was crying about. I also used to have weak spells. Thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, however, I am real well now. I shall always keep a box of the Nerve Food in the house, and recommend them to my friends; they are a wonderful medicine."

(Mr. J. W. Vince, Druggist, of Madoc, Ont., says: "I have sold Mrs. Hocking your Nerve Food, and the medicine has done her much good.")

Baby Dies, Mother Cries And Toys Go Up For Sale

This is the Story Behind Some of the "For Sale" Advertisements That Appear in the Paper — From Grave to Gay in the Classified Ad. Page of a Newspaper.

There is plenty of what might be termed local color in one of the most business-like appearing columns of any newspaper; the classified ad section. Perhaps a small city paper may not abound in the romantic elements that fill the personal columns of big city dailies, where they ask "Joe" or "Ella" or "Beatrice" to "come back and be forgiven," or tell a distant inamorata in a confidential blarant newspaper aside that "all is forgotten", nor are there the heart-throbs that pulse out of the black and white type in the "War Cry", for example, with its heart-searching quests for long-lost sons and daughters with tatooed arms and scars on foreheads to identify them for desolate parents or wives.

But consider the pictures that come to the mind from a perusal of a few days' "lost", and "for sale", and "wanted" columns.

One may conjure up a vision of a fuzzy Persian kitten, lost out in the black night, while a small owner hunts vainly for the wandering pet. Sheltered in out of the way niches of verandah steps, it may be picked up by some kindly passer-by, or fall to the tender mercies of a group of gamins who think a kitten's tail is meant to be pinched and pulled. In the meantime, its owner advertises for it in the daily press.

Then there are sundry dogs, collies and hounds, a Sam or a Betty or a Gyp, gone by unaccounted ways from homes that look for them in vain. One, last month, was last seen near a swamp that may have swallowed it up later, and another is described as being of a "dead grass colour", whatever shade that might be. Here also is a wily little pig that escaped from its cart and an abattoir fate, to make off "unbeknownst", and prolong its grunting life for another while.

And there is a touch of comedy in the advertisement that records the loss of a "bay horse, with halter and long rope shank on him when he broke away from a little boy," Evidently the wise equine knew the strength of its small guardian and made a successful bid for freedom, despite the "halter and long rope shank."

One of the most common of "for sale" advertisements is the one recording the disposal to anyone interested of a baby carriage. There must be many pathetic tales behind these little ads. Why do people sell baby carriages, many of them proclaimed as "almost new?" Is the mother dead who bought the grey or the cream or the ivory carriage, possibly selecting it with a careful eye to color and make, and buying the baby's clothes thereafter with a thought for its outward-bound appearance, framed in its new buggy? Or has the baby gone on to another world, and the heart-broken parents want no reminder of the little one?

Sometimes it looks like the latter, when one see's advertised "a child's bed, go-cart and red sleigh with hood", evidently a complete outfit for some cherished baby. Then there are combinations, like the "folding baby carriage and a five gallon ice cream freezer." Don't they need any more ice cream when the baby has gone away, or has it grown up and taken to buying ice cream cones for itself, and turns up its nose now at the home-made commodity?

Dont' they want any more heat in the house where the baby carriage and the Quebec heater are offered for sale in conjunction?

There are stories behind these things, sometimes tragic, sometimes comical, and they peep out of the classified ads like printers' errors that give a Swedish twist to the wording of another section that offers "potatoes by the jag," and the sample that proclaims a "size 40 black cloth winter 'boat'" as too small for its owner.

Here is an equivocal advertisement that requests the services of a respectable woman to take care of a child that is five months old "during the day," and there is a refreshing simplicity and frankness about the announcement of the gentleman who says he wants a middle-aged woman for a "housekeeper or wife". Probably the choice is up to the lady, who would probably have good judgment if she had arrived at the middle age desired by the insertee.

Another request is for "three thousand dollars for two years" — simply that and nothing more,—a whimsical-minded advertiser says he had a chassis for sale "just the thing for somebody to build a body on"; there is a "large grocer's refrigerator" to be picked up handily, and the loser of a twenty-dollar bill advertises it as being "valuable to owner."

A specific advertisement that is often met with too is the one that says "a horse load of wood", instead of the loose term "a load" that might mean anything from a wheelbarrow to a delivery truck.

A Steeple-Jack Fell From a Hamilton Chimney Top Today

HAMILTON, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Frank Seybold, Chicago, fell 165 feet from the top of a chimney being erected by Semit-Solway Company for the United Gas Fuel Company, to his death this morning.

He had come here from Chicago with his father. They are experts in construction of such work. They were putting the finishing touches on the chimney when part of the scaffold broke.

His body was frightfully mangled in the fall.

institution for a Christmas treat. A sugestion that $15 was the usual grant was rejected by the Mayor, who spoke of the need of the children for a good Christmas treat.

Immediately the Mayor's interruption had been disposed of the discussion of the police department car was resumed, but resolved into several debating parties, when a scarce heard motion to adjourn was declared carried by the chairman.

Fatherly Mood.

The Finance Committee was in a fatherly mood last night, granting five requests for assistance or for maintenance of indigent Peterboro citizens in outside hospitals.

Ald. Crowe suggested calling on the Citizens' Research Institute to investigate the city business departments and put the business on a right basis. "Manufacturers have experts to go through their plants and advise them, and our business is no different in prineiple. But we just take their words for what they do," remarked Ald. Crowe.

Fuel Committee Reports.

Chairman Fife reported to theFuel Committee on the sale of the three cars of coal seized from Miss Sophie Kohen, which were sold by the Sheriff to satisfy a judgment in favor of the city. The proceeds will not wipe out the obligation, but the city has gained some 300 from the transaction.

It was announced that the Sheriff will hold the money for 30 days to enable other creditors to file their claims, when if there are any, they will receive a pro rata share of the proceeds.

One of the cars was purchased by the city, and the operation was considered by the Aldermen present last night as a good arrangement.

The chairman's actions were endorsed by a motion to which Ald. Phelan and Stocker spoke.

There were present at the two committees last night, Mayor W. H.Taylor, Ald. Phelan, Crowe, Stocker, McIntyre, Holloway, Fife and Maher.

Total Cost, $1,096.57.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1. — (United Press).—Stocks closed the week with an outburst of strength, which carried the general level of prices to the highest ground seen on the current upswing. Baldwin, American Can., Steel and other old-time leaders of the industrial class headed this movement, which was based on the outlook for highly constructive developments when the new session of Congress opens.

Wall Street found the time to look for a bullish programme in Washington a refreshing change from the earlier apprehension entertained about the re-opening of Congress. Hence it joined in the bullish demonstration of the Stock Exchange, with the result that the market was buoyant throughout the brief session.

Stocks gained strength towards the close, and the final dealings were characterized by marked buoyancy throughout the list.

New highs on the movements were reached by Studebaker, Corn Products and other leaders, following the strength shown by Steel, Baldwin and American Can. Bullish demonstrations went ahead in numerous specialties, and prices closed at the best levels of the week.

The overnight news was constructive. Judge E. H. Gary's straight from the shoulder speech on the soldiers' bonus, taxation and the foreign debts pleased the Street as much as the Chairman Grace statement on the future of the steel industry.

Secretary Hughes' clear explanation of the foreign policy policy of the United States was expected to have a widespread political influence.

The weekly trade reviews said business was on a solid foundation. The production of Powell Field Crude Oil showed a further falling off, and Standard Oil of New Jersey raised the price of gasoline and kerosene for export ¼ cent a gallon.

Marshall, Field and Co. reported an improvement in dry goods sales. The business reviews of the New York banks were optimistic. Savings bank deposits in the country increased $608,000,000 in the last 12 months. This favorable budget stimulated the demand for stocks and prices were generally higher at the opening.

Standard of New Jersey led the oils, reaching a new high on the movement at 30½. Stocks moved ahead vigorously through the first hour under the leadership of American Can, and Baldwin, which moved into new high ground for the current upswing.

Wall Street was confident that the first measures to come before the new Congress would look toward tax reduction, and this prospect was expected to form the basis for a bullish demonstration in the whole market, simultaneously with the return of the legislative body to Washington. All classes of stocks were stimulated by this outlook, and the general list was buoyant around 11 o'clock. Central Leather issues displayed special strength, reflecting substantial short covering.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—As she was crossing at Elm avenue and North Sherbourne street late yesterday afternoon, a woman about fifty years of age, whose name the police believe to be Bailey, was struck and killed by an automobile.

The woman was unconscious when picked up and taken to the General Hospital, where she died at eight o'clock last night. A receipt found in her purse bore the name Bailey, but no address.

Following an investigation by the police, Sydney Rawlingson, Health street, was arrested on a charge of criminal negligence. Rawlingson, the driver of the car was proceeding east on Elm street when his car struck the woman. Bail of $1000 was accepted by the crown.

MUSIC AT TRINITY CHURCH TOMORROW

Tomorrow, Sunday, night at Trinity church, during the evening service, selections from Gounod will be rendered by the choir, assisted by Mrs. Foster, violinist.

Charles Francois Gounod as a composer ranks among the foremost of the great composers.

One of his greatest works "The Redemption" a sacred trilogy, was dedicated to the late Queen Victoria and on the title page Gounod wrote, "The work of my life."

The chorus, "Unfold Ye Portals Everlasting," taken from "The Redemption" and which will be one of the selections rendered by the choir, shows the depth of his religious feeling and his desire to acclaim the "King of Kings" and "Lord of Lords."

His fellow countrymen to show their admiration for his genius bestowed on him their country's greatest honour by decorating him with the Cross of the Legion of Honour.

He died in 1893 at the age of 75, leaving behind him a name immortalized in the world of music.

The following are the selections that will be rendered during the evening service:

ORGAN PRELUDE—Serenade.
CHORUS—"By Babylon's Wave."
SOLO—"O Divine Redeemer," Mrs. Geo. H. King.
CHORUS—"Unfold Ye Portals Everlasting."
VIOLIN SOLO—"Ava Maria," Mrs. "Come Unto Him," Choir (unaccompanied).
ORGAN POSTLUDE—Marche Romaine.

AN AWFUL ATTACK OF PIMPLES ALL OVER HIS FACE

Pimples breaking out on the face and other parts of the body is a sure sign that the blood is not in proper shape.

While the skin is the object of the attack the real seat of the disease is in the blood on account of the entire circulation being poisoned.

Burdock Blood Bitters quickly and effectually banishes pimples and all other skin diseases as it goes right to the root of the trouble by cleansing and enriching the blood.

Mr. Conad Anderson, Kelfield, Sask., writes:—"A year ago I had an awful attack of pimples. They broke out all over my face and I could not get rid of them in any way. One day a friend told me about your Burdock Blood Bitters and let me have a bottle he had to spare. After using it I noticed a change, so I bought three more bottles, and now I don't know there is such a thing as pimples."

STATES INVITED TO JOIN PARLEY

Committee Will Investigate Germany's Ability to Pay.

PARIS, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press).—An invitation to the United States Government to appoint members of each of two committees which are to investigate the German finances has been forwarded to Washington by Colonel James Logan on behalf of the Reparations Commission.

According to information in reparation circles, the principal reason why the door was left open by the Reparations Commission for the United States Government to be represented on the committee was that the French, British, Italian and Belgian Governments were agreed that United States money would be essential to any reasonable plan for the restoration of the German financial system.

Premier Poincare, it is declared, did not expect Secretary of State Hughes to refuse so quickly the conditions insisted upon by France for the originally proposed inquiry into Germany's capacity to pay reparation. M. Poincare had thought, it is said, that the period of negotiations would take place in which France would be prepared to go much further in the direction of the United States views, providing some concessions were made regarding her debts to Great Britain and the United States.

Eat and Get Thin

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made the revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion; if you are likewise fond of the table, and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward ave., Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) one dollar. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure. He will hand you a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription) one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat steadily and easily. Then continue the treatment until your weight is what you desire. Marmola Prescription Tablets are not only harmless, but really beneficial to the general health. You don't need starvation diet or weakening exercises. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully, and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.

The British Elections

(By WICKHAM STEED)

(By Wickham Steed, former Editor of the London Times, Editor Review of Review, Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act 1923.)

LONDON, Dec. 1.—I had an opportunity today to ascertain certain representative opinion from some of the principal government officials on the probable result of the pending election. Officials believe that Premier Baldwin will secure a slight majority but one insufficient to serve as the basis for a Conservative Cabinet, consequently it is thought that a stopgap administration will be formed by consent probably under Herbert Asquith, on a programme which all parties could temporarily support. An early dissolution is then expected to follow in the hope that the country will give a stable majority to one party.

According to this estimate conservatives would only lose some thirty seats. Other estimates in moderate conservative circles are less optimistic. These put the prospective party losses between fifty and sixty seats. The possibility of an anti-conservative landslide like that of 1906 is now being more seriously entertained. One authority even points out that a loss of ten per cent of the votes polled last year might cost the conservatives 150 seats.

The total electorate is 18,387,000 of which 10,500,000 are males. One hundred thousand voters have been added to the electorate in the past twelve months. It is obvious that the turnover of a small proportion of these huge figures might effect startling changes, considering that Bonar Law's majority of 343 in the house of 615 members was given him by two-fifths of the votes polled in Nov. 1922.

In normal times the quiet sincerity of Premier Baldwin's arguments might make a deeper impression on the country, but in a campaign of three weeks election speeches, which are not printed fully except in newspapers of limited consultation, are not widely read by the masses. The influence of catch-words is therefore relatively greater than during protracted campaigns. The liberals are appearing more and more to strive after what is called the "Housewife Vote" urging that the benefits of Premier Baldwin's remedies are problematic and its drawbacks certain. An increase in the cost of articles of popular consumption would, the liberals contend, precede and outweigh the eventual diminution of unemployment and a rise in wages. Against these arguments the labored explanations of Conservative spokesman seem not of much avail. Expectation of relative, or absolute, conservative defeat is consequently growing stronger.

Reports from the provinces indicate also that labor's propaganda for a capital levy is handicapping labor's candidates in all except the purely working class constituencies. Although discontent at unemployment causes the masses to lend an ear to the extreme doctrines the complication of the Labor appeal by too many abstract economic arguments fails to arouse the enthusiasm of waverers. Liberals, standing midway between the Conservatives and Laborites appear therefore to hold a more favorable position than they have held since 1906 or are likely to hold again in the future. One consideration is influencing many voters who would otherwise support the conservatives as they supported them last year. That is that no conceivable Governent, Conservative, Liberal ,Labor or Coalition, would dare leave the country, economically undefended should the menace of dumping from Germany or through France from stocks accumulated in the Ruhr, become tangible, emergency measures would perforce be taken. On the other hand if the Conservatives are given a mandate to introduce a general tariff it is uncertain how far they would go. Consequently large numbers of moderate electors think that it is probably safer to vote for a Liberal this time and trust to the force of public opinion to compel the Liberal Government to defend British trade and the home market by special measures as Lloyd George defended them by patent acts in 1909 and Asquith by the safeguarding of industries principle during the war, as far as can be judged at this stage public feeling seems therefore tending to run steadily, although not yet decisively, against the Government. Incidents during the next five days may check or accelerate this tendency. But in all quarters accustomed to guage electorate situations great surprise will be felt at a Conservative triumph.

LOCAL SCOTS PAID TRIBUTE TO ST. ANDREW

Most Successful St. Andrew's Day Celebration in the History of the Clans of Peterborough —Rev. M. C. Mackinnon Was Speaker-

CALEDONIAN CLUB

The gathering o' the Clans fae the Land o' the Thistle an' Heather met in the Woodmen of the World hall last evening to honor their patron, Saint Andrew, under the auspices of the Caledonian Club and Ladies' Auxiliary, with Rev. M. C. Mackinnon as the principal speaker.

Proud of Ancestors

"I deem it a great pleasure," Mr. Mackinnon said, "to address this audience on St. Andrew, and as a Scot I am proud to say that I cannot find anything else in my veins but that nationality. In talking with a gentleman this evening about the Scots, he remarked that he found that there was a space between him now and the auld country but the speaker stated that it could not be, "for the place where I came from you will find the decendants of the early Scots of one hundred years ago still travel from 30 to 40 miles to attend the annual Burns supper.

Tradition says that St. Andrew was crucified upon a cross which is represented in St. Andrew's flag. His remains were brought to Fifeshire, Scotland, in 368, and the Church of St. Regulus is a link which is of a very great historic value in the city of St. Andrew's, Scotland.

Looking over various books and the Book of Books, I find that St. Andrew was of an inquiring mind, thirsting for knowledge and truth which no doubt represent the character of the Scot.

When you look over the names of the pupils in the Collegiate, you find many Scots who attained prominence in education, but of late years we find that the Scotch boys and lassies are going straight to the Universities now to get into professional life. As a pioneer and as first missionary you find that St. Andrew has that honor. It is an old saying that you find the Scotsman in every clime and it is said, 'That when the North Pole is found, you will find a Scotsman sitting on the top of it.'

Scotch Trader and Arab Sheik

An Englishman was in the habit of abusing the Scots in the East. So one day a Turkish officer came up to another and said: "De ye ken me? I'm fae Perth, tae." So the Englishman stood aghast as he listened. The Turkish officer replied: "I'll tell ye, what, ma man, gur ye daur loose ye're tongue upon my country like that. I'll gie ye a clout on the lug that'll make it tingle fae this till Hallowe'en!" Why, say good man, I thought you were a Turk!" "An' sae I am a Turk, the noo, ma braw chiel," said the angry Glasgow muscular man "but my fathers auld leather breeks ne'er traveled further than just fae Glasea tae Greenock and back again, but when I gang back hame, as I'll dae noo lang, i its God's will—I jist be Wully Forbes, son o' auld Sandy Forbes o' the Gorbels, for a' that."

In almost every country you will find the Scot in the foremost positions in the world. The British Parliament had four prominent Scotsmen as Premiers—Lord Roseberry, Sir Arthur Balfour, Sir Campbell Bannerman and Bonar Law. Even in the Church of England, south of the Scottish border, you find the Scot has secured the highest pinacle in recent times, both the English Archbishops have been Scotsmen—Ronald Davidson and Gordon Lang. A story is told to illustrate the natural tendency of the Scotsman to rise to the top. A native was asked after a visit to the South: "And what did ye think of the English?" "Man," he replied, "I did na see ony o' them—my business was wi' the heads o' the departments only."

In conclusion, the speaker referred to St. Andrew as a fit patron to represent the Scot because of his desire for knowledge, truthfulness and consciousness. What we desire in this Dominion is the Scot from the old land with the true Scottish sentiment, to help us build up this great land of ours. St. Andrew revered God above all other things just like the Scot."

The President

The President of the Club, Mr. Robt. French, opening remarks were: "We have gathered together to commemorate the anniversary of Scotland's Patron Saint, St. Andrew. The large number present this evening, many of them new comers, emphasize the fact that this event has become an established custom among the Peterboro Scots. The world over, this day, is being observed by everyone Scotch or sentimentally Scotch, the reason being that St. Andrew has so bound himself up in Scotch tradition that to neglect observance of some kind is out of the question entirely. The strong reason, in my opinion, why this celebration should take place, is because of what the St. Andrew's cross means to Scotland. When the Romans invaded Britain, if you will recall, a landing could never have been effected had it not been for their allegiance to their flag or standard. The same allegiance was shown by our forebearers for the Cross of St. Andrew in the year 1314 when the inspiration derived therefrom enabled them to establish their absolute freedom. In conclusion, I consider it the duty of everyone, with any attachment to Scotland, to pay tribute to this glorious tradition."

The Twa Countries

"The Twa Countries" was responded to by G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P. in his usual manner which brought forth interesting facts that this country had in store great industrial development and needed the Scots from the Auld Country.

"Our City" was proposed by Mrs. McColl, who thanked the Scots for the past hospitality in Scotch gatherings and Mayor Taylor responded: "I wish to thank you for your kind invitation to be present this evening and to join with you in celebrating the day set apart in honour of Scotland's patron saint," the Mayor said. "I have some Scotch in me. Please do not misunderstand that: I mean that I have Scotch blood in my veins, and I am proud of it. The part that Scotsmen have taken in every quarter of the globe in business and politics is so well known, not only to the sons of the land of the heather, but to all others as well, that to mention it is to call attention to something that is familiar to all.

Two Scots have held the position of Mayor of this City which I have the honour now to hold, and besides, these Scots other Scotsmen have filled the chair on the dias in the City Council Chamber. My immediate predecessor, Mr. A. A. McIntyre, looks across the ocean to Caledonia as the home of his ancestors. St. Andrew is an appropriate patron saint for Caledonians. We know that he was cautious and that he had a keen eye for the welfare of his brother, two admirable characteristics of true Scotchmen. The sons of Scotland are cautious, but they are progressive, and these two traits have carried them to foremost positions in the world's affairs. They are deeply interested in the welfare of their brothers of the same clan and country, but their generosity and benevolence is by no means confined to Scotchmen and reaches out to all benevolent enterprises that are for the benefit of the brotherhood of man.

It is also a characteristic of Scotsmen that they are ready to assist in the advancement of the community in which they reside. You have identified yourselves with Peterborough, and have helped and are assisting in its progress and in the efforts made to promote its interests. That interest I know will continue, and that Peterborough may count on you at all times to do your part or more than your part in making our city bigger and better."

Other toasts were "Caledonian Club" by A. Dick; "To Absent Ones" by R. Hendry, and "The Lassies" by J. Grierson.

From All Parts of Scotland

While travelling around amongst the folks frae a' airts o' Auld Scotia, you could hear the different dialects touched in the twang of the Scots frae the Solway tae John o' Groats, whose speakers carried a great admiration for their native land and the Scot character which they adored into the land of their adoption—Canada—thereby becoming an asset to the country in every aspect.

Excellent Programme

G. Reid sang "Hail Columbia, Yesterday" and "My Old Shako." Jack Smith, "Land of Hope and Glory" and "To Absent Ones"; Miss Jean Pattison rendered sweetly 'Auld Scotch Songs" and "Lea Rig." Robt. Hendry sang in comic fashion "Bells, the Belle o' Dunoon" and "Jock McDade." As a duet Mrs. R. French and Mr. Alex. Clark interpreted "Auld Crucit Bawlee" beautifully.

Scotch character readings by Mrs. J. Grierson was very appropriate and was amusingly interesting. The titbit of the evening was the character singing by the well known Scotsman J. Smith and R. Hendry in "Twa Nips o' Scotch."

Piper Alex. Mullen played "Athole Highlander's March to Loch Katrine," as the company took their places.

"At the sma' 'our" the company sung the customary "Auld Lang Syne."

A Characteristic Touch

Excellent purveying was provided by the ladies of the club, who deserve credit for a' the guid things that they had on the tables which were backed up wi' halesome fairin' an' a' the extras. The Scotch short bread alang wi' auld fashioned cakes carried upon each a St. Andrew's Cross which gave the scene a real characteristic touch for the occasion. Each table was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, ferns, heather, etc. The hall was profusely decorated with the St. Andrew's and Union Jack flags, and small sprigs of heather mixed in the furls of the banners.

Good Orchestra

The Ladies' Auxiliary and Club Executive are to be complimented upon such an successful function, in fact, it has been considered the "best yin yet" in local Scots history. The "Caledonia Orchestra" composed of Messrs. Dawson (piano), Anderson (violin), Japp, Comet and Dunlop (drums), played numerous pieces.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Every housekeeper finds a great deal of use for a fancy tray, and the most useful are those with a decorative value as well as a utilitarian none.

Perhaps the cheapest way to assemble one is to buy an inexpensive picture in a plain wooden frame. Then remove the picture and insert in its place a decorative piece of wall paper. Then paint the frame to match the high tone of the paper and add a couple of brass handles, and you have a distinctive gift.

If you use a paper with a flashy, colorful design, it will make a nice spot of color in the dining room when place against the wall.

ARE YOU SUFFERING FROM SICK HEADACHE?

People who are suffering from constipation, billiousness or sick headache can obtain speedy relief by taking one or two of Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets at bed time.

These tablets are recommended by well known and reliable druggists and if they fail to do what we claim for them, return the bottle and your dealer will refund the money.

Mr. W. J. Kent, Druggist, says: "We recommend Dr. Norvall's Stomach and Tonic Tablets because we consider it our duty to recommend what will give the best results."

Avoid Operations For Appendicitis by Bathing Internally with Warm Water.

Hundreds of operations for appendicitis have been avoided by the "J.B.L. Cascade."

These letters from among many in our possession should convince you that Internal Bathing brings positive results. Mr. James McLaughlin, 91 Evanston St., Winnipeg, writes: "I bought a 'J.B.L. Cascade' for the cure of a bad case of appendicitis. My doctors told me I must have an operation at once. I had spent more than $50 in doctors' bills, but the Cascade completely removed, in a few days, every trace of soreness and pain. I eat and sleep well now, have regained my former weight, and am now in perfect health."

A Mother from R.R. No. 1, Leamington, Ont., writes: "About two weeks ago our eldest son took sick with cramps in the bowels so bad he could not move. Our doctor gave him hypodermic injections and ordered him to the hospital to be operated on at once. Before doing so, however, I induced him to use the 'J.B.L. Cascade,' and in less than a week he was up and around, and has been well ever since. It also cured me of severe headaches and constipation. I cannot praise the Cascade enough. It certainly is a wonderful invention."

If you have constipation, headaches, appendicitis, or feel languid and not just right, don't drug yourself, bathe internally. The "J.B.L. Cascade" is being shown and explained at Warne Drug Store.

STRIKING LECTURE BY H. J. MOORE

On Plant Breeding and the Improvement and Value of Trial Pots.

A meeting of the Peterboro Horticultural Society was held last evening in the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. T. E. Bradburn presided. The feature of the evening was a striking address on plant breeding and the improvement and value of trial pots given by H. J. Moore of the Guelph Agricultural college. Mr. Moore stated that the improvement of plants and fruits would only be obtained by the crossing of sections. Many amateur and professionals who are interested in this line of work have tried and proved many of these experiments. Mr. Moore stated that peaches could be grown in Peterboro and the surrounding district if the plant was crossed with a later flowering tree so that the frost would not freeze the buds in the spring. Right here is the richest soil in America. When the people show the government they are interested in the horticultural movement it will give the society a larger grant and will take steps to help carry on the work. He said that if we had not a knowledge of plant life we were not educated in horticulture and that there were very few people who are up in this line. It should be taught in all the schools.

Crossing Plants

To cross plants or fruits, two plants of the same species must be used such as two roses of different kinds and a white rose and a red rose. In plants there is a male and female the same as in human beings. When you want to cross two plants you will have to take the polin of the male flower and put it on the stigma of the female flower, then cover the flower over with a paper bag so as to keep any other polin off the plant.

There is a law that governs all plant life and it was said by Mr. Moore to be one of the greatest discoveries ever made. The man with a knowledge of this book known as Mendal's Law, can do these experiments with success every time. If you take a red flower and a white plant and cross them the first generation will be all red or pink but there will be no white flowers. The second generation will produce seventy five per cent red flowers and twenty-five per cent white ones. You can also produce tallness and dwarfness by crossing a tall flower and a short one. By the study of Mendal's Law the Guelph Agricultural School have succeeded in finding a lima bean that will grow over two hundred miles further north than before it was crossed. If you take two Begonias of same size and weight of different the colors and cross them the generation will be twenty-five per cent larger than before. The school is now trying the same method with different grains and if they succeed it will mean they will be able to produce a larger crop.

After the lecture, lantern slides were shown of the many different parts of plants and the ways of crossing plants. Mr. Moore described the different slides.

WET WEATHER HAS MOVED DOWN EAST

Weather is Cold From Manitoba West and Mild East.

TORONTO, Dec 1.—The depression which was centred in Michigan yesterday has passed to New Brunswick and rain is falling in the Maritime provinces. The pressure is now highest over great lakes and north west states, while it is low over the Missouri Valley.

DOCTORS FIND MISTAKE AFTER ELEVEN YEARS

Railroader, Retired for Heart Trouble, Restored to Duty With Seniority

LEWISTOWN, Dec. 1.—J. N. Ernest suffered an attack of vertigo on November 12, 1921, while employed on the shifter crew in the Harrisburg depot of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The physicians, surgeons and medical examiners all said "valvular heart trouble" and forbid his employment on the railroad.

In the last eleven years he has performed all kinds of work, from janitor at the public school buildings to the heaviest kind of manual labor in the steel and iron mills without inconvenience. About ten days ago he was examined by a specialist, who shook his head and insisted on an X-ray being taken.

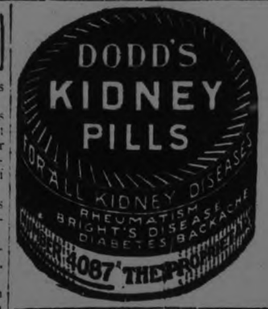
Just what he found has been covered by medical courtesy, but Ernest has been ordered back to his duties in the train service after an absence of eleven years and one month. His seniority rights have been preserved and he finds himself advanced to conductor.

SAYS WOMEN ATHLETES ADD LITTLE LONGEVITY.

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 1.—"Modern woman's increased physical activity is as yet but a small factor in prolonging the span of life," said Dr. R. O. Moody, professor of anatomy at the University of California, commenting on a statement recently given out by the American College of Surgeons, in which modern women were given a large share of credit for lengthening human life.

In time, according to Dr. Moody, the woman of to-day will be a potent factor.

Efforts by the medical profession and child welfare organizations to decrease infant mortality is, in Dr. Moody's opinion, the most important influence at present toward longevity.



IS COVELESKIE THROUGH?

This Speaker is not banking very strongly on Coveleskie for 1924. The star spitball pitcher of the Cleveland Indians was out the final six weeks of last season with what the doctors diagnosed as rheumatism. It is a singular fact that most spitball pitchers have had similar trouble with their arms when nearing the end of their career, among them Jack Chesbro and Ed. Walsh, two of the greatest in the history of the game.

REVIEW OF SOCCER SEASON

Retrospect of Five Months' Activities Among the Peterboro Clubs—Planted Football Seed in the Schools and Developed the Junior Club.

The completion of the nineteen hundred and twenty-three soccer season has been the best in the annals of the local association which has been fortunate in having such a capable legislator in the person of Jack Cairns as president, also to receive able assistance from the executive.

Started with a Deficit.

The present executive started the year with a very small balance to their credit, but found out after two months' business that they had a deficit when the small accounts of the 1922 season were rendered to the secretary. Overcoming the numerous obstacles arising from various sources they opened the season on April 28th and finished on Sept. 27th in the league; intermingled were the cup-tie games for the various trophies donated to the P. and D. F. A., by G. N. Gordon, M.P., Rev. Father Phelan, E. A. Peck and White Sports and Athletic Co., Ltd. The G.W.V.A. also donated a shield to be played for on behalf of injured players, but was not carried into operation.

Winners of Trophies.

The International game was won by Scotland; the G. N. Gordon Cup and League Championship (White's Sports and Athletic Co., Cup) was won by the G.W.V.A.; the Clarke Shield (runners-up in the league) and Phelan Cup, was won by the Thistles; the Peck Cup was won by the Canadian Woollens; Quakers and C. P. C. were the other teams; Central School Boys won the local school championship for the Alex. Kay Challenge Cup.

Two Knights of the Whistle.

A universal cry in every organization is good referees and in this respect the local association had only three registered referees, thereby throwing a lot of hard work upon Jack Clark and J. C. Russell, who refereed most of the games; also H. M. Niven, one of Canada's principal arbitrators in soccer, giving his services when so requested. A great amount of praise is due these gentlemen for the courteous and sportsmanlike attitude in giving fair decisions at all times when otherwise they were receiving everything but "honey" from the spectators. It is a difficult position to handle and those fans who criticize the referee should have a try at it themselves and see if they make good.

Excellent Legislator.

The fans outside the jurisdiction of the Executive should realize that they have an excellent legislator in this city—Fred Sutcliffe. He has attended all the O.F.A. meetings in Toronto and Hamilton on behalf of P. and D.F.A. at his own financial expense, which ultimately saved money to the Association, in fact, it would require a book to write what he has done for the sake of clean and healthy sport, along with broad minded decisions in justice to all teams. He is a great school boy soccer enthusiast.

"Don't Knock—Boost."

Early in the season, W. Thompson left the city, and his place was filled by W. Cooke, a past president, and an excellent legislator, with an opinion of his own when the pernicious question arises. The president, Jack Cairns, handled many a breezy meeting which would not be well to record, in a very precise manner, and was given excellent service by W. G. Nicholls as secretary-treasurer. Fred Sutcliffe, was Peterboro's O.F.A. representative. Other officers were S. Whatley, vice-presidents; R. Gilmour, V. Stewart, J. Clark, A. Laws and W. Cooke directors; club representatives, J. Shaw, C.P.C.; J. Huron, Quakers. George Coleman, G. W.V.A.; George Low, Thistles; and Jack Chambers, Woollens. Every legislator has given his best in the interest of the game—don't knock—boost—critic.

Organized Football.

The P. and D.F.A. is the local organized soccer body and intend next year to have a Senior, Junior, Juvenile and School Boy Executive as the Board of Directors. This has been the first year that the school boys have taken to the game, which received a hearty welcome from the School's Athletic Association, who did everything to make the Alex. Kay competition a success. The honour of being the first winners of the school championship went to Central School with King George Schoolboys runners-up.

Junior Cup Winners.

In Junior circles, the Delaval, winners of the League two years in succession, received the Louis Yeotes Cup, and C.P.C. Mayor Taylor's challenge Cup. In the beginning of the year the C.G.E. and the Canadian Woollens had a Junior team but dropped out through the players jumping to the other teams. It is up to the Junior Association to become affiliated to the parent body, and receive organized assistance although Mr. Willis, president of the Junior Executive, has accomplished a task which many would have evaded and deserves credit from soccer fans. The Senior Association expect co-operation from the Junior Association so as they may all become one good solid organization.

General Meeting.

The general meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms on Monday evening, January 7th, at 8 p.m. Every team should forward their annual entry fee of $2.00 to the secretary before the meeting when only club representatives, club captains and club secretaries shall have a vote at the general meeting.

ESKIMOS IN OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.— Edmonton Eskimos, champions of western Canada, and runners-up to the Ottawas last March for the Stanley Cup, arrived in the capital to-day for their series against the Ottawas which opens here Saturday night.

The first thing the great Joe Simpson did on his arrival in the capital was to look up a doctor to have several stitches taken out of his face, which was painfully cut in the final game against Regina Monday night. The team held a light practice at the Auditorium from 11 to 12 to-day.

30 MEN TURN OUT FOR LACROSSE AT PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N.J., Dec. 1.—An innovation in Princeton athletics made its appearance here when Coach Ainies, of the University soccer and lacrosse teams, called out lacrosse candidates and held the first indoor practise for this sport. Some thirty experienced men reported and will work out in the gymnasium this winter as a preliminary to the spring season.

RICKARD MATCHING FIRPO AND WILLS

Declines to Reveal Details of Negotiations--Progress Made.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—Tex Rickard to-day declined to reveal details of negotiations he has had under way for some time to match Harry Wills negro heavyweight, and Luis Firpo, but indicated that some progress toward arranging the bout had been made.

Rickard admitted receiving word from Firpo in which the latter suggested May 5, as a satisfactory date for holding the fight. The promoter however, said he had no definite date in mind, although he said some time about May 1. would be desirable.

Rickard apparently has definitely given up a proposal to stage the bout in the Argentine, particularly as Wills is opposed to meeting Firpo under contract to fight Wills, but so far the negro and his manager, Paddy Mullins, have steadily refused to accept the promoter's terms.

SPRINTER INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Candidate For the U. S. Olympic Team May Not Run Again.

NEW YORK, November 30. — Loren Murchison, crack sprinter of the Newark, N.J., Athletic Club, and holder of the United States national 100 and 220 yard dash titles, may be froced to retire permanently from the cinder path through serious injuries to his back, sustained in an automobile accident at Philadelphia recently, it became known to-day.

Murchison, who came to New York to-day to undergo examination and treatment by specialists, did not reveal the details of the accident, but admitted that he had strained several back ligaments and dislocated a vertebra. He expressed the fear that the injuries would force his definite retirement.

Murchison was ranked as a leading candidate for the United States Olympic Team, which will invade Paris next summer.

HOCKEY

LINDSAY UNDER WAY

Art Carew has been appointed manager of Lindsay's intermediate hockey team with N. McClory assistant and Dr. Lyons secretary-treasurer. At the meeting this week different methods of training and suitable training quarters for the team were discussed at length. There was a difference of opinion regarding the advantages of outdoor running and basketball or getting the men in shape.

In the matter of financing the team, it was felt that $150 should cover the initial outlay for uniforms and other necessary equipment to begin the season. Several of those present were delegated to canvas for subscriptions.

After arranging for a training run, starting this evening at 7.15 from in front of the rink on Lindsay street, the meeting adourned.

The following were among those present: E. Reeves, M. Hamilton, K. G. Bulford, C. Workman, J. Laidlaw, W Killen, N. McClory, L. Davis, H. Wilford.

Nineteen Out

Walter Jackson had 19 junior candidates out at the Y.M.C.A. last night and stiffened up the work for the squad. The ban has declared on "fags" and those players who are serious in their hopes to make the team are expected to make this little sacrifice for their own good and to help them into shape.

IT WAS HIS CHIN THAT HURT

BY JOE WILLIAMS.

Jimmy Bronson, who handled the ring affairs of Bob Martin, champion of the soldier boy fighters, and a pretty fair heavyweight, as heavyweights went, is no dumbbell. Jimmy is a modernist and is equipped with a keen mind.

In his own way he is somewhat of a psychologist.

Once in Cleveland in a fight between Martin and another soldier, Sergt. Ray Smith, he tried psychology stuff on his protege with—well, not with very flattering success.

Early in the fight the noble sergeant, who was figured to be easy picking, clouted the A.E.F. champion on the button and sent him to the canvas. It was the first time Martin had ever been knocked down.

Bronson wasn't sure how the young man would react to such violent punishment. Would the knockdown frighten him into utter loss of form? Bronson thought hurriedly and before the gong sounded ending the round he had resolved upon a swell line of mental encouragement.

"Say, you are a big clumsy bimbo!" shouted Bronson when Martin came back to his corner. "Why don't you watch your feet. You tripped right over them in that round. Made you look bad. Made you look as if you had been knocked down."

Flattered by his own cleverness this pugilistic professor of psychology stepped backward several paces to observe the effect of his words. He was not compelled to wait long.

"Well, if I tripped over my feet, who put them under my chin, that's what I want to know," answered the practical and extremely logical Mr. Martin.

ELECTION HAS MANY CANUCKS

Canadians Are Warching the Old Country Fight With Interest.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (By Canadian Press).—To the many Canadians who are watching the present political battle in the United Kingdom with more than ordinary interest, both because of the realignment of political parties and of the tariff issue, which affects the Dominion owing to the Baldwin Government's promise of the extension of the preference, there is an added interest in the fact that among the candidates for parliament are several Canadians. These include men whose names are known throughout the Dominion. Some of them have been in British public life for some time and others are comparative newcomers in the arena of party strife.

Sir Hamar Greenwood is perhaps the the outstanding Canadian in the contest. He was Liberal member of the British House of Commons for York from 1906 to 1910, and for Sunderland from 1910 to 1922. He was defeated in Sunderland in the last general election but is again the Liberal candidate in that constituency. Sir Hamar, upon whom a baronetcy was conferred in 1915, is an English Privy Councillor and also an Irish Privy Councillor. He was Chief Secretary for Ireland in the last phase of the unsettled Irish situation prior to the establishment of the Irish Free State. He has been Under-Secretary of State for Home Affairs and Secretary of the Overseas Trade Department. He is a barrister and bencher of Gray's Inn and a barrister of New Brunswick. An ex-newspaper man, and of a very charming personality, he has a host of friends throughout Canada.

Lt.-Col. Walter Grant Morden is another Canadian of prominence in the election. A Conservative in politics, he has represented the Brentford and Chiswick division of Middlesex since 1918 and is again a candidate for that constituency. As in the general election of 1922, he is opposed by Mrs. Oliver Strachey, an Independent candidate. Col. Morden is noted as a promoter of big enterprises and a financier. He is the founder of the Canada Steamship Lines, Limited, and the British Empire Steel Corporation, Ltd. He founded the British Commonwealth Union.

Captain P. Drummond MacDonald, barrister of the Inner Temple, London, a relative of the late Sir John A. MacDonald, is a Canadian contesting the Isle of Wight in the Conservative interest against Major-Gen. J. E. B. Seeley, Liberal, who commanded the Canadian Cavalry Brigade during the early years of the war. He was in succession, Under-Secretary of State for Air and President of the Air Council. Under-Secretary to the Minister of Munitions and Deputy Minister of Munitions. General Seeley for a time represented the Isle of Wight and then Ilkeston division of Derbyshire, but was defeated last election.

Lt.-Col. Maurice Alexander, C.M.G., M.P., formerly of Montreal, a barrister of the Middle Temple with a distinguished war record, is seeking re-election as a Liberal in Southeast Southwark. Col. Alexander, a member of the law firm of Davidson, Wainwright, Alexander & Elder, Montreal, served in the war from 1914 to 1917 with the Canadian Expeditionary Force. He was a member of the Pensions Board in 1916 and was Judge Advocate-General in 1917. During the war he was mentioned in despatches. He was in the Overseas Department of the Foreign Office in 1918 and was acting Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy at Washington, 1919-1920.

Lt.-Col. Andrew Hamilton Gault, formerly of Montreal, who organized, equipped and commanded the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and won distinction in the war during which he was severely wounded and was mentioned in despatches, is standing as the Conservative candidate in the Taunton Division of Somersetshire in opposition to the Liberal member, J. Hope Simpson, who won the seat last year from Sir Arthur Griffith-Goscawen, then Minister of Agriculture. Hamilton Gault, as President of Gault Bros. Company, Montreal, and a director in several Canadian industries, was widely known in a business way before the war. Col. Gault was born in England.

Rt. Hon. Thomas James McNamara, former Minister of Labor and former Financial Secretary to the Admiralty, is a native of Montreal and has been prominent in public affairs in England for many years. He was returned for Northwest Camberwell in 1922 as a National-Liberal, and is now the Liberal candidate for the riding. As far back as 1876 he was a school teacher in England, and in 1896 he was President of the National Union of Teachers. He has been a voluminous writer on social questions and has published a book on "Tariff Reform and the Working Man."

A. W. Haycock, the Labor candidate in Winchester, is a son of Joseph Haycock, of Adolphustown, Ont., leader of the Patrons of Industry when that organization was fighting to make itself felt politically in Ontario. The son, like his one-time noted father, seems not to be at all timid in attempting a big thing in the way of politics. He is standing for Labor in a Conservative and Cathedral city, Winchester, where his chances of success at the polls are regarded as almost hopeless.

Major John Elsdale Molson, M.D., Coalition-Unionist member of the House of Commons for Gainsborough since 1918, where he is offering himself for re-election with Conservative interest, is a son of the late Samuel Elsdale Molson, Montreal. Major Molson's first entrance intoa British election was in 1910, when he contested Northeast Bethnal Green. He served with distinction as a medical officer in the war.

Captain John Henry Thorpe, Coalition-Unionist member for the Rusholme division of Manchester since 1919, is a native of Cork, Ireland, but is known to many Canadians. A barrister by profession, he obtained a commission in the Territorials in the early months of the war, and after being wounded severely was seconded to the Canadian Corps as Court Martial Officer, serving until after the Armistice. He married a daughter of "Empire Jack," Major Sir John Norton-Griffiths.

FOOTBALL'S BIGGEST THRILLS

BY W. S. CANNELL
Eastern Football Expert

The greatest individual play I have ever seen, my biggest thrill, occurred in the Dartmouth-Brown game of 1919 at Fenway Park in Boston.

Dartmouth was favored to win because of a much better preliminary season's record. Dartmouth scored in the second period but as the touchdown was made in the extreme corner of the end zone it was necessary to punt out. The kick was poor and the attempt failed.

The score remained 6 to 0 in favor of Dartmouth with only a few minutes to play. Dartmouth at this stage attempted a punt on her own 40-yard line. Johnson, Brown guard, broke through and blocked the kick. The ball traveled about two yards in the air after leaving the kicker's foot.

Johnson received the ball with the full force of Jim Robertson's kick behind it, yet managed to hold the ball and ran 35 yards for a touchdown.

The remarkable thing, of course, was that Johnson should have been able to hold the ball. The ball was kicked by one of the best punters ever developed in the east, while Johnson, in order to block the punt, had to break through "Swede" Youngstrom, who made the All-America for his ability to break through and block kicks.

In all my football experience as a player and official I hve never seen a man before or since block a punt and then hold the ball as it is kicked against his body and hands. The ball is invariably fumbled, the player being content to block the kick and then seek to regain possession of the ball.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" ORIGINAL PRODUCTION HERE AT ROYAL MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY.

David W. Griffith's epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," a United Artists release, following its record-breaking return to New York, will be seen in one of its original productions at the Royal Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

This work from the nature of the new art it established has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of a decade and after being away for several years it was recently presented for a special engagement at the enormous Capitol Theatre and played to over 150,000 people in two weeks.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of a nation re-born through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional plays, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes and covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the primal cause of the War; Lincoln's call for troops to subdue the Southern States; the ball on the eve of Bull Run, and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march and the awful ordeal of the Siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appottamox; the assassination of the Great President; the harsh radical policy toward the stricken South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan and the overthrow of the carpet-bagger regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendships between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stoneman's of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine.

Mr. Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out-of-doors, where Nature painted the backgrounds and army men directed the battle campaign. The notable indoor scenes, like Ford's theatre on the night of the Lincoln tragedy, the peace at appomattox, and the South Carolina Legislature of 1870, are exact facsimiles of the originals. Altogether, it is the first time in art-production that History in the large has been presented in living pictures. To do this many times the amount of the time, energy and expense usually devoted to amusement enterprises had to be used. Eighteen thousand people and 3,000 horses appear in the picture, whic cost approximately $500,000 to produce.

Of equal importance to the scenes is the music that interprets them. It consists of an elaborate symphonic score arranged after Griffith's suggestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters. Now grave, now gay; now sounding the loud diapason of War, again sweetly harmonizing love's sighs and rhapsodies; anon bringing back the old plantation melodies, or the crash of riot and rapine, or the welcome Ku Klux Klan call that fell so gratefully on the ear of Southern whites sorely oppressed by the "servants in the Master's hall"—it fits the changing scenes of the story like a flowing, beautiful garment. The marriage of this music to the film best of all entitled the producer to his well-earned laurels of having created a new art.

Among the principals in the cast are Henry B. Walthall, the disginguished Alabama actor whose family is historically connected with the story, in the role of the Clansman; Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman; Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper as Flora and Margaret; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Joseph Henabery, Howard Gaye and Donald Crips as Lincoln, Lee and Grant, respectively; George Seigmann as the mulatto Lieutenant-Colonel of South Carolina; Walter Long as the renegade negro, Gus; Raoul Walsh as John Wilkes Booth; Mary Alden as the octoroon housekeeper, Lydia; John McGlynn and Ernest Campbell as the good negroes, Nelse and Jake; Elmer Clifton and Robert Harron as the young soldiers; QSpottiswoode Aitken and Josephine rowell as Dr. and Mrs. Cameron, and many others.

AT THE GRAND.

THE AIMS AND PRINCIPLES OF THE CULTURAL VAUDEVILLE GUILD.

The incentive which actuated and made the creation of this organization possible having been the harmonious and friendly spirit existing among the members of this circle for an extended period of seven months playing one of the biggest circuits in the country it is not entirely of a commercial enterprise; but chiefly of a moral association, aiming ultimately to make a reality, the long cherished ambition of its founder, Tameo Kajiyama, to lay the foundation for a new form of entertainment more in keeping with the progress of time.

The Cultural Vaudeville Circle is yet in its earliest infancy, being, therefore, in its present form merely the forerunner of what it is aspiring to be, an international institution.

The success of the principle of this circle depends, on one hand, upon the unflinching efforts and the determination of its members to "carry on," irrespective of disappointments, hardships, trials and tributions which usually accompany an undertaking of this kind, and, on the other, the consideration, approval and support of the general public.

Already each member of this circle has contributed, financially, to the limit of his or her capacity, and has pledged and is ready at all times to exert his or her effort, artistic and otherwise, for the accomplishment of the aim of this organization. Each and every member is willing and anxious to give his or her very best.

And, for the present, all that the members of the circle ask of the public is to come and inspect and if their endeavors meet with approval, to give them encouragement and support.

It is the contention of the founder of the Cultural Vaudeville Circle, Tameo Kajiyama, that the natural tendency of the human mind is to admire and take delight in culture, refinement and the things elevating, ennobling and inspiring even in matter of amusement. He believes that the reason why vulgarity and coarseness have been used for entertaining purposes in the past, was that those who were responsible for the production of theatrical plays misunderstood the psychology of the better side of human nature, and accordingly simply sought to please the physical sense of their audiences and neglected to consider the mental side of life, which, in reality, is the foundation of thoughts and conscience.

"BRINGING UP FATHER ON BROADWAY."

Jiggs Mahoney, Maggie, Dinty Moore, and the other well-known characters of George McManus' cartoon strip are visiting the Grand just now in a new version of "Bringing Up Father on Broadway, opening in their engagement last night.

Jiggs is on Broadway for a while, then on the high seas, later on in Hawaii, and always, as usual, in trouble, but just as inevitably causing gales of laughter whenever he is on the stage.

The part of "Father" is exceedingly well done last night by James K. Wesley, who has a convincing brogue and a make-up that is Jiggs to the life. Emma Weston did equally as well as Maggie, and Ed. J. Morris, who has been seen here before in the part was an adequate Dinty Moore. Bessie Leonard, in the soubrette part, was of great assistance, not only in the action of the comedy, but in the specialties, and Harry Culver as Jimmy proved a hard-working juvenile.

There are a lot of laughs in "Bringing Up Father," and a wealth of good special numbers as well. The honours in this latter department were carried off by Frank Kirk, whose musical act was novel and clever. His imitation of a circus calliope brought down the house. Emma Weston also "stopped the show" with her specialty, a melange of good singing and entertaining "kidding," in which she did not spare herself. Evelyn Butler sang nicely. Ed. Morris scored in "That Old Gang of Mine," and other song numbers were well received.

The chorus was lively and well dressed, doing especially good work in "The March of the Wooden Soldiers."

"Bringing Up Father on Broadway" will be seen again at the Grand to-night, and Jiggs expects to meet many of his friends.

AT THE CAPITOL.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS AT CAPITOL, MONDAY

Richard Barthelmess, whose forthcoming appearance in a romance role in John S. Robertson's production, "The Fighting Blade," at the Capitol, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is being eagerly anticipated by those who have come to admire this artist for his sterling performances in "Tol'able David" and "The Bright Shawl," is highly pleased that a taste for romantic photoplays has been developed by the public. The success of historical romance has not only widened the circle of the screen's devotees, but is an incentive for greater versatility and broadening of the screen actor, in the opinion of the young star.

In "The Fighting Blade," Barthelmess essays the role of a swashbuckling soldier of fortune in the days of Oliver Cromwell. In view of his past roles, this is a far cry from what he has been doing. Concerning it, Barthelmess says: "I love the type of young American I have been playing, but I rather welcome the opportunity to essay a wider variety of roles, for one of the evils of the screen is that it casts its players into types and, it seems, forever keeps them there, if they achieve any measure of success in that type. And it seems to me that the public tires of its type players.

"The players themselves are not always to blame for the condition. Producers are too prone to cast a player in a similar role to one previously played successfully; and so, it goes until it would seem, the player had capacity for naught but the one thing. That is something I am seeking to avoid. John Barrymore has had wide variety in his screen roles—as he had wide variety in his stage parts. That is why Barrymore's art is versatile. I want to be able to play any kind of part; I do not want to play the same kind of parts over and over again."

Mr. Barthelmess goes many leagues into romance in "The Fighting Blade," with trusty sword ever ready to fight or frolic, and those woh have been privileged to preview the picture declare that he has achieved nothing less than a triumph.

MRS. WALLACE REID COMING TO CAPITOL IN "HUMAN WRECKAGE."

GOOD GAMES WERE PLAYED AT THE "Y"

A Fair Crowd Turned Out to See the Soft Ball Games Last Evening.

A fair crowd turned out to see the basket ball game at the Y.W.C.A. Gymnasium last night. The first game was Y.W.C.A. vs Normals where by the Y won to the score 57-11. The Normals had fallen off in form since last week and shooting was too much for them. The De Laval are heading the league, having put out their rivals the Canadian Woollens 38-7. The former's splendid defence work and quick combination kept the Woollens guessing. Edna Forster the jumping centre was always in the right place and assisted the forwards very materially. The most exciting game came last when Quaker Oats beat Westclox 12-10. The winner was in doubt until the last moment of play There was far too much roughness and many fouls were called. The defence on both sides caught well. The line-ups were:

KIWANIS CLUB SOCIAL EVENING

One of the jolliest affairs in the annals of the club was the banquet tendered by the Kiwanis organisation last evening at the Empress Hotel, to members of the cast and their friends in the recent Revue put on in the Grand Opera House.

As one of the members expressed it, they "took the lid off" for the banquet and dance which followed it, attended by some one hundred and twenty-five of the members of the the cast and their friends.

The fine plate was a busy accessory to the dinner, and was, in the absence of Sergeant-at-Arms Kidd, in charge of Kiwanians W. Byers and J. Jeffries. Community singing was a feature of the evening, along with choruses from the recent Revue, and hits from the production, sung by the principals themselves.

Many of the ladies of the cast and several of the gentlemen attended in costume.

During the evening a presentation to Mr. W. H. Barry was made, in the form of a Waldemar chain and gold pocket-knife, and the annual contest attendance cup was presented to James B. Doran, captain of the winning team for this year.

After the banquet, dancing was kept up until midnight, with good music provided by Paul Gliddon's three-piece orchestra.

A number of novelty dances enlivened the programme.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Melton, Mr. and Mrs. W. Greenslade, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Conway, Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Henry, Dr. and Mrs. R. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Oke, Mr. and Mrs. C. HELD A BAZAAR

Notwithstanding the inclement weather of yesterday, there was a fairly good attendance at the pleasant little bazaar, held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Andrew's Church, which opened yesterday afternoon and will continue during this afternoon and evening at the home of the president, Mrs. F. L. Robinson, 225 Charlotte Street.

Mrs. F. L. Robinson was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. Jas. Rollins, Mrs. Jas. Robertson and Mrs. A. Frost. The home-made cooking table in the hall, with many good things on view, was in charge of Mrs. M. T. Breckenridge and Mrs. G. Jamieson. Mrs. F. Weir and Mrs. B. L. Barnes had the little 'cash and carry' table, where manufacturers' samples were on sale, and Mrs. C. R. Banks, Mrs. W. Martin and Mrs. E. Carr had the fancy goods and apron sale.

Pretty things for Christmas were to be had in this section, where novelties included daintily embroidered luncheon sets, rose pink skirted ladies with porcelain heads, to cover electric night lights, a Topsy doll with serviceable soft body and shoe-button eyes, men's shirts, gilded wishbones for the Christmas parcels, and some lovely samples of unbleached factory cotton embroidered things, including a cover for a card table.

In the tea room, with its pretty red Christmas decorations and centre silver basket with red carnations, ladies in charge were Mrs. P. L. Allison, Mrs. D. R. Wrenn, Mrs. J. Mackintosh, Mrs. R. A. Carmen and Mrs. H. Beall. Mrs. W. D. Wilgar poured tea.

The sale continues during this afternoon and evening.

MILK PRICES TO TAKE JUMP HERE

Scarcity of Feed is One Contributing Cause

A general meeting of the smaller retail milk dealers of the city was called last evening at the home of J. M. Heard, 120 Hunter Street East. The meeting was attended by fourteen of the dealers, and it was decided to make a raise of one cent per quart in the price of milk, to make the price eleven cents. Outside of the Peterboro Creamery, which has been charging eleven cents a quart, none of the smaller dealers have up to the present charged more than 10 cents a quart, while a few are as low as eight and nine cents.

After discussion of costs involved in putting out a clean, good product, which will meet all requirements of doctors' tests, etc., it was decided to raise the price to eleven cents, which in all probability will be a permanent price for some time to come.

The scarcity of feed among the farmers, owing to the summer's dry conditions, is a contributing factor in the change. It is reported that many farmers have very low supplies of hay and feed on hand for their stock, and the drying up of wells and creeks is also mentioned in connection with the difficulties experienced in keeping stock in good condition.

One dealer reports having received his supply of about 475 quarts daily during last season from some four or five sources of supply. This year he is compelled to go to eight farmers for the same amount of milk. Men who last year got from 120 to 130 quarts per day from their cows are only getting about 80 quarts this year.

The number of licenses for retail milk vendors registered at the City Hall is 56, which includes all dealers, from the vendor of the milk of one cow up, and is exclusive of stores.

LABOR'S PROGRESSIVE POLITICAL INCREASE IMPRESSIVE ELEMENT

From Nine Parliamentary Members in 1900 to 142 in 1922, Ramsay Macdonald's Party May Sweep Through to Victory—Discounted By Election Prophets.

RESTED ON SUNDAY.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press)—Great Britain's opposing political armies of protection and free trade had a final resting spell Sunday, in preparation for the three strenuous fighting days before Thursday next, when approximately eighteen million electors in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, will go to the polls and cast their votes in the third general election since the war.

All forecasts of results have been extremely cautious and even those prognosticators who seem certainthat the present Government will be returned to Westminster are not at all sure that its majority in the House of Commons will be sufficient to put through its program of tariff reform, an issue which brought about the dissolution of Parliament and the appeal to the voters.

As Victory Goes.

The leaders in the present campaign have cut across the traditional party platforms, making predictions as to the outcome and inability to guage the electors, attitude adds uncertainity to the result. On general lines the return of the Conservative Government with a workable majority in the House of Commons means the beginning of a tariff wall around Great Britain, somewhat similar to that around the United States. Victory for the Liberals means that Great Britain will continue as a free trade country, with the magnetic personality of Lloyd George dominating the cabinet, although Mr. Asquith would head the government for a time at least. If the unexpected should happen, and the Labor party be returned victorious, it would mean that the rule of the two historic parties, which have alternately governed Great Britain for two and a half centuries, would end and Westminster Palace would house its first Socialist House of Commons.

Food Not Dearer.

Premier Baldwin, does not seem greatly worried by the socialistic fomentations of his son, who is actively campaigning for the Labor Party, but he is anxious about the British housewives vote. Saturday he sent a letter to the chairman of the Unionist Women's Organization asserting that his tariff reform program would not mean dearer food, but would result in increased production of home and Empire foodstuffs, while the tariff would provide a meanse of reducing the duties on tea and sugar. He declared that the Liberals have no plan for reviving trade quickly and hold out not hope for unemployment, and that the Labor Party only offers Socialist schemes, which would cause class hatred and ruin.

David Lloyd George, who everywhere is credited as never wanting in courage, has been the first of the political leaders to venture a precise prediction on the result of the election. Returning to London last night from a campaign tour, the former Premier had a tumultous reception at the station. On being asked for a speech he addressed the crowd from his motor car.

"I have no doubt," said Mr. Lloyd George, "that on Thursday we shall find a million majority for free trade."

Would Hamper Baldwin.

This declaration by the strongest fighter for free trade is considered in some quarters as an exceedingly modest one. But, even if it proves to be an accurate forecast, it will not necessarily preclude the return to power of the Conservative Govern, as was the case at the last election by a minority vote. In the face of such a national vote against protection, however, the Baldwin Government might find it very difficult to enact a stiff tariff, especially as the Premier would have within his own party a considerable infusion of free traders.

Viscount Younger, (formerly Sir George Younger, who are chiefly responsible for the downfall of the Lloyd George Cabinet), one of the ablest of the present day political organizers, predicts that the Baldwin Government will be returned with a loss of abouty twenty seats, which would give it a majority of fifty in the new parliament.

Labor's Progress.

According to the political wiseacres there is one element which seems not to have been taken sufficiently into account by the election prophets, namely the progressive increase in the Labor vote, in all the general elections, with a single exception, since 1900. In 1900 Labor elected nine members to Parliament, with 118,113 votes. In the balloting of 1906, fifty-four Laborite members were elected, with 448.808 votes. In January, 1910, forty members of the Labor Party were returned with 532,807 votes. Then came the setback in December of the same year, when forty-two members were elected but with only 381,024 votes. In 1918, Labor secured sixty-one members with a vote of 1,754,133, and in 1922, one hundred and forty-two members, with a vote of 4,247,800.

Alarmed Old Parties.

This huge vote was secured, despite the fact that Labor then, as now, was advocating a capital levy, but the difference was that in 1922, the Liberals themselves, while not strongly advocating it, were by no means averse to a capital levy, which also recieved acquienence, even from some of the Conservative leaders. It was this astonishing revelation of the strength of the Labor vote which alarmed all the other parties and has resulted in the bitter attack on the alleged socialism of the Labor party by both the Conservatives and Liberal Parties which characterizes the present election campaign.

It also probably accounts for the fact that the Labor organization steadfastly has resisted all overtures from the Liberals for a concordat in the present election, in consequence of which there again is an enormous number of triangular fights Labor appears to be satisfied. It has only to wait for the flowing tide of the labor vote eventually to overwhelm the olders parties, and it remains to be seen whether the combined Conservative-Liberal attack on the Labor party will this time cause another setback to Labor's progress.

Canadian Prices Astonished Him

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press Cable)—A speaker at a Liberal meeting in Eppingtown Saturday night, giving the audience an illustration of tariffs, said "I bought this suit I am wearing in Montreal for $55. It would cost me here three guineas (about $15).

This tie is of English make and cost me $4. I could buy it here for 7 6 ($1.80). These socks are also of English make and cost me $4. They are purchasable here for 8½ shillings ($2.05). For these shoes I paid $15. You can buy them here for 35 shillings ($8.40).

I was on a trip to Canada and I was astonished at the prices there. Even working class homes cost a rental of $50 monthly, £10 in our currency."

COMMISSION HEARS MANITOBA FARMER

Westerners Desire to Improve, Not Destroy, the Present Market System.

BRANDON, Man., December 3. — (Canadian Press.) — Views of the United Farmers of Manitoba, were presented very fully before the Royal Grain Enquiry Comission Saturday afternoon on all angles of the grain trade. In presenting the brief Secretary D. C. McKenzie prefaced his observations with the hope that the commission would understand the farmers do not want to indulge in mere destructive criticism, that they recognize the value of the marketing system, as it exists, and by making suggestions, desire to improve rather than destroy the intricate machinery in existence.

The brief mentioned ten conclusions. Among them it was suggested that the government each year very early in the season, make a careful analysis of all grades of wheat from samples taken in various districts of the prairie provinces in order to determine the milling and baking qualities of each grade. The results of these tests would be made public and used as far as possible as a basis of determining the spreads in prices between grades.

GRAIN STORAGE SHRINKS UNDER BIG SHIPMENTS

More Than Thirty Million Bushels Loaded at Fort William Docks—Week's Decrease Nine Million.

TOTALS OF STOCKS.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., December 3. — With total shipments for the week totalling 30,052,038 bushels, as against receipts of all grains of 21,278,144 bushels, stocks of grain in store here declined by nearly nine million bushels during the week, these figures however not including approximately seven million bushels taken out on the night of November 30. There was a decline in all grain stocks with the exception of oats, which showed an increase of about 100,000 bushels.

If the heavy receipts are maintained from the west which have averaged 22,000,000 bushels a week recently, the elevators will be filled to capacity early in January, it is anticipated. Some grain will still go down by water and the situation may be considerably ameliorated by boats coming here for winter storage. If the number of boats seeking storage is large, it might be possible to keep the elevators from being filled until the end of January.

Following are the figures of stocks, receipts and shipments for the week:

BYNG ATTENDED HOCKEY OPENING

Governor-General Saw the Eskimos of Edmonton Defeat Senators 3-1.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.— (Canadian Press.)—A crowd of about six thousand people flocked to the new Auditorum Saturday night to see the Edmonton Eskimos and Ottawa Senators meet in the first of their two-game series, and of that number a great many were disappointed when the world's champions finished on the short end of a three to one score. For the opening game of the season it was good hockey all the way and both teams gave a sparkling exhibition, Edmonton deserving their victory by reason of a greater display of speed and an air-tight defence that frustrated the locals' attacks, especially in the last few minutes of the game.

Without Eddie Gerard, who is out of the game through illness, the Senators failed in what had previously been their forte —their defence was not the stone wall rampart that has stood between opposing teams and victory in the past two years. Edmonton were also weakened by the loss of Captain Duke Keats and Morrison, both of whom were unable to get into uniform so that it was an even break in this respect. Splendid goal keeping by Benedict and Winkler kept the total goals to four, the latter being especially brilliant.

The Auditorium was formally opened by His Excellency, Baron Byng of Vimy, the Governor-General who faced the puck at the commencement of the game. Mayor Frank Plant presented the Ottawa team with a floral horseshoe, while Lady Byng was the recipient of two bouquets from the Ottawa Club.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press.)— By taking fifteen of twenty-five prizes in the hard red spring wheat in the hay and grain decision of the twenty-fourth annual International Livestock Exposition being held at the National Amphitheatre in the Union Stock Yards, Canada established without a doubt a world-wide supremacy in that class. GUNMAN BUMPS THEM OFF JUST FOR PRACTICE

New York Police Amazed at Effrontery of the Gang They Have Under Arrest For Messengers' Murder.

HIRE FOR "JOBS."

NEW YORK, December 3. — Barlow Diamond, one of the eight suspects arrested for the murder and robbery of the two West-end bank messengers in Brooklyn, on 14th November, refused to accompany detectives through the slums in quest of the two gunmen the prisoners accuse of actually firing the shots.

"Have a heart!" he begged. "That's like handing me a death warrant without a trial. You don't know these guys; why — (naming the more notorious of the two gunmen)—would kill me in front of you and would get away with it. Between stick-ups and jobs where he has been paid to get men out of the way, he just goes out and bumps people off for practice and takes whatever happens to be in it."

Clear Up Crimes.

Then Diamond was taken before District Attorney Dodd and amazed him with an elaborate sketch of the killer. Mr. Dodd said Diamond had supplied him with explanations of hitherto unsolved mysteries which fitted in nicely with details already obtained by the detective bureau. The District Attorney said he believed many crimes would be cleared up with the gunman's arrest.

Search in Canada.

While the police, in addition to pushing their local search, eagerly awaited news of the man hunt from other American and Canadian cities.

Inspector Coughlin predicted that the two missing gunmen, as well as the driver of the car in which they fled from an elevated station after slaying the messengers and stealing $43,607, soon would be arrested.

"We've caught them before, and sent them up, and I'll catch them this time," said Inspector Coughlin. "They can't escape us because we know too well who they are."

Indictments of the three missing men probably will be returned in Brooklyn next Tuesday, said Coughlin, who added that until they were indicted or arrested, their names would not be made public.

Doubt Stories.

It was intimated yesterday that neither the police nor District Attorney Dodd of King's County have accepted the stories of the Diamond brothers that they were not the actual slayers. On the contrary, District Attorney Dodd admitted that it was not unlikely that the men who did the shooting were in the group of eight now in custody.

In unravelling the operations of the $43,000 which was snatched the "crime syndicate," the police were amazed at the effrontery of the gunmen. They are shiftless youths, who never work, but are experts with revolvers and automobile operation.

This particular "crime syndicate" never let its members hire themselves out for a "job" that has less than $5,000 in booty in prospect.

Bad for Tipster Sometimes.

In going over the details of a possible hold-up with a tipster, they always demanded to know the amount of money that could be obtained. If it was less than $5,000, they sneeringly escorted the tipster out of their rendezvous and told him to look up some "pikers" who would do such a petty job.

And when a hold-up was committed by them in the hope of getting $5,000 or more, and it developed that less money was being carried, a severe beating was administered to the tipster for placing the gunmen in jeopardy for the smaller amount.

Urges Irish to Vote Free Trade

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press)—T. P. O'Connor, "Father of the House of Commons," has issued an address to the Irish electors of Great Britain, saying:

"This is the first British election in which you have to record your votes on a purely British issue. Your country is now mistress of her own destinies; her future rests with her own people and her own electors. Ireland does not enter into this contest. We must therefore record our votes as residents of Great Britain."

Mr. O'Connor urges the Irish to vote for free trials, and thereby uphold Irish traditions, liberty and prosperity for the working class.

Slew Two Girls Gets Life Term

JUNEAU, Alaska, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press)—Harry Johnson, who, Monday pleaded guilty in a United States Court here of second degree murder in slaying Luella Boardway, formerly of Moose Jaw, Sask., and Hilda Weiss, in a resort in this city, September 24, has been sentenced to concurrent terms for life. One term was instituted for each death under two indictments. Johnson, who formerly lived in Calgary, Alberta, and was known as "Battling Johnson" was taken from here yester to McNeil Island Penitentiary, near Tacoma, Washington, by United States Marshall Beaumont.

ALLEGED DRIVER WAS SPEEDING

Doctor On Trial For Death of Little Girl in New Glasgow, N.S.

NEW GLASGOW, N.S., Dec. 3.—Dr. Tramberg, of Trenton, who was driving the car which ran over and killed five-year-old Mary McDonald on Friday afternoon is to be tried for manslaughter next Tuesday. He has been released on $5,000 bail.

A number of witnesses at the coroner's inquest Saturday gave evidence to the effect that the car was driven at high speed. One witness estimated twenty-five miles an hour. The mother of the little girl stated that the child was half-way across the road and did not hear the car coming. She herself saw it and jumped back in time to prevent being run over and she called to the child to stop till the car went past.

Dr. Stramberg's statement was to the effect that he was going at a moderate rate of speed, that he had blown his horn at George street intersection and that the little girl had run out right in front of the car.

ASQUITH POINTS TARIFF OMMISSIONS

Proposed Preference Excludes Wheat and Meat, Both Important to the Dominions.

LONDON, Dec. 3. —(Canadian Press Cable).—Speaking at Paisley Saturday, Mr. Asquith, leader of the liberal forces said that exclusion from the tariff of wheat and meat knocked the bottom out of imperial preference becaus, these were the main importations from the most important of the Dominions. The proposed preference therefore was not worth the paper it was written on.

Surveying "the ill-assorted army of the old gang the liberal leader described the Chamberlain brothers as worshipping whole-heartedly at the ancestral altar. "They have much mor, vision than any of the others and realize clearly that a protection ist policy not including food and raw materials is a makeshift and a sham so they are prepared but only for the moment to accept the Baldwin half or quarter loaf," he added. "Of the three lots of protectionists they are the only ones commanding my respect."

LLOYD GEORGE GIVEN NEW BREATH OF LIFE IN TOUR OF AMERICA

WHY THERE ARE SO MANY HALF BAKED PEOPLE

Rotarian Alex. Mowat Dissects Zangwill's Criticism for Benefit of the Rotary Club.

SCHOLARLY ADDRESS

Basing his remarks upon Israel Zangwill's recent complaint that the thing that most impressed him in the United States was the number of half-baked people he met there, Rotarian Alex. Mowat delighted the members of the Peterboro Rotary Club with a most scholarly address at to-day's luncheon at the Empress, his treatment of his subject being such as to hold the closest attention of his hearers.

Pointing out that the dictionary definition of "half-baked" was "raw, crude and immature," Rotarian Mowat declared that he felt that Zangwill had uncovered a weak spot, not only in the United States and Canada, for undoubtedly a large proportion of the people of both countries could be so described. The speaker then proceeded to discuss, under three heads, the reason for such a condition, dealing first with faults in our educational system that he felt were to a large extent responsible. The trouble with education both in the United States and Canada was that too much attention was paid to developing new methods of teaching, patenting new forms of education, rather than to the character and personality of the teacher. Rotarian Mowat outlined the traits that should be possessed by the teacher: character, personality, humor, devotion to duty, etc., and declared that the success of education methods depended to a very great extent upon the personality of the teacher. With teachers of the right type there would be far fewer raw and crude pupils turned out of our schools.

The speaker quoted Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's six traits to be found in the well educated man, and discussed each of them at the same time asking his hearers to apply each trait to themselves. Particular attention was paid to Dr. Butler's first point, the ability to speak the mother tongue correctly and with precision. In this connection, Rotarian Mowat remarked that although Latin and Greek were considered dead languages, there was a quite evident danger that the English language might be killed. He deprecated the tendency to use such words as "function," "going over the top," etc., and the widespread use of slang. While there was other anaemic words that were constantly employed that he wished might be carried off by anaemia. He advised his hearers to pay more attention to reading Shakespeare and other poets and to the Bible to develop a more healthy and robust language.

Another cause for the proportion of "half-baked" individuals on this continent was, the speaker believed, the number of foreign-born people in the United States and Canada, presenting a problem of serious proportions. In the United States alone there were 14,000,000 foreign-born residents, of whom 60 per cent. were sub-normal in intelligence, and the proportion in Canada was even higher than 60 per cent.

The third and last cause was the fact that so few people had a really serious purpose in life. They were satisfied to give their talent and ability and energy to their own jobs and to make a living for themselves and too few had any thought for the welfare of others. The idea of community welfare did not enter their minds, the speaker declared.

Rotarian Mowat's address was replete with apt quotations and enlivened with flashes of wit that illuminated his remarks. The round of applause that followed his peroration showed how thoroughly the speaker's efforts were appreciated.

President V. J. McElderry acted as song leader to-day, and he was assisted in one selection by the Rotary batchelor quartette: Ross Dobbin, Joe Kenneally, Lou Potvin and Frank Linton.

A letter was read from Mrs. F. L. Roy, of the Rotary-annes, thanking the members of the Rotary Club for their assistance at the sucressful Rotary-annes' dance, which showed a profit of over $200.

Returning to England Re-kindled With Political Ardour, He Rejuvenated the Party--The Big Man in Present Election.

IS STORM CENTRE

LLOYD-GEORGE Given .... ffi
(By Charles A. McCann. Copyright, 1923.)

LONDON, December 3 (United Press). — With sore-throated candidates resting after the most vivid campaign of the last ten years, England settled down to await the general elections on Thursday.

Out of the welter of the campaign the fiery figure of David Lloyd-George has emerged once more as a storm centre of English politics.

The ma nwho seemed shelved politically when he sailed for the United States, has made his personality the focal point of the campaign.

During the war he assumed almost the status of a god to millions of Englishmen. A couple of years ago he was knocked over like other man made gods. During the last year he was Mr. Lloyd George, the former Prime Minister, unenthusiastic head of a little party of liberal-minded Conservatives and conservative-minded Liberals.

Prime Minister Baldwin decided while Lloyd George was still in the States to have a general election on the tariff question. At once Lloyd George became a figure of importance, as he must be in British politics. Ten minutes later he had come out with a smashing declaration that he would fight under the standard of free trade.

As a former Liberal he would naturally be in opposition to Baldwin's tariff proposals, but no one knows Lloyd George.

Would he return, a protectionist from the United States—a high tariff country—and Canada, which might have taught him to want tariff preference for British Empire goods?

Renounced Press Support.

It was well known in Fleet street that Lord Rothermere and Lord Beaverbrook, the two greatest newspaper publishers in England, owners of the most powerful publicity engine that the world has ever known, planned to back Lloyd George on a high tariff platform.

So the political situation awaited its full development until Lloyd George, returning fatigued from his strenuous trip, should land. He arrived at Southampton at noon.

Those first sparks exploded the Beaverbrook-Rothermere plan, and there went perhaps the greatest opportunity a man ever had to gain newspaper support.

When the story is fully known it will not hurt Lloyd George.

He passed up the support of the most powerful newspaper group the world has ever known. It blankets England, but the old Lloyd George was back, not the ex-premier and the leader of a hybrid title party, but a great Liberal.

The Liberal party at once became reunited. Lloyd George and Herbert Asquith, leader of the Liberal party, had been the bitterest political enemies in England, since in 1916 Lloyd George had overthrown his old leader, and became minister himself.

Now Lloyd George and Asquith are speaking from the same platform Lloyd George's National Liberal party, which he formed upon his overthrow in 1922, died a natural death after its unnatural life.

Rejuvenated the party.

The old Lloyd George is slashing, thrusting, cutting. He does not bother to parry. In rejoining the Liberal party he rejuvenated it, as apparently his American trip and the smoke of battle rejuvenated him. He subordinated himself to Asquith, the senior, but he is the biggest figure in the country.

The newspapers are full of him. He dominates the situation as one big boy in a football game. He seems years younger. His eyes are flashing —his white mane of hair is flying— his voice runs the scales of expres-

WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION

The exhibit of South American art, held on Saturday afternoon and evening in the studio of the Conservatory of Music, under the auspices of the Women's Art Association, was well attended and proved to be an interesting exhibit of curios from a land whose unique customs are entertaining to Canadians.

Miss Elsie Stockton, who spent five years in teaching in the schools of South America, gave a brief talk during the afternoon and evening of Saturday. She outlined in bird's eye fashion the life and customs and manners of South American peoples, giving a sketch of the life in different sections of the great continent under the Southern Cross, whose charm she referred to as having a strong drawing power for those who come under its spell.

The exhibit included some striking examples of the handiwork and artcraft of the ancient and modern peoples of South America. There was Paraguayan lace, cobweb fine, convent needlework in lovely bits of pale-tinted tatting and drawn work, rugs made from vicuna fur and leopard skin, tiny "charm" dolls and infinitesimal reed baskets, a wonderful deep-fringed silk shawl, a silver-mounted gourd for mate, the Paraguayan herb drink, and a huge tortoise-shell comb fully a foot across, accompanied by the black lace drape that takes the place in South America of the Spanish mantilla.

There was pottery from the Inca graveyards in Peru, with representations of the ancient sacred figures and birds of the Inca tribe, a boa made from the soft breast feathers of the ostrich, a woollen prayer rug, pointed caps of cocoanut fibre, saddle bags in colored wools, and the chocolate-colored pottery pieces in odd shapes that constitute the present-day contribution to such art by the peoples of the southern Americas.

The exhibit of fine artcraft included some wonderful heavy silver ear-rings, hand-carved silver spoons in fine filagree work, and Peruvian glass goblets with the coat of arms of Peru, showing the llama and the chinchona tree. The exhibit was accompanied by a collection of photographs, explanatory of the life of the people, one Araucanian lady, as a visitor remarked, showed a very up-to-date appearance with her sleeveless costume.

In connection with this exhibit was shown a quantity of Canadian homespuns, in charge of Mrs. W. H. Pretty, the ware including soft and pretty pieces in scarves and lengths of brilliant-hued stuffs, suitable for couch covers and draperies.

Tea was served from a table prettily centred with bright marigolds, presided over by Mrs. L. J. Petit and Mrs. J. E. R. Munro. Mrs. F. C. Neal, president of the Association, received the guests in informal fashion, assisted by various members of the Society.

On Saturday, December 15th, a talk, illustrated by appropriate vocal solos by different singers, on the folk songs of England, Ireland and Scotland, will be given by Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, accompanied by an exhibit of carved boxes and candlesticks.

LLOYD GEORGE

sion from seduction to withering denunciation.

The country looks conservative for the party. The tariff proposal at least is constructive, and the only remedy in sight for unemployment—if it works.

Lloyd George and his party are likely to win this election.

But the National Liberal Club, which put Lloyd George's portrait in the cellar when he and Asquith parted, is dusting it off again. Some millions of people are dusting off their old idol and putting it back in their hearts.

An old statesman named Lloyd George, went to the States, but the old Lloyd George, statesman and politician, came back.

Perhaps its was the smoke of battle in the nostrils of an old warhorse did it; perhaps it may have been seeing the faces and hearing the cheers of people in a new world, who had not got used to him. Anyway he is back, hitting every head that shows itself, and he is not likely to stop unless he is back at the head of the British Empire.

BALDWIN HAS CHANCE.

Prophets who really try to be judicial and not merely prophesy to hearten their own side in the big fight that will end on Thursday, are practically agreed that all parties will return to parliament in considerable strength, says a London despatch.

Even more than on former occasions is there reluctance in the present election contest to attempt to estimate how the big army of silent voters, "men and women who don't go to meetings," with whom the canvassers never get in touch will cast their ballots.

Cautious but reasonable anticipation of what this considerable section of the people will do, is that their vote, if given in large numbers at all, will go to the Baldwin government.

Premier Baldwin's short lived ministry did nothing particularly to arouse the middle class resentment and the plea put forward that he is now acting from motives of transparent sincerity and honesty, doubtless will carry some weight.

ROYALIST LEADER HAD SON KILLED

PARIS, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press.)—Leon Daudet, Royalist leader, to-day filed formal charge of assassination against an unidentified person in consequence of the death of his 14 year old son, Philippe, who died several days ago from the effects of wounds received in a taxi cab. He also brought a charge of abduction of a minor in connection with Philippe's previous visit to the office of anarchist newspaper La Libertaere.

M. Daudet promised to submit his evidence as soon as an investigating magistrate was named, which probably will be late this afternoon.

BAND CONCERT

The third of the series of Sunday evening concerts by the Band of the Peterborough Rangers was given in the Grand Opera House last night to a well filled house, notwithstanding unfavorable weather conditions. An excellent programme met with the enthusiastic applause, which must gladden and encourage Lieut. Peryer and the bandsmen.

Bandsman Reg. Dyer gave a clever clarionet solo (varied), "Long, Long Ago," which was encored.

Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," admirably played by Mr. R. J. Devey, was also encored.

Mr. Maurice Park sang two delightful tenor songs, "Serenade" and "The Farewell," the latter in response to an encore.

Both the assisting artists must be popular with the young folks, judging by their vigorous applause.

The Christmas concert will be given by the Band on Sunday, Dec. 23rd, at which a childrens' chorus will assist.

The piano was kindly lent by the Heintzman Co., freely carted by Mr. Ed. Cooney, for which valuable assistance the Band express grateful acknowledgment.

WILL HAVE MORE SKIPS FOR LADY CURLERS

The first meeting for this season of the Executive of the Ladies' Curling Club was held on Saturday afternoon in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A., the president, Mrs. Walter Oke, in the chair. Arrangements were made at this meeting for the appointment of skips and vice-skips for this season, the full list of which is not yet completed. Owing to a number of new members this year, the six skips in last year's schedule will be increased by two more.

RISING IRISH IN BRITAIN MAY ASK HELP AMERICA

LONDON, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press.)—T. P. O'Connor, "father of the House of Commons," in an address before the Irish Literary Society here last evening, intimated that he might possibly visit America to try to obtain help for the rising generation of Irish in Britain. He said he was especially interested in this question, and that in many cases Irish boys and girls who had won scholarships had been obliged to give them up because money which they brought was insufficient to meet expenses. He proposed a fund to assist such students.

WILLIAM BENNETT ON MURDER CHARGE

Visitor to Woman's Apartment Struck Husband With Stick.

WINDSOR, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press). — Formal commitment for trial of William Bennett, 28 years old, on charge of murdering Herbert Bennetto, at 18 Edna street, Ford City, on November 10, was made by Magistrate Gundy in Windsor Police Court to-day. Bennett will be tried by jury at Assizes next January.

Gertrud, Bennetto wife of dead man, and physicians, were the only witnesses called by Crown Attorney Urquhart to testify at the hearing. Mrs. Bennetto broke into tears when she was asked to tell her story of the tragedy. She was allowed by court to remain seated in witness box.

According to her story Bennett was in her apartment on the fatal night and went to basement to bring coal for the stove, he returned with scantling in his hand and struck her husband on the skull.

The Presbytery of Lanark and Renfrew, at its meeting on November 22nd, sustained the call from St. Andrew's church, Renfrew, to Rev. Mr. Rollins, and the congregation of St. Andrews church here was yesterday notified to this effect, and that final action would be taken at a meeting of the Peterboro Presbytery in Port Hope on December 11.

The recent rainfall of Friday and Sunday will be of great benefit to the surrounding country, as it will fill up the swamps, creeks, wells and cisterns. A unique event happened in the McGhee family the same day, when at noon their daughter Marjorie was married at Stirling Methodist parsonage by Rev. F. Joblin, to Mr. Charles Todd, of Hoard's Station.

A sumptuous supper was served to the guests present. Rev. J. J. Black, B.D., expressed congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Spencer, and to the guests of honour, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. McGhee. Both grooms of a quarter of a century ago, responded appropriately.

SCHOOL STUDIES CAUSED SUICIDE

Young Lady Studying by Correspondence Grew Despondent — Found Shot to Death in Swamp

TORONTO, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press). — Seeking for Winnifred Edith Smith, aged 22 years, of Toronto, four searchers, one of whom was the girl's brother, setting out on Saturday night from near Greenwood, found her dead body near the side of the road with a 44-40 revolver lying beside her. Subsequent investigation by Dr. Cartwright, Pickering, Coroner of Ontario County, showed the death to have been self-inflicted. Despondency over school studies is given as the reason.

On Saturday Miss Smith, the authorities say, left home carrying suspended around her neck, and hidden in her clothes, a huge ten-inch revolver which she picked off her father's desk, took the train to Greensbury Station for Greenwood, was driven and walked with neighbors and then when clear of them, about four in the afternoon, went into a swamp. Miss Smith recently was studying for the correspondence method to obtain second-year High School standing. She became despondent over these studies, her mother said.

Hearty support of the League of Nations is promised.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Temperance Meeting on Sunday Afternoon—Personal Mention.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 3.—A Temperance meeting was held on Sunday afternoon, in the Salvation Army Citadel. Dr. H. B. Longmore, who was called upon for an address said that some people say that alcohol is a good thing in its place but he could never see a place for it. There are 50,000 practitioners that belong to the Medical Associations. A couple of years ago they held a meeting at Atlantic City and a whole day was spent discussing the benefit of alcohol. Is alcohol a necessary drug? They were put on their professional honor to answer the question and 90 per cent. of them voted that they could get along without it. Dr. Longmore said he did not find it necessary himself to use it For example his own daughter was right at death's door for nearly three days, some time ago and they never thought of using alcohol and never even suggested it. You hear people say that so many people died of the 'flu because they couldnt get liquor. There is not one bit of evidence to show that one single life was lost for the need of liquor. Even at the Medical Convention not in mention ed that liquor was of any value in case of sickness. In Ontario there are 3,500 doctors and during the recent year there were 3,000 that never put in one order for liquor and one third of them do not use it at all. Therefore they do not think it is of any use as a medicine.

Mr. Winters who acted as chairman thanked Dr. Longmore for his interesting address. A vocal duet was given by the Misses Jennie and Ruth Taylor, also a vocal selection by Captain Froud and Lieutenant Hurst and a solo by Mr. C. Long. Mr. Winters thanked all those who took part in the programme and the meeting closed by singing Onward Christian Soldiers. Mr. Walter Lowe contributed a cornet solo.

ELECTIONS HIT SOCCER CROWD

Wintry Weather Also Curtailed Attendance at Saturday's Games — Scoring Features.

LONDON, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—The fifth qualifying round of the English Cup greatly interfered with the programme of league matches in the Old Country on Saturday. This was particularly true of the second and third divisions; the senior sides were not affected. Two factors militated against attendance, the largest of which as in the game between Tottenham Hotspurs and West Bromwhich, thirty thousand being present. Wintry weather and the proximity of the general election kept many people away.

The fee paid by Chelsea for Andy Wilson of Middlesboro, has not yet been disclosed, but it is believed to be very high. Wilson scored with a great shot in his first game, that against Preston North End. In the contest between West Ham and Bolton Wanderers, the former were unlucky not to defeat the Lancastrians, for Bishop put the ball through his own goal. This appeared to be a special failing on Saturday for in addition to the West Hammer, the misfortune was repeated also by Hampson of Newcastle United, McIntyre of Blackburn Rovers, and Whitefield of Nelson.

The best individual scoring feats were five goals by North, an old Arsenal player in Gillingham's cup tie; four goals by Kerr for Luton Town, three of which were scored in three minutes; Cotton of Wrexham and Chandler of Leicester City each scored three times. Arsenal in their game against Blackburn failed to make use of many chances presented to them in front of their goal. West Bromwich netted in thir tilt with Tottenham just as the final whistle blew, but the goal was disallowed.

WHAT WILL BE THE VERDICT?

The question of whether Ontario politics will go back to the old two-party system will be practically decided in Toronto next week when the annual convention of the United Farmers of Ontario will be held.

Few farmer gatherings have been of as great general interest as this one will prove to be.

The future political status of the U.F.O. is to be decided, and judging from the resolutions passed by several branches and from the general trend of events, the farmers' organization is very likely to come to the conclusion that participation in politics as a body means suicide in the long run.

Some farmers' clubs are still strongly in favour of direct political action by the U.F.O., but the general belief is that such clubs are in the minority and will be outvoted on the floor of the convention.

The first day's proceedings next week when the various resolutions are to be passed upon will decide the issue one way or another, and naturally there is much speculation among people of all shades of political belief on the outcome of the Toronto gathering.

"Keep out of politics" seems most likely to be the popular slogan.

THE MAYOR'S GRANT.

The contention was advanced in a discussion of municipal politics the other day that in only paying a salary of $1,000 a year to her chief magistrate Peterborough could not expect to attract men of the desired ability and training.

There is very little in that argument.

It is true that $1,000 is not much of a salary, but it is equally true that the monetary consideration involved is usually the last thing that aspirants for the office think of in entering the campaign.

If the salary basis was the one upon which men estimated their responsibility to their home city or to their country it would be a sorry day for the municipalities of Canada and for Canada herself.

It may be that there are men in Parliament who are better off financially than they would be outside, but, on the other hand, it is not necessary to look very far to find others whose brains and ability and talent are available for their country's service at a sum that is a mere pittance compared to what they could earn in a private capacity.

The grant made Peterborough's chief magistrate is an honourarium rather than a salary, intended to reimburse the Mayor for the expenditures required of the occupant of his position and for the frequent calls that are made upon his purse.

A salary system would be a different matter altogether, for the right kind of a Mayor would be worth many times the present grant, while there have been chief magistrates who might have had a hard time proving that they were not grossly overpaid when they received $1,000.

HELP FOR THE FARMERS.

The immigration policy announced by the Ontario Minister of Agriculture, to which reference was made in the Examiner on Saturday, seems to have been received with considerable apprehension as to the Province's ability to assimilate anything like the number of farm labourers mentioned by Hon. J. S. Martin.

Looking at the matter from an urban viewpoint, the danger that the majority of men brought out to work on the farms will in the long run be found swelling the ranks of the unemployed in the cities, is a very evident one.

If employment for them all can be secured on the farms—and they will stay there—Mr. Martin's plan promises to be of the greatest benefit to Ontario.

But the experience of the past few years does not justify any excessive amount of optimism along these lines.

Even when the Dominion immigration restrictions were such as to allow only farm labourers and domestics to enter, it was noticeable that there was a dearth of labour in the rural districts, while the unemployment figures in the large centres indicated an influx from somewhere.

The logical conclusion is that the vast majority of the supposed farm labourers either failed to reach the farms or failed to remain in the country for any length of time, sooner or later drifting into the cities and preferring the chance of an industrial job to the smaller pay offered by the farmers.

Ontario people would like some assurance that Mr. Martin's scheme will be protected against consequences of that kind.

It is a matter of very considerable importance, and both rural and urban communities are, or should be, deeply interested in the details of the plan.

TAXING CHURCHES.

The proposal to tax church property is said to be popular with officials of the Assessment Department. That is not surprising, seeing that over two and a half million dollars' worth of property is involved. To the harassed tax-gatherers this sizeable addition would naturally be very welcome. Removal of the existing exemptions may also appeal to that section of the community which belongs to no religious denomination, supports no church, and regards it as a personal hardship that religious edifices should not be made to contribute their share to the assessment funds. The Baptists, too, are said to look favorably upon the proposal. There are special reasons for this seeming paradox. The Baptists, we know, are opposed on principle to accepting financial assistance in any form out of the public funds. That is why it is made a condition that the million dollars required for bringing McMaster university to the city should be raised on a strictly voluntary basis. It is, therefore, quite consistent and logical in the Baptists to consent to the imposition of taxation; but other denominations are not bound by such considerations, and the taxation of their properties would present a very serious problem to many church communities.

What arguments can be advanced by the churches against the suggested taxation? We think many, from the point of view both of equity and morality. At the present time in Hamilton the total exemptions on city properties, school buildings, hospitals, churches, public buildings, etc., combined, amount to approximately seventeen million dollars, of which sum the churches account for two and a half millions. These institutions are doing an essential work for the community. The education of the young and the care of the sick are obligations which there is no desire to evade. The same sentiments should prevail when it comes to a question of the welfare of the soul. The churches are doing a great work in the community, not merely spiritually but socially, which the taxpayers as a whole should be prepared to acknowledge. The majority do; but there is a minority who do not. We have only to imagine what conditions would be like if these various Christian organizations ceased their activities, to realize how great the community's debt to them is.

These churches, as a rule, are carried along by a few faithful, self-sacrificing people. In many cases, the clergy are miserably underpaid, and it is a hard struggle for the congregation to make ends meet. Often there is a heavy debt to complicate matters. A few wealthy parishes, or church communities, might be able to stand the extra burden of taxation without serious embarrassment, but in many instances such an impost would almost prove the last straw. It should be the aim of the authorities to do everything that is humanly possible to reduce the weight of taxation, but the tendency appears to be rather to increase the incubus by casting around for fresh sources of revenue. The Mayor and the present Council have shown a commendable disposition to curb extravagance and exercise civic economy. That is the direction in which salvation lies, not in penalizing churches and publicly-owned utilities.—Hamilton Spectator.

"HILLS OF HOME."

Although there are several spots in Canada where purple heather grows, particularly in Nova Scotia and in the Rockies, there is only one kind of heather to those who were born in the misty isle. For a couple of months past people in Scotland have been mailing generous boxes of it to all parts of the world, great lovely purple sprigs, fragrant of the moors, and at times, if they were fortunate enough to find it, a few precious pieces of white heather for luck. It is true that the thistle is the national emblem of Scotland, but the heather is truly the national flower. Perhaps the fairest color of all, a soft somewhere between a pink and a deep purple, tiny flowered but with myriads of blossoms, strong, self-reliant like the men of her soil, the heather typifies Scotland as could no other flower. Its very fragrance, wild and sweet and fresh, no cloying perfume in its blossoms, speaks of the clear stretches of moors, the hills which it covers with a mantle of living beauty, and reminds one of a poem that Stevenson wrote out of the fullness of his heart from Samoa. Surrounded on every side by the sweetest of flowers, his heart yearned for other places and other fragrances.

"Blows the wind today, and the sun and the rain are flying,
Blows the wind on the moors today and now,
Where about the graves of the martyrs the whaups are crying,
My heart remembers how!

Grey recumbent tombs of the dead in desert places,
Standing stones on the vacant wine-red moor,
Hills of sheep, and the homes of the silent vanished races,
And winds, austere and pure:
Be it granted me to behold you again in dying,
Hills of home! and to hear again the call;
Hear about the graves of the martyrs the peewees crying,
And hear no more at all."

Whenever one thinks of Scotland, the mind travels swiftly to Burns, and whenever one thinks of that sweet singer, one recalls with a warm feeling around the heart the land that he enriched with the magic of his genius. Other singers of other lands have written songs of home, love songs and songs of nature, but no other poet has ever given us verses of such tenderness and grace. Probably the thing that appeals to everyone in Burns is his absolute sincerity and his love of home. The lines in which he tells his faith are not less memorable than the stately verses in which Gray sings the "short and simple annals of the poor." They adorn countless statues of the poet, yet no matter how often they are quoted, they are as fresh and as beautiful as ever:

"To mak' a happy fireside clime
To weans and wife,
That's the true pathos and sublime
Of human life."

These lines seem to express the spirit of the Scottish race. The home may be only a "but and ben," or it may be a stately mansion that shows that its owner has attained worldly prosperity, but the spirit of the owner is the same. To make a "happy fireside clime" is the main ambition of his life.

The sons of Scotland have left its shores to seek opportunity in every corner of the globe. Wherever a hard job is to be done, the impossible attempted and attained, a hard-headed yet visionary Scotsman is sure to be on hand, ready to stick to it to the end. Many have become famous rulers of men, leaders in the church and state, in fact it has been said that the reason Scotland never demanded home rule, was that her sons ruled England, to say nothing of Scotland. But whether or not material wealth and success comes to the Scotsman, and no matter how patriotic a Canadian he may become, he will remember,

"The lone shieling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas—
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,
And we in dreams behold the Hebrides."

—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Twenty thousand election speeches are being made every day to the British electors. It is not easy to sing, "What a happy land is England," these days.

In a month Peterborough will be called upon to choose her new crop of civic administrators, most of whom are imitating the shrinking violet just now.

The snowstorm that hit Regina on Friday was nothing compared to the snowing under of the Regina rugby team.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1. — Unexpected deliveries on December contracts led to sharp upturns to-day in the price of wheat The market closed firm 1 3-8c to 2¼c net higher. December $1.04 to $1.04 1-8, and May $1.09 5-8 to $1.09 3-4. Corn finished at 5-8 to 7-8c gain, oats unchanged to 3-8c up and provisions unchanged to 12c down.

As soon as the fact became apparent that elevator interests would prefer to hold wheat rather than to make immediate deliveries, general traders were quick to take the bull side, notably speculators who had looked for a continuation of the liquidation which in the last few days has been the chief depressing influence. The change in investment was changed by a report that owing to a shortage in the Nebraska crop the flour mills in Nebraska were likely to be purchasers of wheat here before the season was over. Firmness of Liverpool quotations notwithstanding that world shipments were heavy counted also as a bullish factor.

Ready absorption of huge recent shipments of wheat to Europe aroused suspicion that current estimates of foreign crops might prove untrustworthy. Furthermore, domestic primary receipts for the week showed a big reduction compared with the total a year ago. Estimates continued to be put forward indicating a small carry-over of wheat supplies in this country next July. Under such circumstances, the upward swing of prices met with no material check, especially as rains were reported to be delaying the Argentine harvest, and some traders here were predicting a decrease of the U.S. visible supply total Monday. Scantiness of offerings in the corn market gave firmness to corn and oats.

Provisions lacked support, despite higher quotations on hogs.

BRITISH MUSEUM GET MANY FLEAS.

The World's Greatest Collection of Fleas Collected By Natheniel Rothschild Go to Museum.

The world's greatest collection of fleas is presented to the British Museum, whose officials register exquisite delight

These fleas were collected by the late Nathaniel Rothschild, head of the famous London banking family.

Rothschild took great pride in his fleas. He ransacked the world for them. Expense was no object. He event sent a costly expedition into the Far North to get a specimen of the flea that annoys a certain kind of Arctic seal.

Strange things happen in World Vaudeville, but rarely anything is stranger than this hobby of the rich banker.

Up speaks Arthur F. Samme, Englishman, calling attention to his own peculiar collection — match boxes. He has 476 different specimens, and he boasts that it took 14 years to acquire them.

Samme claims, with dignity and confidence, that he is the world's greatest authority on match boxes. No doubt.

In two ways, it's a striking hobby.

Man's instinct for accumulation is, in its simpler form, the quality or virtue known as thrift. Carried to extremes, to its logical conclusion, it is responsible for some people being too rich at the expense of others who remain too poor.

Many a millionaire will smile at Mr. Samme collecting match boxes or Mr. Rothschild collecting rare fleas. But the match boxes and the fleas have benefited their owners about as much as excessive possession of dollars benefits the extremely rich.

A queer animal, at times, is man.

In justice to Rothschild, it must be admitted that his hobby did the world a little good, since fleas spread diseases and a knowledge of them is obviously valuable. What is more than can be said of some collections of dollars.

LLOYD GEORGE ANSWERS JIBE

Described As "Vain Talker" He Recalls the Coalition He Led During War Years.

CRICCIETH, Wales, Dec. 3.—From his own front porch Mr. Lloyd George, Saturday, defended himself before his fellow townspeople against the Conservative campaign poster which represented him as a vain talker who had accomplish ed nothing. His recollection was, he said, that the Conservatives were rather glad to have this vain talker take charge in 1914-1918, when British finance was in a state of panic, and arrangements had to be made to save it from disaster; when shells and rifles, machine guns and cannons had to be forged, and great organizations had to be improvised for turning them out at the shortest notice to support the men in the field, "the vain talker" had his uses.

When Germany had broken up three of Great Britains allies and was on the point of breaking up the fourth; when German submarines were sinking ships by the millions of tons, the Tory Party, the former Premier continued, were frightened —so frightened that they shirked office and begged this "vain talker" to take charge and do his best to pull the country through.

When there was great unrest in Great Britain after the war, and there were menacing strikes and movements, the Conservatives were glad to get him, said Mr. Lloyd George.

He remembered another poster in which he figured in 1918, also issued by the Conservative Party. It was a more flattering portrait, and carried the words: "Support the man who brought victory."

He could show his opponents one of these posters still sticking to an old brick wall where it had been pasted during the 1918 elections.

"It was only when they thought their troubles were over—troubles in Europe and troubles in Ireland and that trade was beginning to pick up," said Mr. Lloyd George, "that they suddenly discovered I was a "vain talker," and that the time had come for them to have a change. There is no party which has a less right to issue that poster than the Tory party."

Electoral System Unfair

LONDON, Dec. 3. —(Canadian Press Cable)—In a striking speech delivered in West Leicester Saturday Winston Churchill not only conveyed the impression that the liberals do not expect to beat the conservatives but indicated a new liberal line of action in the event of defeat. He said that even if the Baldwin party were returned they would be in the minority by perhaps five million votes of the electorate. This was due to the absurd, baffling, unfair and confused electoral system. He asserted that the tories had always tried to rule the people on some minority plan and instanced the pocket borough system before 1832, the Reform Act and the House of Lords veto. He declared that this minority rule would again be smashed if the conservatives attempted to carry protection without a substantial majority of the people behind it.

COMMU'NITY SHED FOR MILLBROOK COMPLETE

Volunteer Labor for Large Part of the Work—Millbrook News of Interest

MILLBROOK, December 1. — The new covered shed being built by the congregation of Grace Presbyterian Church, in the rear of the church lot, is almost completed.

Some months ago the old sheds were torn down and preparations made to replace them with the present up-to-date building. The shed is 66 feet by 50 feet, and will accommodate thirty horses. The lumber from the old sheds furnished material for the upper part of the walls, while a five-foot cement base forms the lower portion. The roof is metallic.

The entrance doors face toward the east, the large trees on that side of the church lot affording considerable shelter in stormy weather. While the shed is the sole property of the Presbyterian Church, and has been erected entirely at the expense of the congregation, no objection will be made to its use by the community, providing, as Rev. Mr. Gervan announced at the recent fowl supper, the proceeds of which went towards the expense of the new building, "they use and do not abuse the privilege."

Because of the convenience and comfort which it offers to those driving into the village during the week and making use of the shed for horses or cars, the Council of Millbrook and Cavan will be asked to install and maintain lights in the building, it being impossible for the church to do this other than on Sundays or week nights when their own meetings are being held. It may be that those of other denominations using the shed will give private subscriptions to the church managers as some return for the privilege willingly granted.

The work has been done largely by volunteer labour, the total amount paid out, apart from what has been done gratis, being about $700.00.

Probably $1,000.00 would be a moderate estimate of the actual value of the building, which is a decided community asset.

This is the first covered shed erected in the village.

The death of the late Matthew Gardiner, in his 88th year, removes one of the pioneer settlers of Cavan township. Deceased was the last surviving member of a family of five children, three sons and two daughters. His parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. John Gardiner, came to Canada from England, settling in Cavan about one mile north of Millbrook, clearing the land, and by thrift and hard labor the present comfortable family homestead was gradually evolved. The late Mr. Matthew Gardiner was born and lived his entire life upon this farm.

His wife, whose maiden name was Jane Parr, predeceased her husband by ten years. Their family consisted of three sons, Sidney, Henry and Charles, the latter residing upon the homestead; and three daughters, Mrs. Thomas Hunter, and Mrs. Jos. Burns of Cavan, and Miss Olivia, at home.

The late Mr. Gardiner was a carpenter by trade, and during his long life witnessed many changes, and passed through a variety of interesting experiences, as the years brought alterations and increasing popularity to this part of the countryside.

One year ago last September, deceased suffered a stroke of paralysis and though after a few weeks in bed he was able to go about again, yet owing to his advanced years his health was never fully restored. For about a month before his death he was never able to leave his room and it was realized that his strength was exhausted.

The funeral services were in charge of his pastor, Rev. G. S. Gervan, the pall-bearers being two sons-in-law, Messrs. Thomas Hunter and Joseph Burns, and J. O. Ball, Weston Fallis, John Hunter and Creighton Carr, the last four married to nieces of the deceased. A large number of friends and relatives gathered at the home to show their respect and affection for the departed. Interment was in Gardiner's cemetery.

NO BREAD WINNER IN MILLION HOMES

Baldwin Decries Attempt to Scare British Housewives.

LONDON, Dec. 3. — (Canadian Press Cable).—Premier Baldwin in a letter describing the "dishonorable attempt to scare the housewife by talking of dear food' says that in a million of British households the bread-winner is out of work. "Women of the country," he adds, "can help me to end this condition. My way is to try to find work for the unemployed in our trades at good wages. Our program is far from making food dearer. We will encourage the production of home and Empire foodstuffs. We can look forward to a growing and steady supply of necessities of life at moderate prices."

Viscount Cave, Lord Chancellor who has only just recovered from a serious illness explained Premier Baldwin's proposals to a Portsmouth audience as Joseph Chamberlains desire to see a customs union within the Empire but in a different form. "Why should we not," he asked "have melons from Quebec, peaches from Ontario and apples from British Columbia instead of from countries a little way to the south."

THREE VILLAGES TUMBLED INTO VALLEYS BY DELUGE THAT LEFT DESOLATE FIFTY SQUARE MILES

Gleno Lake, Held in Storage By Immense Dike Four Miles Long, 6,000 Feet Above the Sea, Released With Irresistable Force When Retaining Wall Was Swept Away By Torrential Rains—Bodies Tangled Among Debris in Bergamo Valley.

THREE SURVIVORS IN ONE VILLAGE.

BERGAMO, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Six hundred dead, three villages destroyed and fifty square miles made desolate.

This was the toll of the flood from Gleno Lake, when the great dike guarding it collapsed on Saturday, releasing the irresistable force of the water, which bursting forth in mad fury, carried all before it. It swept over the hills and down into the valleys for a distance of fifteen miles to Lake Iseo, which checked the momentum of the vast stream, arresting its course.

Bergamo Valley today is nothing but a barren waste of mud and water—a veritable lake in which it is dangerous to venture, for in some places it is over a man's head. In this soggy mass, the bodies of the victims lie tangled among fallen trees, telegraph poles, buildings and bridges. Here and there portions of broken walls project as mute evidence of the tremendous might with which the waters engulfed the region. The homeless are counted in the thousands, most of whom are mourning for lost relatives, or searching for their bodies. Relief parties from the surrounding sections of Milan and Brescia are on the scene, while all available troops have been mustered to render assistance to the shelterless. The Bishop of Bergamo received a telegraphic donation from the Pope for the purpose of undertaking immediately extensive relief measures.

There is great fear among the survivors of other dams breaking, especially as yesterday was the feast of St. Bibbians, on which, according to popular superstition, if it rains, it will rain for forty days and forty nights.

The three villages almost completely destroyed were Dezzo, Corna and Bueggio. Of the 500 inhabitants of Dezzo, only three survived.

An Artificial Lake.

The disaster threatens to be one of the greatest of its kind, for the vast amount of water let loose upon the countryside. It destroyed hundreds of homes, where families perished without even realizing the tragedy which overwhelmed them. A correspondent of the Associated Press visited the scene. The dike, situated three miles from the village of Dezzo, was an immense structure, four miles long, and 35 yards thick. It served as a dam for the artificial lake, located about 6,000 feet above the sea level, and containing ten million cubic yards of water, the source of which was chiefly the glaciers of Gleno Mountain. This basin measured about four miles by two and cost thirty million lire.

Rain Broke Piers

Apparently the dike yielded through an immense pressure of water at the two ends where the masonry was imbedded in the mountainside. Torrential rains had occurred, and they continue, rendering the disaster more menacing for the homeless and hindering relief work. The cold is intense, and the cloudy, foggy atmosphere prevents a general view of the catastrophe. The entire countryside, where the fury of the elements raged, seemed to have been wiped out by this superhuman force Houses, bridges and trees were toppled over like nine-pins and have floated away or are banked up against the hills.

The immense body of water, carrying along with it mud and debris of all kinds, levelled the villages, joining on its way with the mountain torrents and even excavated the mountainside, and descended swiftly on the plain of Corna, destroying in a few minutes houses and factories and the electric centres.

Bodies Carried Miles

Thus far the dead are estimated at 600 but it has been impossible to ascertain the exact number, for whole families are missing. The neighboring lakes and rivers have been raised fifteen to twenty feet, and on their surface float bodies, some of which travelled many miles from an altitude of 2,000 feet, carried by the awful deluge. A nurse, who lived in Corna village, was rescued from the water two miles from her home, while the entire family with whom she resided perished.

A boy saved himself from the avalanche of water by climbing a tree, which withstood the flood. When the water had passed the boy descended in an exhausted condition and was taken to a nearby city but died soon afterwards.

Like Different Country

A number of workmen, who happened to observe the onrushing of the waters, took refuge in a gallery in the mountain. After the subsidence of the water they came forth and imagined they had emerged from a different exit as they could not recognize the country before them.

Giuseppe Marchi, a sergeant of carabineers in the village of Corna, telling of the bursting of the dam, said that about eight o'clock in the morning, he heard an appalling rumbling resembling the explosion of a powder magazine. From a window he was amazed to see that a house which formerly faced the barracks no longer existed. Hardly realizing what was happening, he rushed to save his wife and two daughters. They climbed to the roof of the building and clung to the chimney.

"I though it was another deluge submerging the world," he said.

Town Engulfed

The carabineer and his family remained on the roof for hours watching the seas of water destroying all in their path as far as the eye could discern. Corna was practically buried, only the barracks and church standing. The parish priest, Bernardo Moro saved himself by climbing to the dome of the church. Though injured in the foot he soon organized relief work; he collected bodies taken from the flood and read solemn burial services over them in the little church.

The Royal Engineers Relief Corps has reached the scene and are already beginning the construction of bridges across the flooded valley to aid the villages of Schilpario and Villamaggiore, which are surrounded by water and whose inhabitants are in danger of starving.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

FRUIT CAKES

(Unless otherwise stated, each recipe is intended to be sufficient for four persons.)

While baking the Christmas fruit cake for yourself why not make enough to include in the Christmas box that must be sent to some member of the family away from home? Home-made cake at the holiday season has a strong appeal to persons not at home

Brandy always was considered necessary in fruit cakes to make them keep and ripen Although the brandy had nothing to do with the "keeping" it did aid in the "ripening" There is no substitute that will give the flavor to a fruit cake that the continued dampening with brandy imparted However, strong coffee and grape juice used in fruit cake in place of milk will make a moist, delicious cake that will keep indefinitely

Long slow baking insures good keeping

Fruit cake is made with or without eggs The cake with eggs is of course richer than the one without Old-fashioned pork cake requires neither butter nor eggs, but keeps well and is moist and delicious The more fruit and nuts in the cake the better

Pork Cake

One pound fat salt pork, 2 cups boiling water, 2 cups brown sugar, 1 cup molasses, 1 tablespoon each cloves and nutmeg, 2 tablespoons cinnamon, 1 pound raisins, 1 pound currant, ¼ pound citron, 2 cups nut meats, 4 tablespoons strong cold coffee, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda, 8 cups flour, 1 tablespoon vanilla

Remove rind and any bits of lean meat from salt pork Chop very fine and pour over boiling water Mix well and let stand until lukewarm Stone raisins Clean and dry currants Shred citron Mix fruit with one cup flour, mix baking powder and soda Add fruit and spices to sugar and molasses combined with fat and water Add coffee and vanilla Mix well and stir in flour and nuts Mix thoroughly Be sure the flour is evenly mixed through the whole mixture Turn into a large pan lined with buttered paper and bake in a slow oven two and one-half hours

This is a cheap, delicious cake well worth baking More fruit and nuts can be added if wanted

The ingredients for a fruit cake should be weighed Eggs vary in size, different brands of flour vary in weight per cup and brown sugar is as variable But as comparatively few housekeepers indulge in kitchen scales this rule is changed from pounds to cups

Fruit Cake

Two cups butter, 2 2-3 cups light brown sugar, 9 large eggs, 4 cups pastry flour or 3¼ cups bread flour (both measured after sifting once), ¾ cup strong cold coffee, 2 pounds raisins, 2 pounds currants, ½ pound candied cherries, 1 pound citron, ¾ pound candied orange peel, ¾ pound candied lemon peel, ½ pound or 2 cups blanched and chopped almonds, 2 tablespoons cinnamon, 1 tablespoon cloves, 1 nutmeg, 1½ teaspoons soda, 1 tablespoon vanilla

Cream butter and slowly beat in sugar Separate yolks from whites of eggs and beat yolks until thick and lemon colored and whites until stiff and dry Add to first mixture The raisins should be seeded and chopped, the currants cleaned and dried, the cherries cut in small pieces, the citron sliced thin and shredded and the candied peels cut in tiny pieces before the cake is mixed Mix chopped fruits with one and one-half extra cups of flour Add flour and coffee alternately to first mixture Add prepared fruit and nuts, spices and vanilla Dissolve soda in molasses and add the last thing Mix the cake well after the addition of each ingredient Turn into well oiled and floured deep cake pans, cover with buttered paper and steam three hours and bake one and one-half hours in a slow oven Or the cake is baked four hours in a very slow oven The nutmeg of course is grated before using You will like your fruit cake much better if it is steamed and baked rather than simply baked The cake will be moister and the fruits and spices blended perfectly

The molasses and coffee can be reduced to one-half cup of each and a glass of currant jelly added to the rule. This rule makes three loaves

A square of fruit cake neatly wrapped in oiled paper and then in the sparkling glazed paper that's so attractive, tied with a big red ribbon bow with a sprig of holly, makes a charming gift for anyone Fruit cake is the special Christmas cake quite as full of Christmas spirit as it is of "sugar plums"

Roman Meal? I should say so! I never refuse Roman Meal. Its delicious and keeps me happy, peppy and fit.

HIGH SCHOOL SYSTEM AIDS ALL ATHLETICS

Team Competition For Every Boy and Interscholastic Games Attract Attention.

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 3.— A new order of athletics, providing team competition for every boy, and with less emphasis on winning squads for interscholastic games, is the rule in Central High School here, one of the largest high schools in the world, under Athletic Director E. W. Rau.

Rau's methods, and his system of student classification, have attracted wide attention.

A formula for grouping boys according to their physical prowess, regardless of class room standing, assures equalized competition with a chance for every participant.

The students are classified by this mathematical equation—four times the age, plus half the weight, plus the height, expressed in inches, which gives the index number.

New students are classified and assigned to their proper group, usually eight in number. Each group is in charge of a trained professional coach. In addition to the sports usually found in high schools, Rau has regular teams in boxing, wrestling, tennis, swimming and volleyball. The school has eight regular football teams; 16 basketball squads; 16 track teams0 six baseball teams, and several tennis groups. More than 1,500 boys already are on teams, against less than 100 prior to the inauguration of the present plan. Interclass football this year brought out 245 players.

CANADIAN EXHIBITION REMAINS OPEN IN PARIS

PARIS, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters)—The Canadian exhibition now being held in the Orangerie of the Tuileries Gardens has been so popular that it has been decided to keep the exhibition open until December 9.

The newest three-piece outfits for Palm Beach wear feature capes and coats of figured materials, lined with the same material as the frock.

PREFERENCE ON BRITISH BOATS

Old Country Representative Says American Products Compete With Canadian.

MONTREAL, Dec. 3. — "What I should like to see is a movement for the increase of the British preference as regards footwear to help a fight against American imports which at present compete more seriously with Canadian industry, rather than the baseless talk about the harm of the British preference in the Canadian boot and shoe industry. As a matter of fact it is the trade the Americans get rather than that of the Canadian manufacturers with which the British manufacturers of footwear are competing and just now competing successfully."

This was the view of the Acting British Trade Commissioner, J. R. Adams, expressed here to-day.

He quoted statistics showing a steady relative increase in the British boot and shoe exports to Canaad as compared with those from the U.S. in the last three years.

EXHUME BODY OF PRESUMED SUICIDE.

Basil Burns Found In Ditch In Kentville, N.S., With Bullet in Chest.

KENTVILLE, N. S., Dec. 3.—Crown Prosecutor B. W. Roscoe has ordered exhumation of the body of Basil Burns, of Arlington, near here who was found dead by the roadside three weeks ago with a bullet in his chest, and for whose murder Clarence Connors was arrested yesterday. A coroner's jury brought in a verdict of death by an unknown hand and Chief Detective Kennedy, after visiting the scene announced his belief that it was a suicide. Connors was arrested on a warrant sworn out by the dead man's father. The bullet will be extracted. Connors was remanded to jail until Thursday.

Funeral Furnishers Join Hecklers' Chorus.

LONDON, Dec. 3.— (Canadian Press Cable). One of the latest bodies to hackle candidates for parliament on sectional trade matters are the funeral furnishers. They demand that medical men be compelled to view the body before granting a burial certificate, reduction of transport charges for motor hearses and legislation on several other details regarding funerals.

Do not salt meat except before cooking as salt is apt to make meat turn red.

YOUTHS SHOOT FARMER'S SHEEP

Marmora 'Hunters' Found Easy Victim But Will Have to Make Restitution.

MARMORA, Dec. 3.—Two local youths while out hunting recently evidently not wishing to make the effort of bagging partridge or anything that required a little trouble, chose an easy victim by shooting a sheep. As the owner of the sheep and the local authorities are insisting that the boys make restitution, they perhaps will find it cheaper to hunt animals more ferocious than woolly lambs—rabbits, perhaps, or they might try their luck on field mice.

Signs of Prosperity.

If the indications of prosperity about the little town of Marmora can be taken as an example for the rest of Canada, it looks as if the believers in "The Whisper of Death" are going to have a hard time in supporting their belief.

The Deloro Smelting and Refining Company's plant is going to capacity, and the company is employing one of the largest number of men in its history. The Deloro Chemical Company is also very busy. The local planing mill, if it is any barometer of building operations, shows that much is being done in the building line. The lumbermen, however, are really the busiest men around now. Many small jobbing contracts have been let, while those who are in it on a larger scale announce big programs.

Business men in town all say that business is exceptionally good, but find difficulty in collecting. However, as most of the cheese factories are paying up now, they look forward to better times.

News Briefs.

A meeting of the Board of the Marmora Public Library was held on Thursday evening in Mr. Bleeker's office. The purpose of the meeting was to choose new books to be purchased by the Library.

POLICE INVESTIGATING MYSTERIOUS SHOOTING GALWAY WILDERNESS

Constables Form Theory of Shooting After Minute Investigation on Scene of the Tragedy—Shack is Buried in Lonely Bush and Rock Strewn Land-Accused's Son Was Guide.

EVIDENCE DESTROYED

Sixty miles into the northern wilderness where not a footmark guided them, Provincial Constables R. F. Davis and H. Storey travelled to investigate the shooting of G. W. MacNeal in Galway township a month ago, for which John Schell stands indicted on a charge of wilful murder.

The lonely shack where MacNeal was found dead is owned by Schell, and the two men went there on a Saturday to prepare for the hunting season. On Sunday Schell returned to his home, ate a hearty meal, and after being in the house three quarters of an hour told his family, "Poor George died from cramps in the shack," and went to bed.

On Monday, his son George Schell, went to the shack and found it securely locked, with the blood-bathed body of MacNeal lying beside the stove near his bunk. A rifle, said to be Schell's, was found in the cabin with a single empty cartridge and several loaded cartridges.

On examination, Schell stated he was in the shack constantly with MacNeal but heard no shot. He turned the dead man over, he said, but saw no blood or wound.

The men were said to have been good friends, but it was brought out in evidence that liquor may have been in the camp, although conflicting statements were made by different witnesses.

A Trackless Trail

Constables Davis and Storey, accompanied by an Examiner reporter, visited the scene of the shooting on a dull day in pouring rain. Measurements were taken and evidence collected and photographs taken for The Examiner.

The party travelled from Bobcaygeon to Schell's home in the car which took them from Peterboro' but from that point to the hut the road was impassable by auto. George Schell, son of the accused man, offered his wagon and team for the second stage of the journey. The wagon was filled with straw and the party, lying on this and at times clinging desperately to the sides of the wagon, jolted slowly over six miles of rock strewn road.

Reaching slippery rocks the wagon wheels at times slipped aside into marshy ground while the horses clung to the precarious foothold in an attempt to save themselves being dragged into the swamp with the sliding wagon. Up and down rocks steeper than the slope of a roof, over corduroy roads that jolted the passengers almost out of the wagon box and at times over ground littered with loose rocks where the horses carefully picked every step, the trail led.

Stopped at last by an impassable creek with steep banks, the horses and wagon were left at a hunting shack while the party proceeded afoot.

At this shack the rude hospitality of the woods was extended, the mid-day meal consisting of salt pork, potatoes and green tea, cooked by Constable Storey in the less leaky part of a far rom wate rproof cabin.

A Hunting Shack

In this shack, to the like of which only the hardy ones penetrate, were gathered several sportsmen, bemoaning the downpour of rain which destroyed their hunt. Rude bunks ranged along the walls in two tiers offered sleeping accommodation for a dozen men; a rough board table and benches took up one side of the building while the centre of the floor was given over to a massive stove. On the wall near the stove were innumerable nails for the drying of wet clothes. A tarpaulin stretched across the building closed off the habitable portion from the water-logged unused part.

Culinary arrangements were simple pork and potatoes forming the staple articles of diet. Milk was unknown and only brown sugar was available. The broom consisted of twigs fastened on a pole.

Picturesque Guide

Led by George Schell the party left the shelter of the camp about one o'clock, on the last stage of the journey, travelling in single file through dense bush or over barren rock on a trail that gave no indication of having every before been travelled by a human being.

The guide, a hand-axe slung by straps from his shoulders, showed no hesitation in finding his way and only one one occasion did he blaze a guiding mark for the return trip. With lithe swinging strides he led the party swiftly over stepping stones in creeks, up or down steep slippery banks, across logs, through dry creek beds and over miniature mountains.

Burdened with guns, equipment and camera the party had difficulty in pressing through the dense undergrowth in his wake.

A swamp was crossed where the soft ground grasped the ankles and the coarse grass reached above the waist. A creek was traversed on slippery moss-covered logs. Deer tracks were seen and many partridge started from their hiding places.

End of the Trail

At 3 o'clock the party came out on a ridge and saw below it the rough log shack where the tragedy had been enacted—the tragedy wherein two men were alone and one of them was left dead in the wildest environment imaginable. In all that wilderness those rough walls alone knew the secret of the tragedy and the son of the accused man had led the representatives of the law straight as an arrow to it to learn whether his father was innocent or guilty of the heinous crime charged against him.

The shack sits on low ground, surrounded and shaded by a dense forest. Its interior is low-roofed, crowded and dark, the only light being admitted by a small dirty window. On the left of the door is the stove and between this and the bunk attached to the left wall were the bloodstains where MacNeal had lain. Schell's bunk was opposite the door.

The police theory of the shooting is the shot was fired from Schell's bunk, striking MacNeal as he was bending over his bunk and passing through the end of the shack near the roof.

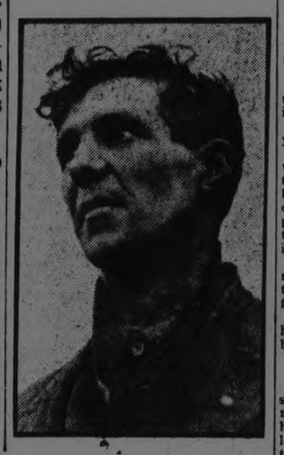
Every corner of the shack was minute ly examined and anything that would influence the case either for or against the prisoner was noted.

It has been the intention of the officers to cut out the board through which the bullet passed and enter it as evidence, but on examination it wa found that it had been disfigured by cutting, evidently with a penknife, and was useless.

The return to Schell's home was accomplished with all the difficulties that attended the outward trip and the added handicap of darkness. So rough was the trail that several of The Examiner camera plates were broken, despite a packing of blankets and straw that protected them.

So dark was the night that the horses could not be seen from the wagon, and it was just such a night on which the tragedy was enacted in the lonely shack miles from the nearest habitation, when MacNeal died.

GEORGE SCHELL



Son of John Schell, who awaits trial on a charge of wilful murder. George Schell guided the police officers to the scene of the crime.

ROBERT F. DAVIS

Privincial Constable R. F. Davis was born in Scotland. He served overseas in Egypt and Syria, after the Armistice having charge of all the police in the Beyrut area.

He returned to Scotland, but later came to Canada, where the joined the Ontario Provincial Police, serving at Toronto, Belleville, and since 15th October in Peterborough.

"It is true that I have never had a romance."

"You married—and very young."

"Oh, what is young love! The urge of the race. A blaze that ends in babies or ashes. Romance!"

"You have—other men have loved you."

"European men—the type my lot was cast with—may be romantic in their extreme youth—I have never been attracted by men in that stage of development, so I may only suppose—but when a man has learned to adjust passion to technique there is not much romance left in him."

"Are you waiting for your romance, then? Have you come to this more primitive civilization to find it?"

She raised her head and looked him full in the eyes. "No, I did not believe in the possibility then."

"May I have a high-ball?"

"Certainly."

He took his drink on the other side of the room. It was several minutes before he returned to the hearth. Then he asked without looking at her: "How do you expect to find romance if you shut yourself up?"

"I wanted nothing less. As little as I wanted it to be known that I was here at all."

"That damnable mystery! Who are you?"

"Nothing that you have imagined. It is far stranger—I fancy it would cure you."

"Cure me?"

"Yes. Do you deny that you love me?"

"No, by God! I don't! But you take a devilish advantage. You must know that I had meant to keep my head. Of course, you are playing with me—with your cursed technique! . . . Unless . . . ." He reached her in a stride and stood over her. "Is it possible—do you—you——"

She pushed back her chair, and stood behind it. Her cheeks were very pink, her eyes startled, but very soft. "I do not admit that yet—I have been too astounded—I went away to think by myself—where I was sure not to see you—but—my mind seemed to revolve in circles. I don't know! I don't know!"

"You do know! You are not the woman to mistake a passing interest for the real thing."

"Oh, does a woman ever—I never wanted to be as young as that again. I should have believed it impossible if I had given the matter a thought—It is so long! I had forgotten what love was like. There was nothing I had buried as deep. And there are reasons—reasons!"

"I only follow you vaguely. But I think I understand—worse luck! I've hated you more than once. You must have known that. I believe you are deliberately leading me on to make a fool of myself."

"I am not! Oh, I am not!"

"Do you love me?"

"I—I want to be sure. I have dreamed . . . . I—I have leisure, you see. This old house shuts out the world—Europe—the past. The war might have cut my life in two. If it had not been for that—that long selfless interval . . . I'd like you to go now."

"Will you marry me?"

"It may be. I can't tell. Not yet. Are you content to wait?"

"I am not! But I've no intention of taking you by force, although I don't feel particularly civilized at the present moment. But I'll win you and have you if you love me. Make no doubt of that. You may have ten thousand strange reasons—they count for nothing with me. And I intend to see you every day. I'll call you up in the morning. Now I go, and as quickly as I can get out."

XX.

He plunged down the steps into a snowstorm. Even during his precipitate retreat he had realized the advisability of telephoning for a taxi, but had been incapable of the anti-climax. He pulled his hat over his eyes, turned up the collar of his coat, and made his way hastily toward Park avenue. There was not a cab in sight. Nor was there a rumble in the tunnel; no doubt the cars were snow-bound. He hesitated only for a moment; it would hardly take him longer to walk to his hotel than to the Grand Central Station, but he crossed over to Madison avenue at once, for it was bitter walking and there was a bare chance of picking up a cab returning from one of the hotels.

But the narrow street between its high dark walls looked like a deserted mountain pass rapidly filling with snow. The tall street lamps shed a sad and ghostly beam. They might have been the hooded torches of cave dwellers sheltering from enemies and the storm in thos perpendicular fastnesses. Far down, a red sphere glowed dimly, exalting the illusion. He almost fancied he could see the out-posts of primeval forests bending over the canyon and wondered why the "Poet of Manhattan" had never immortalized a scene at once so sinister and so lovely.

And no stillness of a high mountain solitude had ever been more intense. Not even a muffled roar from trains on the distant "L's." Clavering wondered if he really were in New York. The whole evening had been unreal enough. Certainly all that was prosaic and ugly and feverish had been obliterated by what it was no fight of fancy to call white magic. That seething mass of humanity, that so often looked as if rushing higher and thither with no definite purpose, driven merely by the obsession of speed, was as supine in its brief privacy as its dead. In spite of the fever in him he felt curiously uplifted—and glad to be alone. There are moods and solitudes when a man wants no woman, however much he may be wanting one particular woman. . . . But the mood was ephemeral; he had been too close to her a moment before. Moreover, she was still unpossessed. . . . She seemed to take shape slowly in the white whirling snow, as white and imponderable. . . . A Nordic princess drifting northward over her steppes. . . . God! Would he ever get her? . . . If he did not it would be because one of them was qualifying for another incarnation.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS
By Clive Roberts Barton

A HARD RIDDLE

"Can you guess what it is?" asked the Riddle Lady.

This was the next riddle that the Riddle Lady asked the people in Riddle Town.

"Ride a cock-horse to Banbury Cross,
I know of something that beats any horse,
Eyes that glare brightly, a horn on her nose,
Panting and wheezing wherever she goes.

"Never wants fodder and never eats hay,
Yet drinks like an elephant's baby, they say,
Never needs shoeing—wears rubbers instead,
'Fraid as she can be of cold in the head.

"Hasn't a hand, but she has a firm clutch,
So the absence of hands doesn't bother her much.
Neither owns she a foot yet she has a long step,
And she speeds o'er the ground with much spirit and pep.

"This lady's not vain, yet she wears a large hood,
And she carries a fan as all real ladies should,
When it's wet she wears chains, though they're not made of gold,
And puts them on top of her rubbers, I'm told.

"Glides along highways as though she had wings,
Sometimes she hauls peasants, sometimes she rides kings.
I could sing of her praises all day without end,
Her name is Miss Swift ——, my friend."

"That's all there is to it. Can you guess what it is?" asked the Riddle Lady.

"Horns on her nose! She must be a cow," said one.

"Humph!" said another. "A cow's horns are not on her nose. They're on her head. It must be a rhinoceros, if it has a horn on its nose! Is it, Missez Riddle Lady, is it a rhinoceros?"

"No, no!" answered the Riddle Lady. "How could a rhinoceros go so fast? Besides that I said people rode on her and nobody ever, ever, ever could ride on a cross old rhinoceros."

"Well, I'm blest if I know!" said one Riddle Lander after another. "We're all blest if we know. That's the hardest riddle you've asked us yet. Rubbers! Fans! Humph! No, we can't guess."

"Give up?" asked the Riddle Lady.

"Give up!" said the Riddle Landers gloomily.

"Give up!" said Nancy and Nick.

"Why, it's an automobile," said the Riddle Lady.

Nobody got a prize that day.

present steel structure. Mr. Strickland closed by asking the ladies to be present at the nominations.

Mr. Gerard gave a stump speech, closing with a spirited rendering of the Lauder classic, "Stop Your Ticklin', Jock."

J. R. Hill made a witty little speech, which was well received, after which the curtain rose on the one-act sketch, "Harmony Junction," given by Messrs. R. Green, R. Summers, E. Robertshaw and R. L. Mason. Literally the scene had changed, as, instead of the usual back drop, the audience faced a cleverly constructed edifice labelled "Lakefield Station." Roy Green was the combination station agent and chief of police, and wore the symbols of both offices. Bob Summers was the famous tenor, who was stalled by the failures of the train service to keep to its schedule. R. L. Mason was the ebony hued boy at the Lakefield House guarding the baggage of Mr. Summers. E. Robertshaw was the musical hobo who was waiting in vain to catch the train.

The dialogue was snappy and the acting extremely good, and the audience was kept in roars of laughter by the clever hits made, especially when the miniature fire engine dashed on the stage in response to the alarm. The real hit, however, was made in the musical parts as the solos, with their quartette choruses, showed not only talent and practice, but a true appreciation of music.

The musical parts varied from Mr. Summers' solo, which was a ballad full of sentiment, and with a haunting refrain, and Mr. Mason's rendering of "Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground," that plantation classic, to Mr. Robertshaw's clever parody on the old favorite, "Little Brown Jug," which fairly teemed with local hits, which were received with roars of laughter. The sketch was closed with a song especially written for the "At Home," and sung to the tune, "Till We Meet Again."

After the programme had concluded the floor was quickly cleared for dancing, this part of the programme opening with the Grand March, after which dancing, both square and round, engaged both young and old until about 11.30, when a bountiful supper was served by the young men, who were attentive and courteous to all the guests.

After supper dancing was resumed and kept going till the "wee sma' hours." The unanimous cerdict of the guests was that this "At Home" was a most successful and enjoyable affair, and that Mr. Bailey and the employees of the Lakefield plant are ideal hosts and know the sort of entertainment which pleases all ages.

MEETING BANK OF MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—The annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal, held at noon today, was followed by the unveiling in the head office of the bank of a monument to the memory of the 230 members of the staff who fell in the Great War. This is to be followed shortly by the unveiling of another monument, now in the course of erection, at the office of the bank in Winnipeg.

The memorial at the headquarters in Montreal is in the centre of the entrance hall facing the doorway and consists of an impressive figure in white marble symbolizing Victory. The monument in Winnipeg is to be situated outside the portals of the main office and will consist of a bronze figure of a soldier in full military equipment.

The ceremony of unveiling in Montreal was performed by the president, Sir Vincent Meredith, baronet, in the presence of the directors and a large gathering of shareholders, members of the staff and relatives of the fallen. The speeches were brief and to the point.

"I am privileged," said Sir Vincent Meredith, "to unveil this memorial to our gallant men who fell in the Great War.

"We have met here today with mingled feelings of sadness and of pride. Of sadness because 230 of the bravest and best of our staff, those to whom we looked to fill the highest positions in the service, will not return to us. Of pride because they went forward at the call of their King and country to save the British Empire from the ruthless domination of a foreign foe. This beautiful monument will for all time remain a memorial to their valour and self-sacrifice, and their memory to all of us will be a happy and enduring one."

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the general manager, speaking more particularly for the staff, said: "The unveiling of this memorial to our gallant dead in the Great War marks the saddest yet proudest moment in the history of this bank in whose welfare we all take such an intense pride. As I look down this roll of tragic length, many names come back to me of those whom I personally saw starting forth in life as juniors in our service. They grew to manhood and rose to positions of promise and responsibility under my own eye. Then came the call of our mother land in the hour of deadly peril; and answering with a last hand-grasp within these walls, they went forth purposefully, firm of step and erect of head, to defend with their lives the honour of the Empire they loved so well.

"'We shall see their faces no more. In the service of their King and country they endured the sharpness of death, and now sleep their eternal sleep thousands of miles from their native land.'

"I cannot recall such names as Jellett Barker, Geoffrey Sheffield, Archibald Fraser and John Vessey without a lump in my throat. I mention these four only because I knew them from their boyhood. In the words of His Majesty King George, 'Were I to mention all who are deserving of praise there would be no exception for our whole contingent is illustrious.'

"'Their spirits are surely with us here today at this unveiling. Their names are not merely graven on the walls of the atrium of this cherished edifice but will live on woven into the traditions of this bank and into the history of their country."

Sir Vincent Meredith then unveiled the memorial and while the gathering remained in silence as a tribute to the fallen, the great white figure stood out in the subdued light in towering relief against the sombre and lofty columns by which it is surrounded.

THE MONUMENT

When it was first decided to erect a memorial in the head office of the bank, an international competition was instituted, sculptors being invited to submit designs suitable to the perpetuation of the memory of the many men of the bank who made the last great sacrifice in the cause of liberty and civilization. The terms of the competition called for the figure of a soldier typifying all who had fallen. Such a figure, designed for enlargement in bronze, was produced by the winning sculptor, James Earl Fraser, and is the figure which is to be unveiled at Winnipeg. During a visit to the bank, an inspection of the entrance hall, with its majestic columns of dark granite, giving the place a dignity and atmosphere seldom associated with a commercial structure, was an inspiration to the sculptor. In addition to the figure of a soldier in bronze, Mr. Fraser conceived a figure in pure white marble—a figure emblematic not of death, but of Victory. So splendidly appropriate was the design of this figure that the committee unanimously accepted it. It was also decided to erect the soldier figure in bronze in front of the chief branch of the bank in the west at Winnipeg.

The figure of Victory is nine feet in height, sculptured in white Serezza marble, and it stands upon a pedestal of Botticino marble eight feet high, so that the total height is 17 feet. The base of the pedestal is decorated on all four sides with fasces in very low relief, with festoons of laurel hanging between them. On the side facing the entrance to the bank is incised the word "Patria," followed by the wording "To the memory of our men who fell in the Great War." The figure of Victory stands with her arms folded over a sword covered with palms, which with the draperies, the corselet and helmet, are all brought into an impressive unity. The figure gives an impression of steadfast serenity, yet the features are warmed by a touch of human sympathy that in a subtle way conveys the idea of triumph through suffering and sacrifice.

Royal Cortissoz, the art editor of the New York Tribune, who was among those invited to see the statue on its completion, wrote of it in his paper: "To strike the martial note is the easiest way out. But, to interpret the physiognomy of a goddess at the same time triumphant and mournful, sorrowfully victorious, meditating not upon the thrill of battle, but upon the cost of peace—to do this is to move in a finer air. Mr. Fraser has so moved and, as his marble shows, with a very tender instinct. The final thought about a war memorial must be one of character. That is where this Victory leaves a memorable impression. Mr. Fraser has produced a truly great monument, one with a spiritual vitality."

CANADA CEMENT COMPANY'S BALL

Several Hundred Guests at Annual "At Home" in Lakefield — Concert and Dance.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 3. — The second annual "At Home" of the employees of the local plant (No. 7) of the Canada Cement Company was held in the Town Hall on Friday evening and was a very delightful entertainment, and very much enjoyed by about two hundred guests who assembled. The hall was decorated with streamers and flags and presented a festive appearance.

The earlier part of the evening was spent in the enjoyment of a very fine programme, which occupied rather more than an hour. The manager of the plant, Mr. E. W. Bailey, was the chairman, and before beginning the programme, made a few remarks, welcoming the visitors and expressing his appreciation of the pleasant relations existing among the employees during the past year and hoping for a continuance of the same, not only during the period of construction, but also during the time the plant will be operating. The programme is a threefold one, concert, refreshments and dancing, and Mr. Bailey hoped that all three parts would be enjoyed.

The programme opened with a piano duet by two little girls, Phyllis and Janet Charlton. This was followed by a chorus, "Johnny Schmoker," by special request. This chorus made a hit last year, and scored again on Friday evening, the singers responding by singing "Three Old Crows." Those taking part were Messrs. J. Gerard, E. Robertshaw, R. Summers, P. Condon and M. Hampton. The next number was a recitation, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," by Ernest Robertshaw. It was extremely well given and was much appreciated.

Mr. Gerard sang "The Admiral's Broom," and was heartily encored.

Reeve J. C. Strickland addressed the assembly for a few minutes. He congratulated the employees of the Cement Co. on the success of this, their second annual "At Home," and attributed a very great measure of the success to the fact that it was a gathering of old and young together. Touching on municipal politics, Mr. Strickland announced his intention of again standing for the Reeveship. He intended to resign, but owing to the question of the bridge, which is now a strong factor in County Council deliberations, he has reconsidered the matter. The Lakefield bridge has been condemned by three engineers, and the County Council has practically decided to rebuild it next year, and the question as to whether it will be a concrete or a steel bridge is an important one at present. Mr. Strickland favors the concrete bridge, as, though the initial cost is rather greater, it requires no expense for its upkeep, whereas the county has estimated that $500 per year is spent on the

BISHOP OF ALEXANDRIA GAVE AN ADDRESS HERE

Special Service at St. Peter's Cathedral--Mission of the Church.

The Rt. Rev. Felix Couturier, D.D., Bishop of Alexandria, was the special speaker last evening at St. Peter's Cathedral, which was well filled for the occasion. Speaking on "The Mission of the Catholic Church," His Lordship took his text from the 6th chapter of St. Luke, 44th verse: "Every tree is known by its fruit. For men do not gather figs from thorns, nor from a bramble bush do they gather the grape."

The speaker referred to the Catholic Church as being constantly labelled the church of the poor and the ignorant, "and thank God for it. Its members are ignorant, inasmuch as they are not perpetually asking why? about everything. They are those who acknowledge themselves as little children in the sight of the Lord, and who say to God, 'Teach us, for we do not understand.' "

"There are many who say they do not like the mysteries of the Catholic Church. All existence is a mystery. Ask the most learned man to answer the sample question, 'What is life?' and he is unable to give a satisfactory reply. The great supplication of the human race is 'God, that we may understand. God, that we may know Thee.'

"The answer to this supplication from a pitying Father has been given only," said Bishop Couturier, "to the Christian Church. Brahmins, Buddhists, Confucians, members of religions that number in their ranks far more than the total of Christians in the world, claim that God has answered them and sent a prohpet, but it is only the Christian who kneels and adores the Christ as the Son of the living God. The divinity of Jesus Christ is the foundation of Christianity, because it is the answer to the question of common-sense. To Catholics, their faith is a supernatural gift from God.

"We, the poor and the ignorant, have heard the Divine whisper of faith, and we know that the Saviour lives."

Speaking on the oft-reiterated admonition to the child and the man to be good, the speaker declared that the only possible way to achieve goodness, and change the flesh and blood of a man whose very inheritance of predominating traits made him subject to a disposition toward evil, was to partake of the communion in the Blessed Sacrament as instituted by the Catholic Church, not a symbol or remembrance of God, but the answer of God Himself to the call of mon.

The white race, declared the speaker, began their conquest of the world only after they had received Christianity. Ten thousand years ago, Moses, who wrote the Pentateuch, may have stood at the foot of the pyramids of Cheops, but the white race had not then conquered the world, nor did the Assyrians, the Greeks or the Romans complete its conquest until the coming of the Christ and the acceptance by the white races of His teachings.

"The Catholic Church includes in the fruits of its centuries of existence the gift to the world of the Bible, preserved by monks in their cloistered cells. Priests and monks were the custodians of learning for 1,500 years."

The Church, however, must remember always the parable of the man who hid his talent away in a napkin, and the tale of the marriage feast refused by the many, to which the poor and ignorant from the streets were finally invited as honored guests.

"The rumblings of danger sound in our ears, race suicide, divorce, all manner of unmentionable things. May we prove worthy of the message sent us and may our everyday lives be answers to it. May we open wide the doors of our hearts, that He may enter in."

The special choir music for the occasion was augmented by a pleasing rendition of two Latin hymns by the boys' choir, led by Rev. Father Finn.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Anniversary Services in Grace Presbyterian Church by O.R. McCrae

MILLBROOK, December 3. — "O God, our help, in ages past," was the appropriate selection with which the choir of Grace Presbyterian church opened the anniversary service on Sunday evening. Rev. Dr. McCrae of Mount Forest, was the minister for the day, and evidently a successful advocate of the axiom: "If you would preach sermons have an important and definite object in your discourses."

Rev. A. H. McConnachie of Centreville, and Rev. J. Wilks, assisted with the service at night. Mrs. H. W Johnston and Miss Ella Elson presided at the organ, relieving each other as the occasion demanded.

In spite of the unfavorable roads and weather the church was well filled by 7 p.m., the service having been withdrawn in the Methodist church that the congregation might join in worship with the Presbyterians on their anniversary occasion.

Besides the opening anthem, the special musical numbers included the quartette "Only in Jesus," by Mrs. H. W. Johnston, Mrs. G. S. Gervan, Messrs. E. C. Hansmen (Port Hope), and G. McDowell; and the anthem, "Thou wilt keep him in Perfect Peace" (unaccompanied.)

The ringing challenge of Joshua as he delivered his first counsels in the presence of all Israel, "Behold, I am going the way of all the Earth, and ye know that not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord your God spake concerning you," was the text chosen. The speaker said he would set up a court of reason as judge, the congregation as jury, and summon witneses to give evidence from a lifetime of personal experience whether it pays to follow Jehovah or not. In their individual hearts, after sifting the evidence submited, the jury would decide upon an honest verdict. In choosing witnesses, the aesthetic, the fanatic, the melancholy kill-joy, the scholar, the teacher, the jurist, would be passed by and the ordinary man of affairs subpoenaed, who would tell the truth sincerely.

Joshua, colonist, soldier, administrator, into whose life sorrow had dug deeply, was the first called, his reply being found in the confident words of the text.

Many to-day are choosing the easy way of compromise and expediency, and Balaam with his matchless but perverted intellect, was a past master in the art of opportunism. Hear him at the end of his career; his soul sickened at the thought of deflection from righteousness and honor, cry as he threw himself upon the spear-point of Israel's enemies: "Let me die the death of the righteousness and let my last end be like his."

Supreme and abiding self love is a giant evil and though apparently those of this mind seem to prosper, note David's testimony: "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree. Yet he passed away, and lo, he was not; yea, I sought him and he could not be found."

Paul, who carried out the Christian programme to the very letter, refutes the contention that such a life is not practical, a statement often heard in this day. Listen to his triumphant song of victory: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished the course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day."

Our own forefathers, after years of hardship and danger as pioneers, and trail rangers, add the joyful testimony: "Not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the Lord spake; all are come to pass, and not one thing hath failed thereof."

And now for the verdict; let each soul decide. Dr. McCrae concluded with an intensely earnest appeal to his hearers to realize the selfish life as a rotten, doomed existence and in full surrender to cry from the heart:

"Thou, O Christ, art all I want,
More than all in Thee I find."

FIGHT OPENS IN WILL CASE OF EDWARD BALL AND PETERBORO HEIRS

Estate Left By Brother of George and Abraham Ball of This City Said to Be $200,000.

WILL CONTESTED.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 3.—Under the bond of $60,000 and with the understanding that all monies and securities are to be deposited with the Chase National Bank of New York City, William Danaher of No. 9 Park Place here, stands today appointed temporary administrator of the estate left by Edward E. Ball, late brother of Abraham and George Ball of No 391 Smith street, Peterborough, Ont., pending the outcome of the fight begun in the Surrogates' Court here by the two Canadian brothers to overthrow the probate of the will left by the deceased.

Mr. Ball, in his now disputed will, named Mr. Danaher, "friend, now agent for my real estate," without bonds, as the executor of the estate and the application for the appointment of temporary administrator was based upon a petition filed by Mr. Danaher.

After reciting in his petition that the deceased, who was a butcher, had died on July 15th last, naming him as the executor of the estate under the now disputed will, but owing to the filing of objections its probate "delay has necessarily occurred in the granting of letters testamentary thereon," Mr. Danaher said:

"That the said decedent died seized of real estate, situated in the County of Kings, State of New York, of which the annual rental is $9,200; that for upwards of one and a half years prior to said decedent's death, deponent acted as his agent in respect to his real property, collected the rents thereof and managed the same under the decedent's supervision.

"That deponent believes that said decedent was possessed of personal property at the time of his death o the value of upwards of $50,000, consisting of two butcher shops, cash on deposit, and jewelery, stocks and bonds, which later possession are in the safe deposit box of said decedent at the Pioneer Safe Deposit Company of Brooklyn, and the contents and furnishings of his residence at No. 170 St. John's Place, Brooklyn, N.Y., and the sum of $6,000, the proceeds of a mortgage held by the decedent, a satisfaction of which decedent executed just prior to his death, and which sum of money is now held by Messrs. Nulkeley & Horton, real estate brokers, of this city.

"That since the death of said decedent, deponent has continued to collect the rents of the said real property, and said rents are held separate apart for the account of the estate of said decedent. That the said two butcher shops operated by the decedent during his lifetime are now being, and since his death have been, operated and conduct3d as going concerns by the persons who were associated with the said decedent in his operations thereof during his lifetime, and that there is at present no one clothed with competent authority to intervene in the operation of the said two butcher shops and protect the interests of the said decedent thereof, and that the average weekly receipts of the said two butcher shops are $2,800, the net amount deponent has been unable to ascertain.

"That in and by the said last will and testament of decedent, his real property at No. 170 St. Johns Place, where he resided alone, and at which residence he died, was, together with its contents and furnishings, devised and bequeathed to Alice J. Hunter, and that the said premises, and its contents and furnishings are now, and have for some time past, since the decedent's death, been occupied and used by the said George B. Ball and Abraham Ball, the contestants in said probate proceedings, and their families.

"That said George Ball, Abraham Ball, John Ball, William Ball and Mary Murty, the heirs at law and next of kin of said decedent, the said Alice J. Hunter, one of the devisees and legatees under the said last will and testament of said decedent, are the only persons who have appeared in the proceeding for the probate of said last will and testament instituted by deponent.

"That it is necessary for the preservation of the estate of said decedent that a temporary administrator thereof be appointed by the Surrogate, and that deponent is competent to serve as such temporary administrator."

In an effort to prevent Mr. Danaher from being appointed, the contestants filed an answer reading as follows:

"George Ball and Abraham Ball, of the next of kin and heirs at law of Edward C. Ball, deceased, each for himself, being duly sworn in opposition to the petition of William J. Danaher for his appointment as temporary administrator of the goods, chattels and credits which were of the said Edward C. Ball, deceased, doth depose and say:

"That Edward C. Ball, their brother, who was a resident of Kings County, died on the 15th day of July, 1923, leaving an alleged last will and testament, dated the 17th day of April, 1923, purporting to dispose of an estate, estimated in the value at the sum of approximately $200,000.

"Deponents are informed and verily believe that immediately prior to his death that the said Edward C. Ball made a visit to Florida in the company of one Alice J. Hunter and returned from Florida in her company to Brooklyn, to his home at No. 170 St. Johns Place, where he died a short time after.

"That the morning after his death the said Alice J. Hunter appeared at the home of decedent presenting the paper, now offered before the Surrogate of Kings County, as the last will and testament of the said Edward C. Ball, at the same time declaring that she had appointed William J. Danaher, the petitioner herein, the executor of the said will.

"That under said alleged last will and testament of said Edward C. Ball, deceased, said Alice J. Hunter benefits by being made the devisee of house and lot at No. 170 St. Johns Place, Brooklyn, New York City, valued at approximately $15,000.

"That said alleged will purports to give her in addition the contents and furnishings of said house, all of the jewelery owned by said Edward C. Ball at the time of his death, all monies on deposit in banks, all cash not on deposit in banks, and all United States bonds and other bonds, the property of said Edward C. Ball at the time of his death, which have no description except as in language.

"That said alleged will appears on its face to have been executed in St. Augustine, Fla.

"That said decedent, Edward C. Ball, at the time of his death, was of the age of 75 years.

"That depouents, at the request of their brothers, John Ball and William Ball, and their sister, Mary A. Murty, residents respectively of the cities of Buffalo and Rochester, and now because of business and family obligations, are unable to be present in the County of Kings and, on their own behalf, have filed objections to the probate of said alleged last will and testament of Edward C. Ball in conformity with the requirements of law.

"That at the time of the alleged will signed thereof said Edward C. Ball was of unsound mind and incapable of making disposition of his property.

"That the execution thereof, if the same was ever executed, by said Edward C. Ball, was secured by fraud and undue influence, and that the desires and purposes of others were substituted for those of said Edward C. Ball.

"That the said Edward C. Ball, at the time of the making and signing of said paper, was without testamentary capacity.

"Deponents aver that their brothers and sister, aforesaid, have requested them to oppose the naming of said William J. Danaher as temporary administrator, as petitioned by him herein, and they urge the following reasons:

"That the said William J. Danaher, the petitioner herein, and the said Alice J. Hunter are friends and acquaintances of long standing and petitioners have reasons to believe that their interests are in a measure identical.

"That the interests of deponents in the administration of the estate of said Edward C. Ball, deceased, are conflicting.

"That the said William J. Danaher has unsettled transactions with the estate of said Edward C. Ball, and that the said Alice J. Hunter is the largest beneficiary under said alleged will, although the interests of deponents and their brothers and sister are not small.

"That deponents do not oppose the appointment of a temporary administrator of the estate of Edward C. Ball, deceased, for they believe that a proper preservation of the estate of the said decedent would require such appointment, but they most strenuously object to the appointment of petitioner under the circumstances of this particular case and respectively urge that the Surrogate appoint Mr. Frank V. Kelly, Public Administrator of Kings County, or some other disinterested person and deponents ask for such other and further relief in the premises as may be just."

Under the law, section 2678, "a temporary administrator must, within 10 days after any money belonging to the estate comes into his hands, deposit it with a bank, or in a domestic incorporated trust company designated by the Surrogate, and a person so designated must file first in the Surrogates' office a bond to the Surrogate, in a penalty fixed by him, executed by the depositary and two sureties, and conditioned to render a money received by him, upon the direction of any court of competent jurisdiction."

By section 2679, "if a temporary administrator neglects to make a deposit, within the time therein limited, the Surrogate must, upon the application of a creditor or person interested in the estate, accompanied with satisfactory proof of the neglect, make an order, directing him to do so forthwith, or show cause why a warrant of attachment should not issue against him."

By section 2680, "money deposited by a temporary administrator cannot be withdrawn, except upon the order of the Surrogate, a certified copy of which must be presented to the depositary. Such an order may be made upon two days' notice of the application therefor, given to al parties to the special proceeding, in which the temporary administrator was appointed, who appeared therein, but not otherwise."

By section 2671, "a temporary administrator has authority to take into his possession personal property; to secure and preserve it; and to collect choses in action; and, for either of those purposes, he may maintain any action or special proceeding. An action may be maintained against him, by leave of the Surrogate, upon a debt of the decedent. The Surrogate may, by an order, made upon at least ten days' notice to all parties who have appeared in the special proceeding, authorize the temporary administrator to sell, after appraisal, such personal property, specifying it, of the decedent, as it appears to be necessary to sell, for the benefit of the estate; of, if it appears that the safety of the estate requires the notice to be shortened, the Surrogate shorten the notice to not less than two days. The Surrogate may, also, by notice, authorize him to, pay funeral expenses, or any expense of the administration of his trust, or stenographer's or referee's fees on contest of a will or administration; and he may also direct the payment of a legacy or other pecuniary provision under a will or a distributive or just proportionate part thereof, as though he were an executor or administrator."

In his now disputed will, Mr. Ball, who had one butcher shop at No. 161 Fifth Avenue here, and another at No. 558 Fifth Avenue, also in this city, directed his net estate to be divided as follows:

Alice J. Hunter, residing at No. 430 Sixth Avenue here, the premises at No. 170 St. Johns Place, with all contents therein, all of his wearing apparel, jewelery, money on hand and in banks, Liberty loan and other bonds and all of his securities.

Annie Flanagan, housekeeper, of No. 170 St. Johns Place, $10,000.

John Koenig, Sr., John Koenig, Jr., both of No. 308 Twelfth street here, and Jacob Koenig of No. 128 St. Marks Place here, described in the document as his business partners, each $5,000.

Rose Carroll of No. 398 Butler Street, Marcella O'Hara of No. 263 Fifteenth street, and Theresa A. Keenan of No. 652 Forty-ninth street, referred to in the document as cashiers at the decedent's businesses, each $2,000.

What then remains, if anything, to be divide equally between the decedent's sister, Mary A. Murty of No. 553 Walden Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y., and his four brothers, William Ball of No. 276 Ravine Avenue, Rochester, N. Y., John Ball of No. 85 St. Johns Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y., and George and Abraham Ball.

Trial by jury of the issues raised by them are demanded by the contestants.

WELSH COAL IS FOR SALE HERE

First Shipment of the Welsh Anthracite Arrives in Peterborough—Splendid Burning Qualities.

Welsh coal has made its debut in Peterboro, through the efforts of McCarthy and Johnston, Hunter Street East, and in tests already made is said to have demonstrated its superiority to Pennsylvania anthracite and other brands of coal hitherto received here.

Only one car has been received, and it is the only car of Welsh coal that will arrive this year.

McCarthy and Johnston have brought this car to Peterboro as a test, and will distribute it in ton and half-ton lots for that purpose. In their own tests it has shown its superiority, and the users are enthusiastic in its praise.

The coal, it is claimed, will burn better than either anthracite or Alberta coal, one ton of the Welsh product being equal to a ton and a half of the others.

One man in the city who used this coal in England rushed in his order immediately on learning of its arrival, and paid high tribute to its burning and lasting qualities. The coal burns on the same system as American anthracite, has no smoke or gas, and the blaze consumes the gas with a maximum of heat. It is freer burning than Pennsylvania anthracite and gives a more intense heat. The ash content is very small.

Welsh coal is 88 to 90 per cent. carbon, 3 to 5 per cent. ash, 6 to 8 per cent. volatile, and contains 15,000 British thermal units.

The object in distributing this car in small lots is to ascertain whether its quality commends itself sufficiently to the people of Peterboro to warrant McCarthy and Johnston bringing in a cargo next spring. It is claimed that considering the high heating value in relation to the price the Welsh anthracite is far ahead of other kinds of coal. It costs about $1.50 more than line coal and $2 less than jobbers' coal in Peterboro.

One of the objections raised to Welsh coal is the disparity in size, complained of by those who are accustomed to the exact sizes of American anthracite sent out. It is claimed for the Welsh coal, however, that the slack burns as satisfactorily as the lump, and the large lumps may be broken easily after they become heated.

A test fire is being kept burning continuously in McCarthy and Johnston's office, and the proprietors profess themselves as forever converted from allegiance to American anthracite.

HER CHILDREN HAD WHOOPING COUGH

This is one of the most dangerous diseases of children. It starts with fever and cough. The cough is at first short and sharp, but gradually increases in severity and occurs in sudden spasms, vomiting follows, and sometimes there is nose bleed; the child turns livid in the face, the eyes appear as if they would burst from their sockets, and suffocation seems emminent till relief is brought on by the "whoop."

Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phelgm and in this way ease the racking cough, and in a short time make is disappear.

Mrs. L. Ambrose, Sarnia, Ont., writes:—"My little ones were both sick with whooping cough. I read where Dr. Wood 's Norway Pine Syrup was good, and I only used two bottles and they were better. I had chronic bronchitis for three years and tried everything until, finally, I got 'Dr Wood's'. I would not be without this remedy."

Price 35c. a bottle; large family size 60c.; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The British Elections

(By WICKHAM STEED)

(By Wickham Stead, former editor of the London Times, editor Reviews of Reviews. Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act 1923.)

LONDON, Dec. 3—In appearance perhaps in reality this election is a race between Premier Baldwin and Lloyd-George, the rest —Asquith, Ramsay MacDonald, Viscount Grey of Fallodon, the Earl of Birkenhead and Lord Derby, are now here and look like being "Also Rans." Baldwin with his quiet solid jog-trot, has kept pace, with Lloyd George's picturesque gallopings, curvettings and prancings in remarkable fashion and on the whole has gained personally more backing than he had at the outset. Whatever the verdict of the electors upon the wisdom or folly of his dissolution of parliament, Baldwin has made good as the conservative leader.

On the other hand Lloyd George has far outdistanced all his liberal competitors. Asquith and his stately phraseology are scarcely heard amid the rattle of Lloyd George's eloquence. Before Asquith can get from Glasgow to Yorkshire, Lloyd George has gone from London to Scotland, thence to Yorkshire, Lancashire, North Wales, back to London in to east Anglia, back again to London, on to South Wales and back once more to London for a final rally—a whirlwind tour of the whirligig statesman determined at all costs to knock out the man who knocked him out last year. The true secret of Lloyd George's Ubiquitous activities lies probably in a feeling of personal resentment against Baldwin for having led the revolt of the conservative members of the coalition government and thus given an opening for Bonar Law's decisive intervention. Lloyd George is an unforgiving politician. Besides he regards Baldwin as a usurping understrapper, unworthy to sit in the seats of the mighty.

An outraged sense of propriety therefore stimulates the promptings of his own resentment, to make Lloyd George wish to flick Baldwin away as an impertinent pebble from his path.

Baldwin doubtless understands this aspect of the fight. He understands also that his biggest asset is the widespread distrust of Lloyd George and the feeling that, whatever his faults, Baldwin is a safer man than the Welsh actor-preacher. He does not wish to be defeated and slain upon the battlefield and be afterwards damned as a futile, and puny upstart by the divinity against whom he impiously revolted on October 19, 1922. Therefore, apart from the mercy of the controversy, he is putting up the stiffest possible fight. Only thus is it possible to explain the lengths to which he has now gone in his letter to Mrs. Bridgman wife of the home secretary, as chairman of the women's unionist organization. The letter shows the fear of inroads at which the opposition is making up on the "Housewife vote" through insistence that protection will increase the cost of living. It denounces as dishonorable all attempts to scare the housewives by talking of dear food and promised that the protection of home industries will cause "the haunting fear of want, penury and hunger to vanish from our midst" moreover, adds the letter, the revenue from the tariff should permit a reduction in the duties on tea and sugar after providing for the needs of agriculture.

For the plain man who started out on his campaign by refusing to make promises or to hold out specious alluring prospects to the electorate. Baldwin thus has gone some distance. Before the polling on Thursday he may go yet further—and still leave his partisan opponents doubtful whether he is striking the final blows in a winning fight or covering his retreat by a smoke screen.

Lloyd George, on the contrary is now predicting a majority of 1,000,000 votes for free trade, though he does not say whether the labor vote is included in this vote. Fact is that neither he nor anybody else has the faintest notion of how the elections really will go, though many have a shrewd idea of how it should go if their assumptions prove accurate. I notice that one experienced prophet now publishes figures similar to those in my original forecast. He gives Labor 55, Liberals 192, and Conservatives 270 seats. However interesting they may be as academic exercises these forecasts do not change the truth that we are all in the dark.

BELMONTS WIN FIRST FINAL FROM DE LAVAL

Free Hitting Softball Game Went Ten Innings, the Club Men Scoring Four in the Extra Frame.

CROWD WAS BIG.

Four runs in the tenth innings gave the Belmonts, club winners, a 14 to 10 victory over the De Laval nine, mercantile champions, in the first game of the finals for the softball championship on Saturday evening.

The second game of the play-offs will be played on Tuesday evening in the Armouries.

The game was the freest hitting affair, and therefore the most exciting game of the whole season. Neither pitcher had much on the ball, and the batters hit them hard and far.

Lowe was the outstanding batter of the evening, with five hits in seven appearances at the triangle's edge one of his long clouts landed against the far wall and went for the bases. Frick also crashed out a long hit that was good for three bags.

The teams rose to great fielding heights, grabbing off almost impossible catches, but they at times also stumped badly and dropped easy flies. Fanning playing right field for the Belmonts, went right against the wall to grab off a drive in the last frame, and Heckman, his mate in the gardens, garnered in everything. The pair in the De Laval outfield were also good.

Crowd Big and Noisy.

The biggest crowd of the season squeezed on to the groaning benches and made more noise than a circus band. Everything in the way of a noise-making device made its appearance at the game on Saturday evening, and added to the din.

The De Laval defence was full of holes in the first stages of the game. Three errors and one hit in the first inning game the Belmonts two runs, and on the same kind of ball they added four more in the second, while the Separator crew went scoreless.

The De Laval awoke in the third, and holding the Belmonts from scoring they chased across two themselves. In the fourth Lowe got a two-base hit with none out, and came across before his team was retired for their seventh run.

The De Laval got three runs in the fourth, and had made it 8 to 7 in their favour by the end of the sixth.

The Belmonts got two hits in the seventh, but the breaks went against them, and they failed to score.

The De Laval went two in the lead when they added another in their half. The Belmonts came across with two runs to tie the score in the eighth, and held the De Laval from getting on first. The supreme effort was made in the nint innings. Lowe walloped out his triple, and was sent home by Heckman's double. But the Belmonts could not increase the one run lead. Frick, first up for the De Laval, tied the score for his team when he slammed out a three-bagger, and came in on an overthrow. Things broke loose in the tenth innings, and when the smoke cleared the Belmonts' count totalled fourteen.

De Laval prospects looked good for at least one run in their half, but Fannings' work nipped their chances and they were retired without a run.

The line-ups.

Belmonts — Batten, ss; Lowe, 1b; Heckman, lf; Stuart, 2b; Holyman, p; Tobbitt, 3b; Haskill, c; Fanning, rf; Thompson, ss.

De Laval — Ward, 3b; Kennedy, lf; Frick, 1b; Perks, p; Fowler, 2b; Marthen, c; Bell, 1b; Bullied, rf; McIntyre, ss.

O.H.A. MEMORIAL WAS APPROVED

Scholarship at University of Toronto For Which Men Who Served Overseas or Their Children Will Be Eligible.

TORONTO, Dec. 3.—The 34th annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association was held here Saturday with 73 delegates in attendance and President W. A. Fry of Dunnville in the chair.

The proposed amendment to the residence clause by Sheriff J. F. Paxton of Whitby, that in the case of a player residing in a rural district or village, that he must play for the O.H.A. club nearest to his residence, having a team entered in the series in which he is eligible, was unanimously carried without discussion. The manner of determining the distance is to be completed by the mileage over a well-established highway, and not as the crow flies.

The proposed amendment of W. H. Sloan of Guelph, that bank clerks be given special privileges to the residence rule, was rejected.

The amendment by W. A. Edger of Bowmanville, that players who reside in one city, town or village and work in another play in the town, city or village that he sleeps, was defeated.

Carried This One.

A proposed motion by Sheriff J. F. Paxton compelling a player who desired to change his club or residence to secure the consent of his old club and if this is not forthcoming the player will have the right to present his case in person to the O. H. A. executive, and in case of a junior he must also have the written consent of his parents or guardian, was carried.

The motion to increase the fees of referees was carried.

Rules of Game.

In the first amendment to the rules of the game Sheriff Paxton proposed that hockey sticks be not more than 3½ inches wide, 54 inches long and 15 inches long at the blade.

No body checking within five feet of the boards.

If a team plays too many men the team shall be penalized by loss of another player for two minutes, and that no goal received while extra players are on he allowed. All these were carried without discussion.

Establish Scholarship.

The motion of W. A. Fry, the President, that the O. H. A. establish a great war memorial in the form of a scholarship at the University of Toronto to which Ontario men who served overseas with the Canadian forces or their sons or daughters will be eligible was unanimously carried.

Capt. J. Sutherland of Kingston, a past President of the association, and Major W. Davidson, a A. A. U. of C. governor, both heartily seconded the motion, and his suggestion that the delegates rise for one minute to pass the motion. This appeared to be the most popular motion that has ever been presented to the O. H. A. delegates.

The honorarian of the Secretary was voted at $1,200 and the Treasurer at $200.

Funds for Olympic.

P. J. Mulqueen, President of the Canadian Olympic Committee, in a short address, stated that hockey provides a fund that enabled the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association to do the work they have done in the hospitals for returned soldiers. He asked the delegates to instruct their executive to vote a large sum to defray the expenses of the Canadian Olympic hockey team.

President W. A. Fry assured Mr. Mulqueen that the O. H. A. would do all possible and a motion was passed that the question be left to the executive.

Executive Elected.

The senior officers having all been elected by acclamation the election on Saturday was to the executive only and resulted as follows: R. W. Wylie Wilkinson, Galt; Frank Hyde, Woodstock; Richard Butler, Lindsay, and Angus Campbell, Cobalt. Two more are to be appointed by President Fry.

The complete list of officers is now as follows:

President—W. A. Fry, Dunnville.

Immediate Past President—A. E. Coneland, Midland.

First Vice-President — William Easson, Stratford.

Second Vice-President—Geo. B. McKay, Kitchener.

A.A.U. of C. Governor—W. W. Davidson, Toronto.

Treasurer—Sheriff J. F. Paxton, Whitby.

Secretary—W. A. Hewitt, Toronto.

Executive Committee—R. Butler, Lindsay; A. D. Campbell, Cobalt; Frank Hyde, Woodstock; R. Wylie Wilkinson, Galt.

REGINA NOT IN QUEEN'S CLASS

The Western Rugby Champions Overwhelmed By Score of 54-0 in Canadian Senior Final.

TORONTO, Dec. 3.—Queen's University of Kingston won the championship of Canada for the second year in succession when they defeated the Regina team, western champions, in hollow fashion by the one-sided score of 54 to 0 at Varsity Stadium Saturday. The Queen's team with weak opposition played at the top of their form and made many brilliant plays, which saved the whole thing from being a fiasco. The Regina team was hopelessly outclassed in every department.

The visitors had no attack except the fair punting of McEachren. Their plays from behind the line were too slow in starting and were smothered almost before the players were in motion. They gained their yards once or twice by line plunging, but generally they were unable to make any headway in that direction. Queen's simply toyed with the westerners, but nevertheless did not slacken up a bit in their play and gave the spectators the worth of their money.

All Were Good.

In a good classy exhibition of football Leadley and Batstone featured as usual, and Quinn also did some clever work, but nearly every player on the Queen's team shone alone at one time or another. The visitors only had one time to score, and that was just before half-time when a blocked kick gave them possession less than 15 yards out from the Queen's line. The visitors first failed to get in by line plunging then when McEachren in trying for a field goal kicked into his own scrimmage and the chance was again lost. For the rest of the game the visitors were on the defensive. To give them credit they battled courageously, but were simply outclassed. The attendance was about 10,000.

Queen's played their best game of the season in Toronto, and they had the edge on their opponents in everything but weight. In the early part of the game Regina looked the stronger on the line, but as the game progressed Queen's took the upper hand and battered the westerners' line for good gains. The tri-colors' wing men made more gains on plunges than in any game this season.

Queen's used their entire squad during the game, but at all times were safe. They tried play after play, and constantly found Regina weak in the centre of the line. The losers' outsides were good, and gave Batstone and Leadley lots of trouble on end runs. Milne was the best for the losers, with Rowand, Otton, Leigh and Brown prominent at the defensive.

Leadley and Batstone were the stars for Queen's, as usual, while Thomas and Walker held Regina's backs in check all day. "Red" McKelvey had his best day of the season, while Campbell was always prominent while on the field.

Queen's had a definite margin in every department, and, like the greater majority of good teams, had the breaks. Regina showed nothing out of the very ordinary, and after the first ten minutes it was merely a matter of the size of the score.

The Regina club hardly played up to form, said W. J. Finlay, editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, but the splendid system and the tricky backfield play of their sturdy opponents probably upset their play considerably. Certainly at times they were bewildered at the style of play and faltered badly on numerous occasions. But Queen's had the class. They gave their backfield stars every protection, tackled like fiends, and took advantage of every opening. Western rugby received a good lesson. Regina had no backfield work, and until the West develops something more than a line their representatives will never be able to make a showing against the East. But the westerners are capable of better football than they showed, and if they take advantage of their experience here, may yet develop a team that will show the East that the West has the goods. But the West is forced to work under severe handicaps. The short season, the lack of public patronage and lack of competition make it very difficult to raise the standard of football to that of the East, which has every advantage to develop strong aggregations.

Sixteen Cycle Teams Start New York Grind.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Gotham's thirty-fifth international six-day bicycle race was to get under way at one minute after midnight when Fred Stone, actor, pulled the trigger of the starting gun, and sixteen teams pedalled off for the monotonous grind at Madison Square Garden.

Leading teams were split by the management and the riders re-arranged in new combinations to enliven interest .Alfred Goullet, the premier rider of the 32 contestants, who had been a member of teams winning twelve six-day grinds, was paired with Orlando Pianni, of Italy. Alfred Grenda, of Tasmania, who won the last race here with Goullet, was paired with Fred Hill of Boston.

TY COBB ON TRAIL OF STAR SECOND SACKER

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—Second Baseman Jimmy Dykes of the Athletics for Outfielder Bob Veach of Detroit, is the very latest rumor from the house of Mack. Ty Cobb would welcome Jimmy Dykes and Connie Mack no doubt could make much use of Bobby Veach in his rather unsettled outfield.

Detroit, if it to get anywhere in the American League race next year, must have an experienced second baseman. Detroit finished second last season. Now Cobb has nothing but first place to shoot at if he is to improve the standing of his club. The mediocre play of the several players who held down that bag for the Tigers last season, will not do for next year if Detroit is to be in the pennant hunt.

Derril Pratt who was secured in the trade with Boston failed to deliver. Cobb when he made the deal figured Pratt had a couple of good years ahead. His play last season proved that he had passed the peak of his game. The Tygers simply must have a seasoned second baseman and no one realizes it better than Cobb.

Jimmy Dykes, who has much natural ability, was rather disappointing to Connie Mack last season. Bob Veach did little more than warm the bench for Detroit. Cobb feels that he can part with Veach and not weaken his club and Mack probably feels the same about Dykes. Yet such a change might work wonders for both clubs and players.

QUEEN'S REACH HOME SUNDAY

Canadian Champions Are Welcomed By Big Kingston Crowd.

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. .—Thousands of students and citizens were at the Canadian National station Sunday afternoon to welcome the victorious Queens team back to the city. The R.C.H.A. Band and the Queens Band were on hand and cars were lined along both sides of the streets leading to the station. The players were escorted from the train to waiting cars and the multitudes cheered them and Mayor Angrove led the procession through the principal streets to the Arena where short speeches were delivered by the president of the Alma Mater and the Mayor. The ceremonies were short and simple in the Arena but the turnout was a big one and showed the pride of the students and citizens in the team. The City Council will make suitable presentations to the team at a later date, the mayor stated.

Were Game Fighters.

Asked on Sunday if he had anything to say about the game, Coach Bill Hughes said: "There is nothing much to say about the game, but you've got to hand it to Regina for being real sports. Despite the big score against them, they went down fighting hard. They are about the hardest and gamest fighters I ever saw in my football career and they are sports to the last drop of the hat."

Zev Best Money Horse in U.S. Turf History.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Zev, Harry F. Sinclair's three-year-old, which defeated Papyrus in the recent international match race, to-day was credited with having won $286,373.57 in his career on the books of the Jockey Club, which are official for turf history in the United States.

The announcement of the Jockey Club settled the controversies of those who had argued about Zev's monetary relation to Isinglass, English thoroughbred, which topped race horses of all time by amassing $291,275.

Of his total, Zev won the greater part last season as a three-year-old when he brought $261,000.34 to his owner, the remainder being his winnings as a two-year-old sprinter.

GOES BACK TO COLLEGE.

A big first year in the majors, and the statement of Manager McGraw of the Giants that he was the best youngster in the National League, has in no way affected the size of the hat worn by Travis Jackson. The young man, as soon as the season was over, hurried back to a southern college to complete his education. He says he isn't always going to be a ball player.

TOUGH JOB FOR SISLER.

One of the first statements credited to Manager George Sisler of the Browns was his intention to start an intensive educational campaign with the players the moment they reported in the spring. A knowledge of the rules and inside baseball were to be considered. Sisler may find that a tougher job than landing the Browns in the first division.

STIFF PENALTY FOR ROWDYISM

N.H.L. Put New Teeth in Legislation Against Deliberate Injury.

OTTAWA, Dec. 3.—The National Hockey League at its annual meeting here Saturday took a step which should go along way towards the elimination of rowdyism from professional hockey. The N. H. L. adopted unanimously the Ottawa Hockey Association's amendment to the match foul rule. Henceforth, instead of being $15 for the first match foul and suspended for one game for a second offence of that character, any player cominitting a match foul is to be fined $50 and becomes automatically suspended and cannot play in any games until his case has been dealt with by President Frank Calder. The match foul rule as amended will henceforth read as follows:

"A match foul shall consist of deliberatly injuring or disabling an opponent. For this offence a player shall be fined $50 and cannot take part in any further games until his case has been dealt with by the president, who may impose such punishment as he deems fitting."

President Frank Calder declared himself strongly in favor of the resolution as introduced by President Ahearn and Secretary Gorman of the Ottawa Hockey Association and made it quite clear that he would show no mercy to those who deliberately violated the rules.

The proposal to make a team play one man short for the balance of the game in the event of a match penalty being imposed was withdrawn by the Ottawa delegates at the request of Charlie Querrie of Toronto, who pointed out that such a drastic change would probably spoil a game and make the public suffer. Hence the rule, under which a substitute goes on after twenty minutes, following a match foul will be continued.

"BUST" IN CITY SERIES.

George Grantham of the Chicago Cubs finished the 1923 season the most talked about young infielder in the National League. Yet in the series with the White Sox his ragged playing cost the Cubs all chances for the city championship of Chicago. He was the "bust" of the series, and his poor showing in that event may have a serious effect on his play of next season unless he pulls a courageous comeback.

TOBIN STAR BUNTER.

Bunting is fast becoming a lost art in the opinion of no less an authority than the famous Hughey Jennings. Johnny Tobin of the St. Louis Browns is one of the few great bunters still doing business. Tobin can bunt down the first or third base line or pull a fast drag with equal cleverness. Tobin's great speed, his ability to bunt and a penchant for crossing up the opposition by hitting one hard, makes him one of the most feared batters in the American League.

FOOTBALL'S BIGGEST THRILLS

BY E. W. COCHRANE
Famous Western Official

It is by no means an easy matter to select from a big list of great days that I have seen in football in 12 years that I have been refereeing in the Missouri Valley, Southwest, Kansas and Missouri conference, the greatest play that I have ever seen, but I believe none surpassed for shrewdness, or as a spectacular piece of gridiron strategy, the one which won for the Kansas Aggies their game with Missouri University in the Missouri Valley conference campaign of 1922.

Kansas took a lead early in the game with a touchdown and Missouri with a drive that was not to be denied, came from behind in the third quarter and chalked up ten points. It looked like a Missouri victory. Then came the fourth quarter. The Aggies have a quarter by the name of Swartz (who is one of the best football strategists in the west. The smart played in baseball is the one who pulls the unexpected, the man who can cross up the opposition.

The Aggies had worked the ball down to the Missouri 30-yard line. They had worked a series of forward passes that were bewildering. It looked as though it was their one method of attack that would win, if any. Missouri secondary defense was back working frantically to break up that aerial attack.

Swartz did the passing with deadly accuracy. He dropped back to make another pass. The Missouri defense ran back to break it up. Swartz grabbed the ball and twenty yards to one side all the time making motions as though to pass the ball and then suddenly started off on a wide end run. The Missouri team stood flat-footed for an instant but just long enough to let the Aggie quarter get under way. He was the distance and the Aggies won one of the most important battles in the conference championship race by 14 to 10.

OSHAWA PLANS WAR MEMORIAL

Committee Appointed to Consider Question of Funds — Building Permits Two Millions.

OSHAWA, December 3.— The public meeting to discuss a War Memorial for the town of Oshawa held in the City Hall, Friday, presided over by Mayor W. J. J. Trick, Mrs. F. W. Cowan, Major Frank Chappel, Chas. J. Wilcox, H. E. Tylor, A. E. Lovell, Geo. W McLaughlin, T. B. Mitchell and J. B. CLARA BUTT SINGS TO HEINTZMAN PIANO

No better endorsation of the premier mechanism and superior tone of Heintzman & Co's pianos can be found than in the fact that Clara Butt sings exclusively to the accompaniment of a Heintzman & Co. Baby Grand while on her Canadian tour. This eminent vocalist is a world famed contralto, and those who hear her in the local opera house to-morrow night will readily appreciate that the piano furnished by Heintzman Hall for her use here is of a quality in keeping with the enviable height to which Clara Butt has attained in the musical world.—(Adv.)

TRAVELLERS FORM A LOCAL COUNCIL

United Commercial Travellers of America Formed Branch With Over 30 Members.

On Saturday afternoon the United Commercial Travellers of America instituted a local Council here in Peterborough and got off to a fine start with over 30 members.

Peterborough Council No. 653, as it is known, used considerable discretion in the selection of its officers for the balance of its year, which ends March 31st, 1924. The officers elected according to rank are: Senior Counselor, J. K. Hughes; Junior Counselor, S. Bridge; Past Counselor, W. M. Borbridge; Secretary-Treas., Jas .H. MacDonald; Conductor, Walter W. Head; Page, Max. M. Kerneghan; Sentinel, W .B. Miller, and a very strong Executive Committee, composed of Brothers E. M. Wall, Isaac Williams, Clayton Chowen and T. W. Quinn. Brother J. D. Lee was appointed as Chaplain by the new Senior Counselor.

Under the direction of Supreme Auditor Chas. A. Hebbard, of Columbus, Ohio, Gordon Bennett, Junior Counselor of Toronto Council, No. 617 and Fred C. Oldham, Secretary of Toronto, these officers were installed and obligated and the degrees of the Order were exemplified by these installing officers, Bros. Chas. J. Ray being the candidate.

Under the supervision of this strong slate of officers, the success of Peterborough Council is assured and with the large number of Commercial travellers in Peterborough who are eligible for membership, there is no reason why this should not develop to be one of the finest, if not the finest Council, in Eastern Canada.

Dr. H .M. Yelland was selected for Council Surgeon.

RECOVER BODIES FROM THE RUINS

BERGAMO, Italy, Dec. 3.—(Canadian Press.) — One hundred and thirty-seven bodies had been recovered up to last midnight from Bergamo Valley country, six hundred of whose inhabitants are believed to have been drowned when Great lake dike impounding waters of Gleno Lake collapsed last Saturday.

Troops and civilian rescue parties are endeavoring to give aid and comfort to thousands who have been made homeless by disaster.

Hundreds of homes, including entire villages of Dezzo, Corna and Bueggio were wiped out by the flood, the course of which was stopped fifteen miles away.

The countryside in the vicinity of Darfo has become a vast lake. Torretnial rains of last week made the pressure against Gleno Lake dike greater than the four mile wall could withstand and although the masonry was thirty-five yards thick, the dike went out and the water thundered down the valley, sweeping all before it.

SCHEME IS HEADING FOR THE ROCKS

PARIS, Dec. 3.—The indecision of the United States regarding its participation in the reparations commission's last fact—finding. Scheme appeared to-day to have imperilled the project. The French want to go ahead with the appointment of committees of experts, who are to find out what Germany can pay.

The British are holding back, insisting that such investigation will came to nought, if the United States won't take part.

"We must now cease to turn our eyes to America for any practical gesture of solidarity and friendship," says Lintransigeant, "and count only on ourselves."

Members of the Reparations Commission will meet early this week to discuss what is to be done.

VESUVIUS STILL ALARMS PEOPLE

Scientists However Say There is No Danger—Mountain Side Quivers and Flames Light Sky

NAPLES, December 3. (United Press.) — The activity of Mount Vesuvius continues to alarm the population although the scientists say there is no danger .

The famous volcano is belching vast clouds of black smoke and spouting fiery stones which fall within a radius of 100 yards around the crumpeled crater.

The slopes of the mountain quiver occasionally with slight earthquake shocks. At night the fires from the cone light the sky, but according to scientific men it means nothing, and the phenomena may be expected to end soon.

REFUSES TO RAISE SUNKEN SUB-CHASER

TORONTO, December 3 (Canadian Press). — Captain E. Rohde, of the submarine chaser Ella E. Hitner, now lying submerged in Toronto Bay following the fire and explosion on Saturday, states that he will not allow the local police to raise the boat to investigate its cargo.

According to Captain Rohde, the boat put into Toronto for gasoline, and was on its way from Philadelphia to Detroit, where the craft is owned.

This statement conflicts with that of Customs Officer Horn, who declared that the boat reported on 27th November for repairs, and had clearance papers in from Detroit to Toronto.

Captain Rohde escaped from the burning sub chaser on Saturday afternoon by jumping into the bay.

At that time he refused to give any information regarding the boat's cargo, but Ralph Rock, engineer, stated to the local newspaper men that 1,200 gallons of gasoline were being carried.

KNIGHT OF ROAD BURIED BY IRON

SUDBURY, Dec 3. — (Canadian Press).—A broken truck on a car of pig iron resulted in the derailment of from eighteen to twenty freight cars on the C.P.R. near Larchwood, last night. Victor Chevalier, knight of the road, was getting a ride on top of the pig iron and it piled up on top of him, with the result that he suffered a broken leg and is now in Sudbury hospital. Most of the derailed cars were loaded with flour. Six cars were badly smashed up but the contents will be saved. Toronto trains, numbers three and four were considerably delayed by the accident

WINNIPEG SUFFERS A HEAVY FIRE LOSS

AT THE ROYAL.

18,000 PEOPLE IN GREAT GRIFFITH FILM

"The Birth of a Nation" Covers Essential Details of Civil War History

D. W. Griffith's master production, "The Birth of a Nation," a United Artists release, will be the attraction at the Royal Theatre, commencing an engagement of three days today.

It will be brought here in exact reproduction of the greatest attraction which in New York recently set a record by playing to more people in two weeks time than had ever before gathered in a playhouse. This was the massive Capitol Theatre where over 150,000 persons witnessed the spectacle in a fortnight.

The merest statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlatives because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its developments sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power.

It covers the essential details of American history ranging through three centuries. Actual battles are shown with tens of thousands of soldiers in the conflict. 18,000 people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighborhood of $500,000. Five hundred costumers and seamstresses worked for three months to make the costumes worn by the people. Ten thousand yards of cloth were worked into the costumes worn by the women until 25,000 yards of white muslin were used up in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klansmen.

The narrative is filled with tears and smiles. A brilliant cast leads animation to the story. The list of present stars and film favorites include such well known screen artists as: Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, George Seigmann, Walter Long and Elmer Clifton.

"IMPORTANT NOTICE"

Owing to the length of the D. W. Griffith production "The Birth of a Nation" patrons are requested to be seated at 2.30 and 8 sharp.

AT THE CAPITOL.

AGONISING TORTURE PICTURED IN "THE FIGHTING BLADE" AT CAPPITOL BLADE" AT CAPITOL, NOW SHOWING.

Mediaeval history chronicles many of the most excrutiating tortures the world has ever known. One of the most agonising of these ic pictured in one of the sequences of John S. Robertson's production, "The Fighting Blade," a First National picture in which Richard Barthelmess is starred and which is now being presented at the Capitol Theatre.

Richard Barthelmess is victim of this torture. His role in the picture is that of Karl Van Kerstenbroock, a Flemish soldier of fortune ,whose fame as a duellist precedes him in England, whither he goes to avenge the death of his sister. He vanquishes his foe, and friends of the latter, members of the Cavalier Party, plot his death. He joins Oliver Cromwell's Party, the Roundheads, who are determined upon the overthrow of Charles I., and thus becomes the enemy of all Cavaliers.

Falling into the hands of some of these, he is manacled with huge heavy wristbands, and wedges are driven with hammer blows between his wrists and these manacles—the noble gentlemen performing this task with great glee. And the youth's suffering is so realistically portrayed as to make the spectator shudder . It is their purpose to give him two days in which to repent, two agonising days, then to execute him. What happens asho etaoin shr purpose, and how, far from breaking the youth's spirit, this torture makes him the scourge of the Royalist Party, is depicted on the screen more forcibly than it can be described.

Opposite Barthelmess in this exciting historical romance is Dorothy Mackail. Others in the cast are Frederick Burton, Morgan Wallace, Lee Baker, Bradley Barker, Stuart Sage, and Allyn King.

AT THE GRAND.

TERPSICHORE
December 6-7-8.

The partisms of classical music and dancing will have a splendid opportunity to see L. A. Terpsichore, the famous dancer from the Imperial Opera Petrograd and the Follies Bergere, Paris. Terpsichore's artistic principle is that dancing just like the other art should grapple with the question of interpreting human feelings truthfully. She stands up against those literary men who pretend that dancing is merely a sensuous exhibition with out a plot and proves by her dramatic dancing scenes to what degree of perfection this art can be developed. Her creations present powerful human emotions, interesting episodes, of human interest. Everybody will admire her gracefulness and the stage accessories that go to form an adequate background to her wonderful performance.

AT THE REGENT.

CELEBRATED ACTOR OF "SUCCESS" DEPLORES LACK OF SPIRIT.

A plea for the old fashioned respect and reverence for the stage and its people was recently made by Brandon Tynan, the celebrated stage actor, who appears in "Success" at the Regent Theatre. The photoplay is a film version of the famous stage play in which Mr. Tynan scored an emphatic hit in several of the leading cities of the country.

"Something has gone out of the theatre," said Mr. Tynan in a recent interview; "it is the spirit, the soul of it, I guess.

"People, somehow, have lost interest in personalities of the stage. Not many years ago when people visited a playhouse they knew the careers of the actors and the actresses whom they saw. They compared their present performances with others which they had witnessed; they were willing to enter into discussions about their favorites and were always ready to defend them.

"To-day when an audience leaves a theatre possibly a dozen persons know anything about the leading actors or actress who has entertained them. As far as the less important members of the cast are concerned they remain totally unknown to the people 'out front.' This is to my mind deplorable. I like to see audiences intimately interested in the personalities behind the footlights."

In "Success" Mr. Tynan appears in the leading role in a powerful story of theatrical life. This photoplay, sponsored by Murray W. Garsson, is a Ralph Ince production released by Metro. The authors are Adeline Leitzbach and Theodore A. Liebler, Jr.

LONGER HOURS TO HELP THE FARMER

Chamber of Commerce to Support Move for Extra Bank Hour.

Support to the request of the Vancouver Board of Trade for the establishment of a Customs Officer at New York was recommended at the meeting of the Executive Council of the Chamber of Commerce held recently. This was considered necessary from the fact that Canadian goods shipped from Eastern Canada via New York and Panama Canal to British Columbia are considered foreign goods on which duty is chargeable on entry to British Columbia.

In support of a resolution adopted by the Peterborough Branch of the U.F.O., a similar one was adopted to be forwarded to the clearing house of banks requesting that consideration be given to changing the closing hours of banks on Saturday from 12 noon to 1 p.m. It is claimed that this change would not only be of benefit to the rural community but also to the banks.

Information was received from the Border Cities Chamber of Commerce that Mr. O. E. Fleming, K.C, President of the Canadian Deep Waterways and Power Association, stated at a meeting in Windsor that the Development of the St. Lawrence River for power and navigation purposes should be undertaken by the respective governments and by private enterprise as reported in some newspapers.

President Jos. J. Duffus welcomed the following business men to the membership of the Chamber of Commerce,—J. E. Adams, wholesale grocer; H. W. Bickell, manager, Grand Opera House; E. T. Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Congress was cynosure of Wall street at the start of the new week. Knowing the constructive policy of President Coolidge, the financial community was confident that his message would contain many bullish points. This belief was expressed in the buoyant tone in the whole market in the early trading. Studebaker, can and other leaders went to new high ground for the current upswing while substantial gains were scored by many specialties.

Stocks in the general list continued to display marked buoyancy in the first hour in the face of some nervous fluctuations in Davison Chemical and a few other thin market specialties. Steel common was restored to its rightful place at the head of the advance, reflecting reports that par was the immediate objective which interests sponsoring its market had in mind.

Judge Gary predicts that business for 1924 will be better than this year. If Chairman Gary's forecast proves correct, there will be many more extra dividends for steel common holders.

Tire stocks have been stronger, reflecting buying on the theory that the bottom has been reached and from now on the tendency will be upward. Tire stocks over the last eight months have suffered as much as the oils.

And has thou sworn on every slight pretense,
Till perjuries are common as bad pence,
While thousands, careless of the damming sin,
Kiss the book's outside, who ne'er look within? —Cowper.
